F. D. R. CREATES HIS OWN GROUP TO PROBE REDS

Link One Member to Communist Front.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—President Roosevelt today created by executive order a five man interdepartmental committee to pass on all complaints against subversive activity by federal employés. One of those named to this committee was once listed as a member of a Communist front organization.

The President's action came on the heels of a flareup of congressional indignation against "crackpot burocracy" and was promptly denounced by congressmen as a White House attempt to whitewash federal employés whose activities may come under the influence of congress.

Yesterday the house voted 163 to 111 to bar further salary payments to William Pickens, colored treasury securities promotion specialist, one of 39 government officials accused of Communist sympathies by Rep. Martin Dies [D., Tex.]. A measure to halt the salaries of all 39 named by Dies failed of passage by only seven votes.

Listed as Red Fronter.

Assistant Secretary of the Interior Oscar Chapman is the committee member who was once identified with a Communist front organization. Rep. Joe Hendricks [D., Fla.], who led yesterday's house assault on subversive elements, said that a list published in 1939 by the Dies committee listed Chapman as a member of the American League for Peace and Democracy."

"Earl Browder, candidate for President on the Communist ticket, was vice president of the American League for Peace and Democracy," Hendricks said. He added that the organization was branded as subversive by Atty. Gen. Biddle in his decision in the Harry Bridges case and also in a memorandum sent to various department heads.

Others appointed to the committee by the President are:

Herbert E. Gaston, assistant secretary of the treasury.

Francis C. Brown, solicitor of the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation.

Rudolph M. Evans, member of the federal reserve board.

John Q. Cannon, legal adviser of the civil service commission.

Coördinating Agency."

The order empowers the committee to act as "an advisory and coördinating agency" in all matters relating to the investigation and disposition of subversive activity on the part of employés of the executive branch, and provides that all complaints shall be referred to the federal bureau of investigation for information or investigation.

Hendricks expressed the belief the committee was created in an effort to forestall congressional action to drive subversive elements out of the government. He asserted congress wants no whitewash and will not be sidetracked by the creation of the committee.

Seen as Whitewash Move.

"I have grave doubts as to any good purpose this committee will serve," he said. "The civil service commission, the federal bureau of investigation, the attorney general's office, and the Dies committee have been making investigations over a period of years. What we need is more action on investigations already made.

"As far as I am concerned, the appointment of the committee will not stop action by the house in getting these people with Communist leanings cleaned out of the government. Congress does not want any whitewash, and from past observations that could easily be what the committee is intended for."

Tells of Slow Action.

Hendricks regarded as most suspicious the fact the executive order directed the committee to operate within the department of justice. He recalled that several years ago the Dies committee gave the department of justice a list of more than 2,000 government employés who were or had been affiliated with what the committee termed un-American organizations.

The department of justice acted against only nine of those named. No action was taken against the others for a wide variety of reasons cited by the department of justice, he said.

CANCEL KENTUCKY DERBY TO LIMIT TRAVEL, U. S. ASKS

A request that the Kentucky Derby, scheduled to be run May 1 at Churchill Downs in Louisville, Ky., be canceled was made yesterday by Joseph B. Eastman, director of the office of defense transportation. The recommendation, Eastman said, was made to curtail travel. Matt Winn, president of Churchill Downs, said the track had hoped to present the 69th running of the event for Louisville residents only.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER ASKS ABOUT WAR BONDS

"Well, the first and dominating motive is the desire to back up the American boys who are fighting for our country. If they jeopardize their lives, why shouldn't we help them in the most effective way we can?"

"The second important motive is the desire of people to invest in sound government bonds. They are nest eggs for the future and they are a powerful means of helping their country in these critical times."

"The possession of war bonds gives the investor a sense of being a full partner in the effort to achieve victory in this war."

"A good many people, of both large and small means, recognize that, in buying war bonds, they are really buying bonds from themselves."

Flynn Found Not Guilty of Girls' Charges

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 6 (AP).—Film Hero Errol Flynn strode happily from a Superior courtroom today, cleared of charges that he had played the villain's rôle in real life.

After deliberating 13 hours, a jury of nine women and three men at 1:19 p. m., Chicago war time, acquitted the actor on three counts of statutory rape which the state charged he had committed against two teen age girls.

The 20 day trial ended on a friendly note. Flynn was overjoyed; Superior Judge Leslie E. Still said he thought a just verdict had been returned; Jerry Giesler, chief of defense counsel, declared "justice has prevailed," and Thomas W. Cochran, the prosecutor, commented only that "it was my duty to prosecute the case."

Only 6 or 7 Ballots.

Mrs. Ruby M. Anderson, the foreman, said the jury took only six or seven ballots, and that the count was 10 to 2 for acquittal all the way until the two holdouts capitulated this morning.

Mrs. Anderson explained that the nine women decided on the basis of medical evidence "that Flynn could not possibly have harmed these girls," and then they won over the two disagreeing members, both men, to their view.

Flynn's calm, which he maintained during the long trial, deserted him at the last moment, when the jury room buzzer indicated a decision.

Flynn, sitting at the counsel table, nervously lighted a cigaret.

Verdict Brings Uproar.

As the verdict of acquittal on the first count was read, there was a burst of sound from the courtroom, and Judge Still gaveled his bench sharply. The other two acquittal verdicts were read amid dead silence.

When the final verdict was read, Flynn rushed over to Mrs. Anderson, shaking hands with her enthusiastically and then with all the jurors.

Flynn said:

"My confidence now has been justified in essential American justice. I really mean it. I didn't become an American citizen for nothing. The fair play I received during the trial proves that. I want to thank all those who stood by me during the trial."

Crowd Wrings Hand.

Flynn was accused of two counts of statutory rape against Peggy La Rue Satterlee, 16 years old, and one against Betty Hansen, 17.

Statutory rape in California involves sexual intercourse with a girl below the age of 18, regardless of consent.

Miss Hansen, in custody of juvenile authorities, will be sent home to her parents in Lincoln, Neb. Miss Satterlee is going home to Applegate, Cal., to resume her studies as a high school sophomore.

At Sacramento, Cal., Miss Satterlee said she thought Flynn's acquittal was "horrible." She added:

"I hate Flynn more than anybody else in all the world."

NEW DEAL, IN A STEW, COUNTS UNHATCHED CHICKS; BUNNIES, TOO

Agriculture Secretary Wickard's proposal for a home grown bunny in every pot and chickens in the garage where the car used to be appeared yesterday a sure cure for Chicago's meat shortage, until it smacked into other government win-the-war programs.

Mathematicians went wild with delight over the plan to use vacant city spaces for growing rabbits and chickens. They figured that if a Chicago citizen bought two rabbits and kept the offspring he could have as many as 53 at the end of one year, 781 in two years, 51,393 in three years. The fourth year the rabbit multiplication would equal federal debt figures.

Bunny and chick producers also whooped with happiness, saying 12 cents for a chick, 18 cents for feed and three months time would make a nice frying chicken. Rabbits cost $3 to $35 a pair; rabbit food costs a cent a day per rabbit; neat profits are promised, with coöperation.

The city health department backed the beat-the-bums-with-bunnies program provided premises were kept neat and penned. The victory garden group, fearing added rabbit damage to crops, consented to tolerate the rabbit faction only if adequate pens were provided.

So the pen question was put up squarely to the war production board. Cold as steel, the WPB said it thought fencing material could be used more fittingly elsewhere.

Mother's Tribute to Son—Giving Money to Soldiers

LONDON, Feb. 6 (AP).—Members of the fighting forces couldn't believe their eyes, but the pound [$4] notes a little old lady thrust into their hands on the streets in Leeds were real, the Sunday dispatch reported. Questioned by police, she said she had distributed $400 in this way to celebrate the 21st birthday of her son, who is a prisoner of war.

U. S. Red Cross Feeds Needy Tripoli Civilians

CAIRO, Egypt, Feb. 6 (AP).—American Red Cross relief supplies now are being distributed to the civilian population of Tripoli. At the request of British occupation authorities, vital foods, including 115,000 pints of milk, have been rushed to needy mothers and children in the captured Libyan capital.

Bomber Sinks; Chicagoan and 4 Float Ashore

ALLIED HDQ. IN NORTH AFRICA, Feb. 6 (AP).—Thru the hot bursts of shells, four American Marauder bombers swooped low off the Tunisian coast, exploding two axis supply ships with direct hits.

Capt. Thomas C. Griffin.

One bomber, with holes from anti-aircraft fire in the cockpit and in the bomb bay, limped 40 miles, and then plunged into the sea. From Capt. Thomas C. Griffin, 26 years old, of 5417 Maryland avenue, Chicago, a veteran of last year's raid on Tokio, came the story of how he and four other crewmen saved themselves from the Martin B-26.

"The ship's anti-aircraft guns hit us with a couple of shells, but we had the satisfaction of seeing it explode almost beneath us, and our planes got the second ship," said the bombardier.

Pilot Is Wounded.

"Lt. Charles R. Meyers J., 24 years old, of Ithan, Pa., our pilot headed back from the vicinity of Bizerte and followed the coast, altho he was wounded in the face, arms, and legs. The co-pilot [name censored] was more seriously wounded.

"A quarter of a mile off Cape Negro we hit the sea. The plane broke in two, but the hatches had been opened so we all got out, altho the rubber raft went down with the wreckage.

"Floating in our Mae Wests [life belts] it took us an hour to reach the rocks, where natives met us and built a fire as the cold night of Jan. 23 began. They tended our two wounded and I found bandages at a little French station in a seaside cave.

Climbs Mountain Trail.

"After waiting the next day for help, I went over the mountain trail with the native guides to an advanced British field medical station. The station had already sent out a stretcher party which carried our co-pilot 15 miles over the mountainsides, while Meyers rode a mule.

"Our sea crash might have been worse if Meyers hadn't got his eyes cleared of blood just before we hit. He had almost been flying blind."

Nazi Metal Drive Destroys French Custom, 'The Zinc'

BERNE, Switzerland, Feb. 6.—In their drive for metal the Germans are destroying an old French tradition—"the zinc." This was the name given to tavern counters made of an alloy of zinc, lead, and tin. These metals are so valuable now that all such counters are to be torn up and melted for German use.

GIVE COMMAND TO EISENHOWER IN NORTH AFRICA

Gen. Brereton Made Middle East Chief.

ALLIED HDQ. IN NORTH AFRICA, Feb. 6 (AP).—Lt. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower was named commander in chief of all allied forces in a new North African theater of operations set up today as a result of the "unconditional surrender" conference at Casablanca.

Lt. Gen. Eisenhower.

Maj. Gen. Brereton.

Altho the Eisenhower announcement made no mention of promotion to full general for him, authorities said forces of Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery's British 8th army entering this theater, which apparently includes Morocco, Algieria, and Tunisia, would come under the American's command.

[Reports last night said the 8th army already was "a good 60 miles inside Tunisia."]

So far as the United States forces were concerned, the reshuffling of command was virtually completed with the appointment in Cairo of Maj. Gen. Lewis Brereton, commander of United States air forces in the middle east, as commander of all American forces in that area.

Tunisia Border Splits Zones.

Brereton succeeds Lt. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, named commander of United States forces in the European theater yesterday to replace Eisenhower.

Separation of the United States North African theater of operations from the European theater is one of the results of the Roosevelt-Churchill conference at Casablanca, observers said.

The North African theater and the Egyptian-Libyan zone of British middle east operations are divided roughly by Tunisia's eastern border.

Observers speculated that under the new setup Gen. Harold Alexander, British middle east commander, would become commander of all ground forces in the allied Mediterranean campaign, with British Air Marshal Arthur Tedder in charge of the air forces and British Adm. Andrew B. Cunningham in charge of all fleet units.

Coördinated Command Needed.

In the event of a simultaneous attack on the Germans at several points in the Mediterranean area, it would be necessary to have one coördinated command.

Military experts predicted Eisenhower's command would be extended over the entire Mediterranean with Alexander, Cunningham, and Tedder as his chief subordinates.

Meanwhile, a coördinated command is necessary to put the "squeeze" on the Nazis in Tunisia as the British 8th and 1st armies and the American forces become one attacking force.

CONFUSION OVER RULE

Confusion over the extent of his new command was the first result last night of Lt. Gen. Eisenhower's appointment as allied commander in North Africa. This stemmed from the lack of any official statement on the exact powers which the American general will wield.

The American war department said designation of the new North African theater would have no effect on the commands of British Generals Bernard Montgomery and Harold Alexander. Montgomery is commander of the British 8th army, which is sweeping into Tunisia. He is under the direction of Alexander, who is British commander in chief of the middle east. However, other Washington, D. C., sources said it was understood Eisenhower would have authority over all forces in the North African area, including ground, air, and sea forces of whatever nationality.

Clarification of U. S. Zones Seen.

London military circles did not interpret Eisenhower's appointment as a final answer to the question of who will direct the American, British, and French forces in the showdown battle for Tunisia.

Some dispatches from Washington

FEAR U. S. CANNOT DELIVER GOODS IT PLEDGED ALLIES

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6 (AP).—Apprehension was expressed in congressional quarters today that government commitments on lend-lease, military needs, and foreign relief are ballooning beyond possibility of fulfillment.

Their fears are based, they said, on beliefs that shipping facilities are inadequate to carry tremendous amounts of food and materials to other nations, and that civilian man power will be insufficient to meet the demands for farm products.

These expressions, from lawmakers who would not be named, came in the wake of closed inquiries into man power by various committees.

Point to Wickard Fears.

Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard testified at one hearing, they pointed out, that lend-lease commitments on some agriculture products are lagging and that he feared a food shortage is imminent.

In addition to the uncertain prospects of feeding civilians adequately, they added, more than 200 million dollars for supplies is being asked by Herbert H. Lehman's foreign relief and rehabilitation committee.

"Assuming that these funds were granted," said one senator, "it seems that under the present conditions it would be almost impossible for a civilian group to buy that amount of supplies and on top of that obtain the ships to get them to their destination."

Another senator said that in the face of demands for more food "it's a 99 to 1 bet that we can't beat last year's crop production."

Worried Over Military Goals.

Another legislator expressed doubt that, with an estimated 11,213,000 in the army and navy by the end of 1943, there would be enough civilians left to produce sufficient food and armament.

Paul V. McNutt, war man power chief, was reported to have told the senate military affairs committee yesterday that for the army and navy to reach this number, the civilian economy must be taxed to the utmost.

Congressmen declared that statements of military officials at hearings led them to believe that they had established maximum goals "without having any basis for reaching such aims."

41 Jap Planes Shot Down in Guinea Battle

ALLIED HDQS. IN AUSTRALIA, Feb. 7 [Sunday]—(AP).—In the biggest single day's air battle to date in the southwest Pacific, 41 Japanese planes were shot down over Wau, New Guinea, yesterday. Not a single allied fighter was lost in the fierce dogfighting, which lasted all day.

The allied fighters were Lightnings, Airacobras, and Kittyhawks; their victims were Zeros and medium bombers.

All-Out Attack.

It was an all-out attempt by the Japs to ruin the Wau airdrome, around which ground fighting has been continuing for several days.

[The airdrome mentioned has been held by Australian troops for a year, ever since they retreated to Wau, a gold mining town in the mountains, 35 miles southwest of Salamaua, when the Japs first occupied Lae and Salamaua. The airdrome is fortified with artillery and anti-aircraft guns.]

The total bag of enemy planes consisted of 21 fighters and three medium bombers shot down by planes and two bombers by anti-aircraft guns; damaged or probably destroyed, 12 fighters and three medium bombers.

American pilots had a stroke of luck at the beginning of the fight in that when the first wave of Jap bombers hit Wau airdrome, some allied transports with Airacobra fighter escorts were just arriving, and thus were in the air and ready to meet the attackers, shooting down 16 Zeros and 3 bombers at les sthan 2,000 feet.

Eighth Daily Rabaul Raid.

Fighting occurred over a wide area around Wau, at altitudes as high as 18,000 and as low as 2,000 feet.

Gen. MacArthur's planes also went back again to Bougainville Island for night raids on airdromes. One of the bombers attacked an 8,000 ton Jap cargo ship approaching Buka and set it afire.

For the eighth straight night, despite bad weather, a bomber returned to Rabaul and carried out a three hour harassing raid.

REDS SHUT OFF ESCAPE BY LAND FROM CAUCASUS

Trap Foe in Drive to Sea of Azov.

LONDON, Feb. 7 [Sunday] (AP).—The Red army stormed forward at the last German defenses of Rostov south of the Don river today. It also sent flying columns southward toward the Kerch straits to cut off the seaward escape of a large Nazi Caucasian army already virtually caught in a Russian noose by a lightning thrust to the Sea of Azov.

A special Russian communique recorded last night by the soviet monitor said the Russian forces reached the Sea of Azov at Yeisk, 65 miles southwest of Rostov, cutting the Germans off in the Caucasus. The regular communique early today said other columns had seized several more district centers 25 to 70 miles below Yeisk.

Adolf Hitler thus was presented with the task of extricating his entire Caucasus force, estimated up to 200,000 men, in his first "Dunkirk." Escape by sea from Novorossisk or across the Kerch straits into the Crimea were the only exits left to the Germans.

Drive Five Miles from Rostov.

At the same time, the communique announced, the Red army surged to within five miles of Rostov from the south by the capture of Bataisk and burst across the Donetz river in a sweep which threatened not only the encirclement of Rostov and the Donetz mining basin but also the approaches to the Crimea.

In the latter thrust they came within 43 miles of Kharkov, industrial capital of the Ukraine, with the capture of Balakleya, on one of the railroads radiating southeast of Kharkov.

North of Kharkov, other soviet columns were thrusting west and southwest of Staraya Oskol toward Belgorod and Kursk and between those two places.

Break Nazi Line Again.

The communique reported capture of Bolshay-Troitskoye, apparently a town appearing on maps as Troitskoye, which is between Kursk and Kharkov. It lies west of the main railroad connecting those two German strongholds, about 40 miles southeast of Kursk and 84 miles northwest of Kharkov.

[Capture of Troitskoye would mean that the German line of 1942 had been broken a second time. The first break on the southern front occurred north of Kursk.]

The surge of Col. Gen. Nikolai Vatutin's army across the Donetz river to the northwest of Rostov, however, appeared to have even greater potentialities than the big successes scored in the Caucasus.

Reds Cut Main Railroad.

Here, the communique announced the capture of Lisichansk, Barvenkovo, and Balakleya.

By capturing Barvenkovo the Russians cut the main railway between Kharkov and Rostov and left only the roundabout Dnepropetrovsk-Stalino line into Rostov for German use.

Vatutin was only 95 miles northeast of Dnepropetrovsk, the site of the former huge Russian hydro-electric power development on the Dnieper river.

In the Caucasus, Yashenka and Kopanskaya, only five and ten miles from the Sea of Azov and 25 to 30 miles south of Yeisk, fell to the Russians, while another column seized Pereyaslavaskaya, 70 miles southeast of Yeisk and only 65 miles directly north of Krasnodar.

The Germans admitted that stiff battles were under way for the "bridgehead of Novorossisk," threatening even that means of escape for the Nazi forces.

The Germans also reported that a Russian force had landed on the Taman peninsula leading to the Kerch straits, but declared all but a remnant of this landing party had been wiped out.

Attempt to Kill Nogues, Morocco Governor, Told

BERNE, Switzerland, Feb. 6 (AP).—A dispatch from Tangiers, Spanish Morocco, to the Geneva Tribune reported tonight that Gov. Gen. Auguste Nogues of French Morocco recently escaped an attempt on his life. The Tribune's correspondent said the attempt occurred after the departure of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill from Casablanca, when a group of local inhabitants opened fire on Nogues' carriage.

HOW JAPS WERE BEATEN IN JUNGLE TOLD BY NODERER

Tribune Writer Relates Experiences on W-G-N.

A graphic eyewitness description of the Americans' desperate jungle fighting which resulted in the capture of Gona and Buna was broadcast to W-G-N radio listeners last night by E. R. Noderer, CHICAGO TRIBUNE war correspondent who has just returned from the southwest Pacific front.

In the second of a series of exclusive radio interviews, the veteran writer told of witnessing the turn of the tide in the tropical fighting when Gen. Douglas MacArthur's troops halted the invaders in New Guinea. During this foot-by-foot conquest of swamp and thicket Noderer was among the front liners dodging the bullets of hidden Jap snipers.

The correspondent expressed the opinion that an attempt to pry the Japs out of the southwest Pacific island by island is not the best way to get to Tokio.

Would Take Years, He Says.

"It would take a tremendous number of troops and more years than I like to think about," he said. "This doesn't apply to vital islands like Guadalcanal, which is primarily a defensive position to guard our life line to Australia. We've got to take and hold certain bastions to protect our own supply lines.

"It seems to me there are two ways to get at Japan. One is to draw the Japanese fleet into an engagement where we can destroy it. Whether we have enough ships in the Pacific to do this, I don't know. The other is to attack the Japs from land bases in Burma and China."

The first major Japanese thrust in New Guinea was a landing force at Milne bay, which was typically Japanese in that it was masked by a clever feint at Port Moresby, Noderer said.

Smash Landing Attempt.

"The drive on Port Moresby came over the towering Owen Stanley mountains from Buna," he related. "The landing at Milne bay was the real thing. They met the real thing in MacArthur, too. The general had anticipated the Milne bay thrust and had a large force on hand to meet it.

"The Milne bay venture was utterly smashed. It was the first allied success in the southwest Pacific. It was MacArthur's first contact with the Japs since he left the Philippines. For the first time American troops met the enemy in this theater.

"The .50 caliber machine gun of the anti-aircraft lads is a wonderful weapon and turned out to be a sad surprise to the Japs. After the fight you'd find I don't know how many palm trees neatly drilled by a .50 caliber bullet and behind the tree the grave of a Jap who didn't live there any more.

Held Back by Supplies.

"Altho the main drive at Milne bay failed, the feint at Port Moresby almost succeeded. The mountains were surmounted and the Jap column was within 30 miles of a stunning success. But they out ran their supplies and had to stop. The Australians rallied and beat them all the way back to the coast. They retreated into a disaster because by that time the Americans came up the coast to pin them down at Buna. There the Japs went into their holes and the Americans and Australians went right in after them.

"It wasn't as easy as it sounds. Actually, the fighting at Gona and Buna was a murderous, bloody, desperate brawl in a fantastic jungle. It was our first taste of island fighting—and on a tropical island at that.

"It was the Philippines campaign in reverse. In the Philippines we were dug in and the Japs had to pry us out. In New Guinea the Japs were dug in and we had to fight for every square foot of swamp and thicket. I want to tell you it was tough going.

"To begin with we had to fight the jungle before we could reach the Japs. We had to fight bad water and insects, and mud and torrential rains. There were no roads and no bridges. There were only mud tracks thru unbelievably dense vegetation. Most of the troops were equipped with machetes. With 2 foot blades they hacked their way into the vines and creepers and roots and underbrush. The only open spaces were rank stands of kuai grass 12 feet high.

"The first big problem was supplies. Most of the men and supplies were flown over the mountains and landed on air strips hacked out of the kuai grass and jungle by our engineers working under the very noses of the Japs. Some came by schooner from Milne bay.

"Our lines of communication involved the use of the most modern aircraft and primitive dugout outrigger canoes. It was heart breaking to see splendid equipment lost when the canoes capsized. They were paddled by soldiers who never had seen a log canoe.

Called "Q" War.

"The best piece of equipment we had was a Japanese landing barge captured at Milne bay. Unlike the schooners, it could be shoved up on the beach and loaded. In the end most of our supplies and ammunition were lugged over the last lap by native bearers. On their way back the natives carried our wounded to field hospitals. Soldiers called the campaign a 'Q' war—that is, a quartermaster's war, a war of supplies.

"And all this was before we had begun to fight. The American attack began on Nov. 17. The night before Japanese dive bombers sank some of our schooners so we were short of beans and bullets to begin with. For a couple of days we had only one meal a day. We never had more than two meals.

"When the attack began we found the Jap front a miniature Maginot line—pill boxes of logs, concrete, and steel. Many of them were connected by tunnels. If the Japs saw they were likely to lose one strong point, they'd duck into their tunnels, drag their weapons with them, and pop up in another pill box.

Fight Only Along Trails.

"The jungle was so thick it was possible to fight only on the trails. The trails were covered by machine gun cross fire which brought our troops to a halt. When they halted, the Japs opened up with mortars previously registered on the trails.

"The trees were full of snipers. They weren't very good shots, but they used a fire cracker bullet which exploded with a sharp crack so that it seemed to our men that they were being fired on from the rear when the bullets hit trees behind them. This was an anti-morale weapon. But the Americans soon solved that. They solved it by spraying every tree top with Tommy guns as they advanced.

"Did the Japs snipe at me? They sniped at everybody. They varied their tactics by dropping grenades on us from the trees.

"They had mortars, lots of them. They had a few 3 inch guns. They also used their anti-aircraft guns as artillery. The shells would explode over our heads with a loud crack, but they didn't mean much. They ranged on our artillery by sound, but I never heard of them hitting anything.

"We had all the usual infantry weapons. We were supported by Australian 25 pounders—about a 3 inch gun. The gun is a good weapon and the Australians are good gunners, but they couldn't see what they were shooting at in the jungle. Some Japs we blasted out by main strength and awkwardness. Some we forked out with the bayonet.

"But we really didn't master them until we brought in some tanks. Getting the tanks into that jungle country was a terrible job. But our engineers cleared the trails and built the necessary bridges and in the end the tanks were the answer.

Beat Japs Hard Way.

"The capture of the Buna and Gona areas took 117 days from the time the Australians began pushing the Japs back over the Owen Stanley mountains, 117 days to take a comparatively small area. We did it the hard way.

"Our planes played a very important part in the fighting. Our transport planes supplied nearly the entire operation. There weren't enough of them. Everything was transferred on a priority system. First things came first. The first thing always was ammunition. Food came second. Our two meals a day were meat stew and rice.

"Bombing and strafing planes supported the ground offensive. They acted as our navy and kept the Jap ships from bringing in reënforcements. They kept some of the Jap strafers off our necks. But fundamentally its the guy on the ground who wins a jungle fight. And there's lots of jungle in the Pacific."

ARCTIC HERO GILLAM DIES SEEKING AID FOR FIVE IN PLANE CRASH

KETCHIKAN, Alaska, Feb. 6 (AP).—The body of Harold Gillam, veteran Alaska pilot, was found on the beach of Boca de Quadra today, a month after his plane with five passengers aboard crashed on a mountain peak in Alaska wilderness.

A coast guard searching party found the body. Gillam, who had left his passengers to seek aid for them, evidently died from shock and exposure.

Experienced northerners believed the pilot must have fallen into water and lost his matches or he would have been able to have saved himself.

Gillam, in Alaska since he was 19 years old, ranked in Arctic aviation along with Carl Ben Eilson and was noted for his ability to get out of tight places. Many times his plane had been forced down far from civilization.

BURNED BY RADIATOR, DIES.

Burns suffered Wednesday when he collapsed on a radiator after a heart attack proved fatal last night to Ulysses McVey, 73 years old, of 4002 Madison street. He died in County hospital.

MARINE FLYER TELLS HOW JAPS LOST TWO ZEROS

Says One Foe Hit but Both Went Down.

Lt. Jacob A. O. Stub, marine fighter pilot, flew into Chicago last night with his bride of two days and shivered in the cold air.

Stub shot down three Jap planes—two Zeros and a bomber—and was himself shot down by the anti-aircraft guns of a Jap destroyer. He is 23 years old and is a native of Minneapolis. He returned to the United States Jan. 22, to recover from a serious head wound and other injuries. Lt. Stub described the aerial dogfight which spelled his last battle in the Solomons area.

Both Zeros Go Down.

"I was flying on an escort mission when out of nowhere two Zeros popped in front of me," he said. "I let the first one have it and he went down burning. I fired at the second Zero, but I could see my tracers were behind him. I feel positive that I did not hit him. He plunged into the ocean, however, so I suppose he died of heart failure."

Stub did not claim credit for the second plane.

He zoomed up when the two Japs were disposed of, Stub said, and then saw a Jap destroyer. "I went after that tin can and on the way picked up another marine fighter," he related. "We went in on it firing and gave it hell. We could see flames along the deck where we hit it. Then the tin can's guns found me and bored a huge hole in my left wing and got my motor.

Lt. Jacob A. O. Stub and his recent bride as they appeared yesterday in Chicago on honeymoon after his return from Guadalcanal.

Crashes Into Sea.

"I wasn't very far from the Island of Malaita and thought at first that I'd better crash land there. But we didn't know if the Japs were there, so I crashed into the sea."

In the crash, Stub said, he suffered the four inch gash in his forehead which has just healed. He managed to get out of his plane and swam, dazed, for about 45 minutes before his head cleared and he remembered to pull the cord on his automatic life preserver. The rubber boat on his plane floated out and he climbed in and rowed to Malaita, where he found no Japs, but friendly natives who nursed him for eight days before he was rescued, he said.

"I saw only one Jap prisoner," Stub declared. "He was captured by Lt. Jack Conger in a battle after Conger was shot down. The marines at that time were knife-happy and any Jap was a gone Jap."

DUNK A GENERAL AND HE COMES UP A RAFT EXPERT!

Twining Tells Lessons of Week Adrift.

AN ADVANCED BASE IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC, Feb. 6 (AP).—Dump a general in the drink, storm toss him for six nights and five days, starve him and up he comes smiling with sound recommendations for the safety and comfort of others similarly marooned.

That's what Brig. Gen. Nathan Twining of Portland, Ore., did after he and 14 others were rescued Feb. 1 by two Catalina flying boats. The general, whose wife lives in Charlotte, N. C., and his party were hospitalized with sun blisters and exposure.

Twining, commander of an air force on a combat mission in the Solomons, some of his staff and the crew of his Flying Fortress, were forced to make an instrument landing in darkness after what accounts described as "an arduous 10 hours of weather torn piloting," by Pilot Capt. Jasper W. Woodruff of Fayetteville, Ark.

Tells What's Needed.

The day after his rescue, Twining left the hospital and proceeded to quarters, where he drafted the following memorandum:

"Suggested needs for forced landings:

"Smoke smudge in rafts plus Very pistols. [Twining said he and his party—crowded into two six man rafts—had neither, but twice saw searching planes and once a ship. Neither the planes nor the ship saw them.]

"Equipment to obtain foods and water. [Twining's bomber sank so quickly that the crew was able to salvage only one chocolate bar, one small can of sardines and one and a half canteens of water.]

"Cone shaped sea anchor to keep rafts headed into seas.

"Water tight watches."

Bagged an Albatross.

Twining bagged one of the two albatrosses which helped provide the party with food during its ordeal.

Only one of the crew, the man holding the rations, was injured in the crash landing. He suffered a crushed hand when the ball turret was driven backward as the plane hit the water. The rations he held were lost.

Col. Glen C. Jamison of Washington, D. C., Twining's staff chief, suffered torn hands in roping the crafts together.

Phillips, U. S. Envoy, May Call on Gandhi in Jail

NEW DELHI, India, Feb. 6 (AP).—Prospect that United States Ambassador William Phillips would be permitted to see Mohandas K. Gandhi, Pandit Nehru, and other imprisoned Congress party leaders increased today when the government allowed Phillips to interview a lesser leader of the banned organization. Phillips interviewed Lala Dunichand Ambalvi yesterday in Lahore, in Punjab province. The imprisoned member of the Punjab provincial assembly had asked to give the ambassador the Congress side of the controversy.

YANK BOMBERS POUND BRIDGE NEAR MANDALAY

BOMBAY, India, Feb. 6 (AP).—U. S. heavy bombers have wrecked Japanese communications between north and south Burma so completely that the enemy has been compelled to rearrange his defensive forces while an effort is made at repair.

Two weeks ago Maj. Earl L. Tash, of Walla Walla, Wash., led an attack on the Myitnge railroad bridge across the Irrawaddy, just south of Mandalay, and dropped a 1000 pound bomb on a span in midstream.

NAVY ADMITS U. S. WARSHIPS LOST AT GUADALCANAL

Damage Called Moderate on Both Sides.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—American and Japanese naval forces sparring in the southwest Pacific have each knocked out some warships on the other side, a navy spokesman said today, altho no major clash has yet developed.

The spokesman first said the losses were "minor in everything—surface and air." Then it was added that they might be called "moderate, if you want to change the word," but emphasized that they included "nothing significant—nothing of a major character."

This statement seemed to mean neither side has lost any large vessel, such as aircraft carriers or battleships, and that Japanese claims of having sunk two American battleships are untrue.

Hints Big Battle Near.

The action is still "in a preliminary stage," the navy said, but the various activities now in progress "would ordinarily precede an engagement of some size."

[The Japanese last Monday claimed the sinking of two American battleships and three cruisers by air action. These claims have been denounced as grossly exaggerated by a United States navy spokesman.]

A navy communique issued today threw no further light on the fighting. It said American troops had continued their advance along the northwest coast of Guadalcanal Island against weak enemy resistance. Some patrols reached points a mile and a half past Tassafaronga, near the Umasani river, on Thursday. That was an advance of about a mile beyond the furthest point previously reported.

American planes raided enemy positions at Munda, the New Georgia Island base, Wednesday and Douglas Dauntless bombers, with fighter escort, also attacked nearby Kolombangara Island. Results were not reported.

Japs Bomb Yanks Twice.

On Wednesday night single enemy planes bombed American positions on Guadalcanal twice. On Thursday a Flying Fortress on a search mission was attacked by three Zeros and one of them was shot down. The damaged Fortress managed to get back to its base. The single plane raids on Guadalcanal were described by the navy spokesman as "more of the old washboard Charlie stuff designed to keep them awake at night."

In the North Pacific, five enemy float type planes bombed American positions in the northwest Aleutian Islands Thursady, but caused no damage.

Thursday night Liberator bombers, Mitchell medium bombers and fighter escorts attacked Japanese positions at Kiska Island. Three of five float type Zeros which sought to intercept were shot down and all United States planes returned.

Evacuate Bucharest, Press Urges After Bombings

ANKARA, Turkey, Feb. 6 (AP).—The Rumanian press is demanding the evacuation of Bucharest because of "heavy bombings."

[This is the first mention of bombings of Bucharest. None has been reported in many months by allied or axis sources.]

Bulgarian newspapers report that on Feb. 2, 12 foreign aircraft flew over Bulgaria. No actual bombing was mentioned.

ASSERTS DIEPPE RAIDERS FOUND GERMANS READY

Hoosier Says Force Drew Heavy Fire at Once.

German forces at Dieppe, instead of being surprised, were waiting and manning all guns when American, Canadian, and British troops attacked the French town in pre-dawn darkness last August, Sergt. Charles Ray Foreman reported yesterday upon arriving home in Whiting, Ind., after five months in hospitals in England, Northern Ireland, and the United States.

Sergt. Foreman was shot in the hip, gashed under the chin, and lost all his front upper teeth, but brought back from the French beach the tank he commanded.

"Everything was quiet as our barge drew up to the beach," Sergt. Foreman said. "My three buddies and I drove our tank onto the sand. Other tanks were unloading all along.

Enemy Fire Quickly Reduced.

"Then it happened. Guns seemed to open up all over the place—on the beach, along a cliff bordering the sand, and from atop the cliff.

"Bullets popped off the tank. It was pitch dark, so the defense guns made flashes of light and we fired at the white spots. I guess we must have been pretty good, because in 15 or 20 minutes the fire slackened on our end of the beach.

"We plowed over a sandbag trap. The jolt threw me against the tank turret, cutting my chin and knocking out my teeth.

"We received radio orders to leave the tanks and seek shelter along the cliff. The four of us climbed out and began running. Only two made it. I was shot in the hip and a buddy was hit in the leg. The other two came back, dragged us to shelter and patched us up. After an hour or so I sent one of the boys back to the tank to listen for radio orders.

Day of Waiting to Be Bombed.

"Since we were supposed only to hold the beach, the rest of us lay along the cliff. That was the longest day I ever had. Planes droned low overhead. We couldn't see them for the fog and couldn't tell whether they were ours or Jerry's. That was an awful feeling—just waiting to be bombed.

"About 7 in the evening the boy in the tank stuck his head out, whooped that orders had come to 'mount up.' That was what we had been waiting for. It meant to get back on the barges.

"The beach sprang into life. Some crews left behind damaged tanks. Ours was still in working order. We refused to leave it to the Germans so we all climbed in, drove it back across the sandbag trap and onto the beach and headed for home.

"When we were halfway across the channel one of the boys remembered we hadn't eaten since leaving England the night before. We had canned rations with us and, altho we hadn't done much on the beach except watch the planes, we had forgotten all about eating. I wasn't hungry even then. About three days later, in a hospital, hunger hit me. But I did not have any teeth, so had to live on soup for two months."

Sergt. Foreman, 31 years old, is visiting his wife, Shirley, 1519 John street, Whiting.

BERLIN SUGGESTS LAVAL'S MILITIA WILL AID NAZIS

Recruits May Serve as 'Storm Troops.'

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

The French militia, which Pierre Laval decided to organize, is being recruited to fight on the side of the Germans against an allied invasion, it was indicated last night by a Berlin broadcast of a Vichy dispatch.

"Chief of government Pierre Laval is working strenuously with Joseph Darnand, leader of the recently established French militia," the broadcast said.

Details Plan of Organization.

"Leaders of the militia are appointed daily who, after having sworn allegiance to the chief of government [not to Marshal Petain, chief of state], return to their home places to carry thru the regulations for strengthening the militia.

"The militia in France is to become what in other European countries are fascist militia, storm troopers, and falangists, namely an organization which unhesitatingly accepts fight in the streets against an inner political enemy.

Nazis Repeat Cliche Phrase.

"It is quite possible," the dispatch continued, "that with the help of the French government the militia will become in the next few months the strong backbone of the French state and the national revolution, then becoming a powerful bulwark against bolshevism and for maintenance of European civilization."

"Maintenance of European civilization" is the usual Nazi phrase describing resistance to the allies.

WATER TO SCRUB WITH IS TERMED SOLOMONS NEED

The most severe hardship suffered by American fighting men in the Solomons is the lack of fresh water for washing, Ensign Harold A. Flood, 24 years old, of 32 Washington Park Square, Waukegan, said when he returned home yesterday on leave.

Ensign Flood.

Ensign Flood for the last four months has been pilot of a naval patrol plane. His worst experience, he said, was when his best pal was shot down in flames while flying in a group of patrol planes near Guadalcanal.

The navy pilot, a track star at Northwestern Illinois Normal college and a clerk in a clothing store before his enlistment a year ago, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Flood.

BACKFIRE CAUSES $3,000 FIRE.

Fire caused $3,000 damage yesterday to the Royal China Novelty company, 2715 Archer avenue. Fire Marshal Anthony J. Mullaney said the blaze started from the backfire of an oil heated drying oven.

UNTRIED YANKEES FACE WAR-WISE NAZIS IN TUNISIA

Big Battle with Rommel Believed Near.

BY WES GALLAGHER.

ALLIED HDQ. IN NORTH AFRICA, Feb. 6 (AP).—An untried and inexperienced American armored and infantry force stands before the mountain passes in Tunisia on the eve of testing its strength for the first time against a veteran axis army numbering perhaps 170,000 troops.

Part of that axis army is wearied by a long retreat against Libya, but it is still a powerful one, wise in the ways of war and led by a brilliant field marshal.

Any thought that a battle may never take place because of an axis withdrawal from North Africa already has been dispelled. Every day Hitler has been pouring more troops and material into Africa. It is his best material, too — including new giant tanks never seen on the Russian front and swarms of Messerschmitt 109s and Focke-Wulf 190s.

Air Force Poised for Action.

In fact, fully one-third of the German air force apparently is poised in the Mediterranean ready for an aerial slugging match which must precede the anticipated land engagement.

It is too late now even if Marshal Erwin Rommel wanted to withdraw. The British 8th army is too close, and on his exposed flank rests a British and American army looking for the slightest sign of weakness.

Since November, Lt. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower has been fighting a "logistic" battle, and only now signs indicate that this battle may have been bearing fruit.

It has been a battle of trying to build up an army supplied from bases 3,000 miles away, then funneling this army and its supplies thru a bottleneck over four mountain roads 600 miles to the front while the axis pumped in an army over sea lanes less than 100 miles long into ports less than 70 miles from the front.

Allies Well Equipped.

Somehow it has been done. Not that the allied force in Tunisia is as big as it might be—in fact it probably is considerably less in numbers than the axis army, but at least it is a formidable striking force equipped with the best British and American weapons and ready for action.

This is the situation in Tunisia as it stands now:

First, thanks mainly to the inability of the Germans to develop an air weapon capable of dealing with the Flying Fortress, the allies enjoy a wide margin of bombing superiority. The Fortresses, followed by Mitchells, Maranders and Bostons, fight their way thru the German defenses daily to batter thru the German supply ports ground troops almost every hour from dawn to dark.

Because the Germans can base large numbers of fighters on well established fields in nearby Sicily, which would be almost impossible to knock out, it is doubtful, however, whether the allies will be able to dominate the sky over the battlefield by such a margin as the Germans enjoyed in France and Greece and early in the Russian campaign. As far as quality goes, the American P-38s have proven a match for the best the Germans have to offer.

Battle Area "General's Nightmare."

Secondly, the ground that Rommel strategically faces is, according to all the books of war, a "general's nightmare."

The Germans hold a long strip of Tunisia, roughly about 70 miles wide, running down the eastern coast of Tunisia. All Rommel's supply lines run north and south along this strip from Bizerte, Tunis, Sfax and Gabes, parallel to the allied lines, which, according to the rules of war, is an impossible position.

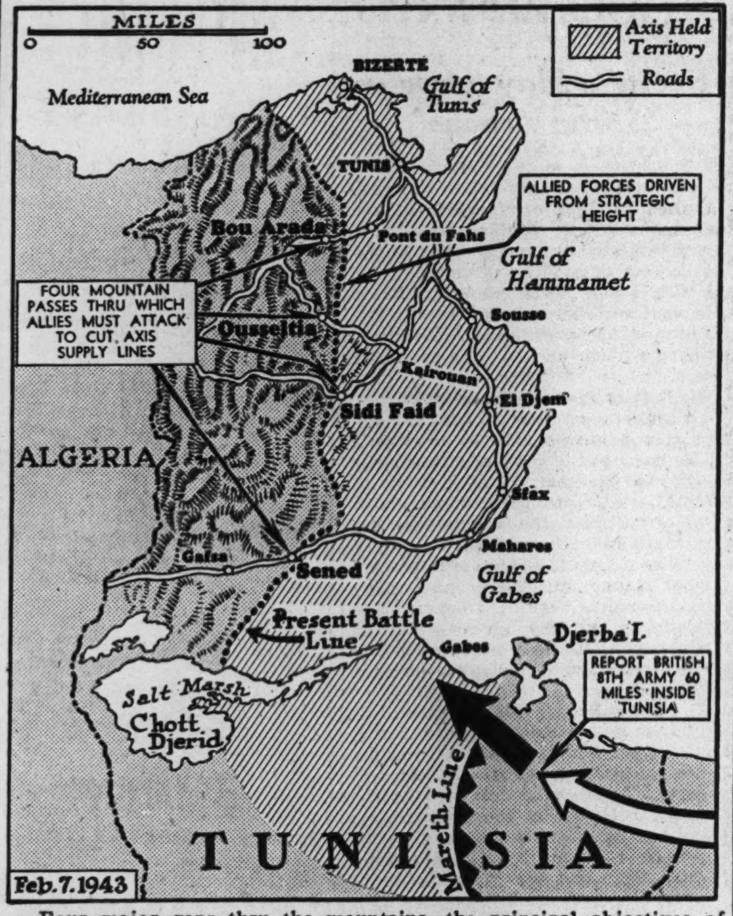
However, protecting this strip in the west is a series of mountain ranges thru which run about four usable narrow passes. It is thru these passes that the allies must attack from the plateaus behind the ranges.

In equipment Rommel is short on armor as a result of his retreat, but the German Gen. Jurgen Von Arnim in the north is well equipped with forces equal to those of the allies. Since the start of the war the Germans have been using in battle 88 mm. guns to do the work of 75's, and a 30 ton tank with seven inches of armor and an 88 mm. gun, but the monster tanks have not paid the usual dividends. The British six pounders knocked two 52 tonners out of action, piercing the armor four times.

In field guns the Americans have answered the formidable German 88 with a mobile 105 mm. weapon.

Points of Conflict in Tunisia

(Story in adjoining column.)



Four major gaps thru the mountains, the principal objectives of the fighting in Tunisia, are located on the map. Other developments reported yesterday are explained in the captions. Black arrow locates route of axis retreat from Libya.

REPORT BRITISH 60 MILES INSIDE TUNISIAN BORDER

8th Army Said to Be Near Mareth Line.

LONDON, Feb. 6 (AP).—An Algiers radio broadcast today said Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery's 8th army is "a good 60 miles inside Tunisia" and swiftly bearing down on the Mareth line, where Marshal Erwin Rommell was expected to make a last bid to hold Tunisia.

British-Captured Hill Lost.

ALLIED HDQ. IN NORTH AFRICA, Feb. 6 (AP).—A German counterattack has forced allied troops to relinquish the strategic height of Djebel Mansour, 20 miles southwest of Pont du Fahs, officials disclosed today.

The British captured the height, known as Hill 648, in an action reported Wednesday.

The struggle for the hill, six miles southeast of the British base of Bou Arada, is part of the campaign being waged for vital passes thru the mountain range running parallel with the axis supply line along the Tunisian coast.

Action on a Small Scale.

"The Germans infiltrated our positions on Djebel Mansour and retook the height after small scale action," an allied spokesman announced.

The French high command reported "strong activity" in the region southwest of Pont du Fahs, 35 miles below Tunis.

A few American P-40 Warhawk fighters shot up an axis truck column between Gabes and Gafsa, the allies reported.

Of 10 American planes reported missing after Thursday's air battles, four fighters have returned after being forced down. The final tabulation for the battle stands at 26 axis planes destroyed against a loss of only 6 American craft.

[British submarines operating "very close inshore off the eastern Tunisian coast" under the noses of axis shore batteries have sunk four more enemy vessels, the British admiralty announced yesterday. Three of the ships were supply vessels; the fourth was a tanker. One submarine, the admiralty said, shelled a railway bridge near Cotrone on the "sole" of the Italian boot.]

Jury Dismissed in Trial of Sailor as Wife Slayer

San Diego, Cal., Feb. 6 (AP).—An all-woman jury trying James E. Hale, 28 years old, navy chief petty officer from Lincoln, Ill., on a charge of slaying his wife was discharged today when it was deadlocked after deliberating 12 hours. Judge Gordon Thompson announced Feb. 19 as the date for setting a new trial. Hale admitted killing his wife, Catherine, 23, with a submachine gun and wounding Clyde B. Patterson, 26, a sailor, but pleaded innocent by reason of insanity. He said he found Patterson in his wife's apartment.

CRIPPS WARNS OF WAR WEARINESS; SIGHTS VICTORY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 6.—Stafford Cripps, minister of aircraft production, in an address at Aberdeen university in Scotland today warned against war weariness defeating the peace aims. He said he had noticed "with some distress, a growing tendency to view the future with a certain degree of hopelessness and almost sour disillusion."

It is up to the people to be more than ever alive to the part they must play in shaping the better world all hope for, he contended, especially now when the promise of victory "looms over the horizon." But the effect is almost the opposite when the urgency of the war is nonexistent and the reactionary interests which keep underground during the war emerge more and more with every victory.

"Defeated totalitarianism may," he asserted, "like the French revolution, impress its forms and ideas upon the victorious nations unless we are awake to the danger and are determining the action we shall take."

GIVE EISENHOWER RULE OVER NORTH AFRICAN THEATER

Commands Allies Up to East Border of Tunisia.

said Eisenhower would not be supreme allied commander in Africa, but would continue to direct the allied forces in Tunisia as he has since the invasion of Morocco and Algiers. These reports pictured Eisenhower's appointment only as a clarification of the American command overseas, a division of the former European theater into separate African and European units.

While the war department said it would be difficult to draw a definite line of demarkation between the Eisenhower and Alexander commands, military authorities said that expedience probably would determine to whom the troops in Tunisia would look for commands. It was said that it might be practical to let Montgomery continue to command his forces in Tunisia, particularly if they were not in communication with Eisenhower.

Question of Rank.

Observers pointed out that Montgomery and Alexander, both of whom are full generals, would outrank Eisenhower under ordinary military procedure. Speculation as to whether Eisenhower might be made a full general began when he commanded the AEF which landed in North Africa on Nov. 8. The forces now in Tunisia include that AEF, Lt. Gen. K. A. N. Anderson's British 1st army, the French forces of Gen. Henri Giraud, and the American 5th army of Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark.

From North Africa came dispatches saying Eisenhower would retain his post as commander of the allied forces while taking over the vastly more ambitious job of commanding general of the North African theater. One dispatch said:

"It is apparent that the allied forces in Tunisia and Gen. Montgomery's 8th army, which is pounding in from Tripolitania, will have to work in the closest coöperation once the operations against Marshal [Erwin] Rommel begin.

Problem of Dual Rule Eased.

"This coöperation was achieved more easily by centralizing control at the North Africa theater headquarters than continuing the system of dual control at the allied force headquarters and at Cairo.

"The resources which will be placed under Gen. Eisenhower once the Germans are driven out of Tunisia and the new alignment of air, sea, and land commanders is confirmed will be greater than those given to any allied general in this war heretofore. He will command the British 8th and 1st armies, the American 5th army, the United States 12th air force, the combined British eastern and middle east air commands, and will have use of Britain's mighty Mediterranean fleet."

This dispatch said high British officers had indicated favor for such a command, having called Eisenhower "the perfect coördinator."

M. P. DEMANDS END OF BRITISH 'POLITICAL TRUCE'

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 6.—Emmanuel Shinwell, Laborite member of parliament, today called for an end to the electoral truce, saying that its continuance was dangerous to democracy.

"Electoral truce," he said, "means a political truce, suspension of party controversy, and acceptance of the government's policy without protest or criticism. To persist in this will prove fatal to parliamentary democracy. There is a strong rumor that the government intends to continue in office and maintain coalition after the war."

It was recently disclosed in the house of commons that Shinwell had refused an important position in the coalition government.

REMOVAL OF CIANO CALLED EFFORT TO SPUR ITALIAN MORALE

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6 (AP).—Premier Mussolini's cabinet shakeup was interpreted by a state department spokesman today as an attempt to bolster low morale among Italians due to the loss of Libya and destructive bombing of Italian cities. It is, of course, apparent that any such moves by Mussolini must have had Nazi approval, he added.

The spokesman pointed out that the five most important cabinet portfolios, with the removal of Count Galeazzo Ciano as foreign minister, now are held by Mussolini—army, navy, air, and internal and foreign affairs. This was described as an obvious attempt to reassure the Italians that in time of crisis Il Duce is taking over the major responsibilities. The spokesman said the removal of Ciano from the cabinet would not affect Italy's foreign relations or remove the stigma attached to Ciano for his support of collaboration with Germany.

17 AXIS CHUTISTS REPORTED SLAIN IN NORTH AFRICA

LONDON, Feb. 6 (AP).—Seventeen axis parachutists, who wore civilian clothing when captured in allied territory in French North Africa, have been executed, the Algiers radio announced today.

They were among four groups of parachutists dropped east of Constantine on Jan. 21 and captured with coöperation of the Arabs, the broadcast said. Those executed were said to have included Germans, Arabs, and Fascist Frenchmen. The Morocco radio said the death sentence had been imposed by a tribunal at Constantine.

Nazis Boast New Diver Plane Outclasses Allies

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

The German radio reported last night that a new dive fighter plane built for a special purpose has been tested, and that Kurt Tank, chief constructor of the Focke-Wulf works, said "the result is such as to secure for us in the future superiority over our enemies."

DREADNOUGHT ON LAND REPORTED IN USE BY NAZIS

New Tank Heavier than Any of Allies'.

Reports that the Germans are employing in North Africa a powerful new tank much heavier and more invulnerably armored than any similar weapon possessed by the allied armies caused much discussion in military circles yesterday.

While the British in Tunisia are reported to have knocked out one of these new land dreadnoughts and made a thorough investigation of it, the American war department in Washington said Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower had reported that the new tank has not made its appearance on the American front.

Answer to Russian Tank.

The little information available regarding the tank, known as the Mark VI., indicates that it weighs between 56 and 62 tons, with seven inches of armour in front, and is equipped with an 88 mm. cannon [about 3½ inches] and a flame thrower with a 75 yard range. The Mark VI. travels at 22 miles an hour and carries a crew of eight.

This combination of armor and guns is much heavier than anything used by the United States or Britain. The main armor is supposedly invulnerable against 75 mm. guns, the heaviest carried by American and British tanks. It probably can withstand 105 mm. shells, the heaviest fired from anti-tank guns on motors.

The Mark VI. is said to have been developed by the Germans as an answer to the Russian heavy tanks, weighing perhaps 50 tons.

The Mark VI. is such a heavy tank that special equipment is needed on ships and docks to handle them—ordinary cranes being inadequate. The tank is so heavy that its presence in Africa would indicate that the Germans are doing a lot of construction work on bridges.

Too Heavy for Bridges.

The reason heavy tanks are disliked by the army is that bridges will not take them without reinforcement, and a large corps of engineers is necessary to buttress bridges before the tanks can be used.

In an advance, the engineers might be at a disadvantage because an advancing army might come to a stream whose bridge needed reinforcing for the tanks, and the enemy might prevent the engineers from going to work by holding the opposite bank of the stream.

The presence of the Mark VI. in Africa would indicate that the Germans had a surplus of them, because they were designed for the Russian front.

GIRAUD TIGHTENS HIS POWER OVER FRENCH N. AFRICA

Revamps Darlan Council; Pledges Aid for Jews.

ALLIED HDQ. IN NORTH AFRICA, Feb. 6 (AP).—Gen. Henri Giraud took a tighter grip tonight on the French African empire, assured further relief for the oppressed Jews, and prepared for a possible place for a De Gaullist as consultant in his government.

Giraud assumed the new title of French civil and military commander in chief and dropped the name and political characteristics of the imperial council established by Adm. Jean Darlan, his assassinated predecessor. Giraud took supreme authority over French military and political affairs in Africa—authority to be exercised with the advice of a new "committee of war" composed of the old imperial council personnel and others.

Retains Peyrouton.

Giraud retained on the war committee all members of the imperial council. These are Pierre Boisson, Gen. Auguste Nogues, and Marcel Peyrouton, governors respectively of West Africa, French Morocco, and Algeria; and the former Vichy air minister, Gen. Jean Marie Bergeret, who became secretary general to Giraud.

By ordinance, Giraud gave himself the right to replace any of these men and to enlarge the committee. This was seen as an opportunity to place one or more members of Gen. Charles de Gaulle's Fighting French on the committee, in accordance with the Casablanca liaison agreement.

Giraud, moreover, was empowered to appoint a "delegate general for inter-allied affairs" who could represent him in London with De Gaulle and the British.

Making War "in All Domains."

Should Gen. Georges Catroux, Fighting French delegate general to Syria, be assigned here by De Gaulle, Giraud was reported to have already tentatively selected a general to send to England.

[A dispatch from Algiers yesterday said Gen. Catroux conferred with Giraud on taking a high post in Giraud's French African government. It was expected Catroux would remain in Algiers permanently after a trip to Syria.]

The new régime took a Giraud phrase as its watchword:

"In all domains make war."

Giraud's ordinance gave him exclusive authority over national defense, foreign relations, the budget, the legal and political status of foreigners, the organization of justice, and penal legislation.

Other Powers of Giraud.

He was vested with the right to appoint governors general and all other high administrators and magistrates.

Stressing that a campaign to win the war is the main concern of the war committee, the group went on record as sponsoring civil reforms. These included:

Restitution of Jewish property and reëntrance of Jewish children into public schools.

Removal of restrictions on Jewish doctors, dentists, and lawyers.

Examination of cases of political internees.

[Fighting French headquarters in London said prospects for a working arrangement between Giraud and De Gaulle appeared better "in some respects." Giraud's announced policies met with general approval, but the De Gaullists continued to object to the presence of "Vichy collaborationists" on the committee of war.]

REVEALS 'INSIDE STORY' OF GIRAUD, DE GAULLE TALKS

Claims They Put Them No Nearer Unity.

BY RAYMOND DANIELL.

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Feb. 6.—There has been so much optimistic speculation over the results of the De Gaulle-Giraud meeting at Casablanca that it may be useful to recapitulate what actually happened when President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill brought the two French leaders together. At the meeting the French generals agreed the Germans must be driven from France but decided to pursue that end by separate means.

First it must be emphasized that Gen. Henri Honoré Giraud, French high commissioner for Africa, and Gen. Charles de Gaulle, Fighting French leader, parted more convinced than ever that there was no common ground for unity.

Giraud, who was inclined to blame the tragedy that befell France upon its republican form of government, rejected De Gaulle's proposal that he repudiate Vichy, purge his régime of its followers, and reinstitute French republican laws in North Africa. De Gaulle would have nothing to do with the plan for amalgamation of his forces with Giraud's.

De Gaulle Balks.

This plan contemplated establishment of a triumvirate in which De Gaulle and Giraud were to be junior partners, as it were, in a holding company for colonial France until the war was won and new French government established.

While the conference failed to achieve a complete fusion of the De Gaulle forces with those of Giraud, it is felt that some good came of the meeting. The chief result was an agreement on the exchange of missions to work out military, economic, and financial problems. The reason De Gaulle's mission has not been named yet, it is understood, is a desire to obtain Giraud's approval of its personnel.

What is not generally appreciated is that long before Adm. Jean Darlan, late French African commissioner, was assassinated, De Gaulle was trying to establish a contact with Giraud. Early in December, d'Astier de la Vigerie, a De Gaulle lieutenant, was sent to Africa to find a formula of coöperation.

What Envoy Reported.

He returned and reported there was a slim chance of bringing about some sort of military coöperation and political unity. However, when Darlan was assassinated the situation had changed and within a few hours of Giraud's appointment by the imperial council as high commissioner, De Gaulle wrote him, suggesting a conference. De Gaulle repeated his proposal in writing four times, but Giraud put off any decision.

The invitation to the Casablanca conference finally came to De Gaulle from Churchill and the Fighting French leader started for Casablanca. He was convinced Mr. Roosevelt and Churchill had cooked up a take it or leave it scheme. He left London with his guard up, more ready to reject than to accept.

Generals Have Two Meetings.

At Casablanca De Gaulle had two important meetings with Giraud in which the generals found how much they thought alike about the Germans and how far apart they were on everything else. Another conference was between De Gaulle and President Roosevelt and the last was attended by Giraud, Churchill, Mr. Roosevelt, and Robert Murphy, Mr. Roosevelt's envoy.

Just before this one Murphy told De Gaulle that the state department was not unfriendly to him or his movement, but was motivated by expediency in North Africa. He pointed out that the Gaullists in North Africa amounted to less than 15 per cent of the population.

Later, when it was apparent that Giraud and De Gaulle could not reach full political agreement, Giraud said he had a plan for the union of their forces. De Gaulle asked what it was and Giraud began searching his pockets like a man hunting a railroad ticket. Finally Murphy reached into his pocket, pulled out a slip of paper, and said:

"Here it is."

Story of the Communique.

That was the scheme for a triumvirate to rule colonial France. De Gaulle said he could not accept this scheme. Then the two French generals issued a joint communique for its morale effect.

De Gaulle wrote one which described their joint aim as the "liberation of the French and the triumph of democratic principles by the total defeat of the enemy." Giraud crossed out "democratic principles" and substituted "human liberties" which was the form finally used.

The instance was enough to indicate that, whatever happens, each wants to be boss. De Gaulle feels he must accept political responsibility since he has made many commitments with underground leaders in France. Giraud, while insisting he is no politician, feels his army leadership gives him responsibilities too.

FIND RAILWAY IN SAHARA IS FAR FROM FINISHED

German Engineers Failed to Aid French.

DAKAR, French West Africa [Delayed] (AP).—France's projected trans-Saharan railroad, represented in the last two years as nearing completion under German impetus, actually has no more than a fair start.

Records at Dakar disclose little more than one-sixth of its most important division is finished. Approximately 1,200 miles of desert and mountains stand between the railhead at the north and the Niger river; another 750 miles must be built westward across the Sudan from the little known oasis, In-Tassit, to connect with the existing railroad to Dakar.

Claim no Germans Have Helped.

Construction officials declare that not a single German engineer or workman has done a day's labor on the project; the 2,000-odd workers have been Arabs supervised by French foremen. They assert, too, that all materials have come from France—none from Germany—and that the rails are second hand—salvaged from abandoned French lines.

Formally named the Mediterranean-Niger railroad when its construction began after the 1940 armistice, the railway is in operation today only between Oujda, in northern Morocco, and a point 20 miles south of Kenadsa, just below the Algeria-Morocco frontier. The track from Oujda, important switching point on the excellent East-West coastal railroad, to the railhead is 1.44 meter gauge. Continuing southward, the roadbed has been prepared for another 75 to 100 miles—as far as Beni Abbes. From that point on, the trans-Saharan railroad exists only on paper.

Follows Motor Road Route.

The route follows closely the automobile route now in use. It runs thru Adrar, Reggane, and Bidon, all in Algeria, and thru Tessalit in the Sudan before reaching In-Tassit, 60 miles north of the Niger.

At this point, site of an excellent well, the railroad splits. One branch bends southeastward toward Niamey, capital of the French Niger colony, and the other turns westward, following the Niger past Timbuktu, crossing the river on a newly completed bridge at Markala and connecting with the present Senegal-Sudan railroad at Koulikoro.

Begun after study by a mission following the fall of France, the trans-Saharan project got under way with a bang. Wide gauge tracks had been laid by autumn, 1941, as far as Kenadsa, site of big coal workings. Then the attention of some of the engineers was diverted to expanding mining operations—with a resulting five fold production increase—and work on the railroad went on at a slower pace.

Small Amount of Trackage.

Aside from the comparatively small amount of trackage laid, the only other material accomplishments have been drilling of numerous wells along the route and construction of the bridge and a dam across the Niger at Markala, 175 miles downstream from Bamako, capital of the Sudan.

Whether or not the railroad ever will be completed remains a question with many Frenchmen.

B OR C GAS BOOK EXPIRES FEB. 28 UNLESS RENEWED

Need Must Be Proved Anew, OPA Warns.

Holders of supplemental gasoline rationing B and C books must renew their applications before Feb. 28 if they wish their ration continued, Michael F. Mulcahy, area rationing administrator, announced yesterday. A renewal form which may be filled out and returned to the ration board by mail has been printed, he announced.

The new forms will be in the hands of ration boards Tuesday, he said, and may also be obtained by war workers from plant transportation committees, which will be set up in 700 Chicago war plants.

A Book Holder Not Affected.

The present B and C gasoline books expire Feb. 28, and the new ones will be effective March 1 to May 31. Holders of A ration books, good until July 31, are not affected.

The B and C renewal form, R543, inquires into any change in the motorist's status to determine whether he is still eligible for the supplemental ration.

"This form is part of the constant inquiry to which all holders of supplemental rations are subject," Mulcahy said. "Persons must certify again that they need the additional gasoline."

Unused Coupons to Be Listed.

The form requires the listing of all gasoline ration books and the number of unused coupons. It also asks the number of occupational miles the motorist expects to drive and whether there has been any change in the mileage or the motorist's car sharing system. It requires a statement on any change in gasoline uses or requirements and must be certified by employer if the applicant works in an establishment where more than 100 persons are employed.

War workers must obtain their renewal applications from the plant transportation committees, and must return them to the committees for approval before supplemental books are issued, Mulcahy said.

There are about 100,000 B and 50,000 C cardholders now in the Chicago area, Mulcahy said.

PAR FOR BURPEES IN ARTILLERY IS 11 IN 20 SECONDS

How Soldiers Toughen Up at Fort Sheridan.

Members of the 456th coast artillery, an anti-aircraft regiment, henceforth will have to pass the "burpee" test to demonstrate their fitness as seasoned campaigners, Col. F. C. Rogers, commanding officer at Fort Sheridan, where the regiment is quartered, declared yesterday.

The "burpee" is an arduous calisthenic maneuver in which the gymnast assumes a prone position, "legs to the rear with weight on hands and toes — return to squat position, then back to attention at the count of four." Eleven burpees in 20 seconds will be considered par.

Toughening Up Exercises.

But the fitness test doesn't stop with burpees. In order to convince critical officers that they are up to coping with the rigors of modern warfare, the artillery men must skip thru the following gymnastic maneuvers:

1. Pushups — 33 of them in rapid fire succession — and a pushup, seasoned veterans will tell you, is no pushover. In this stunt the soldier "assumes a slanting position, his weight sustained by his hands and toes." Said weight is then rapidly lifted and lowered, chiefly by the muscles of the arms. The veterans say this can become awfully tiresome in time.

2. A 300 yard gallop at top speed [in 45 seconds].

3. Lugging a fellow soldier piggyback for 75 yards, with par at 20 seconds.

4. Running a 70 yard zig-zag course in 30 seconds.

5. The pièce de resistance: Completing a four mile hike thru tortuous terrain, laden with full packs, and equipment, in 50 minutes.

Brig. Gen. La Rhett L. Stuart, commanding officer of the anti-aircraft artillery training center at Fort Sheridan, is of the opinion that the above exercises are moderate, if anything.

"Any soldier who completes the preliminary training course which precedes the test should be able to come thru with flying colors," he said.

The general is a firm believer in the theory that tough training makes tough soldiers—the kind modern war demands.

Few men of 38 or over engage in this rigorous training and those who do are in excellent physical condition before they begin.

Fort Sheridan's coast artillery men have been going thru a toughening up process this winter by living in tents along the wind-swept stretch of lake shore known as Little Siberia.

Combat Subzero Cold.

During the recent spell of subzero weather, the inhabitants of the tent colony learned how to cope with such tactics as prying up shoes frozen to the floor, coaxing frozen toothpaste from its tube, digging out from snow that drifts in and covers their bunks, and rekindling fires in the pot-bellied coke stoves that driving snow had drowned.

"The men came thru in fine fashion," beamed Gen. Stuart. "More realism must be incorporated into our training schedule."

U.S. SNUBS COREA, A SEETHING LAND OF JAP HATERS

25 Million Ignored in Fear of 'Offending' Tokio.

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—For nearly 15 months the state department has paralyzed all efforts to utilize the war potential of 25 million Coreans, the greatest Jap haters in the world, and has turned a deaf ear to the pleas of their 24 year old provisional government and its leader, Dr. Syngman Rhee, one of the orient's foremost democrats.

Dr. Syngman Rhee.

Less than two weeks after more than 2,000 Americans lay dead at Pearl Harbor the Corean government, which enjoys sanctuary in Chungking, China, and has an army of 30,000 fighting with the Chinese, sought recognition. There was no official answer.

The state department, however, conveyed its view to a United States senator, who in turn passed it on to a member of the Corean commission.

Fear to Offend Japs.

"Tell the Coreans not to agitate for independence at this time as such action might be considered offensive by the Japanese," was the incredible message the senator delivered. He has asked that his name be withheld so that he will not be mistakenly quoted as the author of the message.

A short time later Dr. Rhee, Corea's "apostle of liberty," who has suffered imprisonment, torture, and exile in his half century fight against the Japanese, and on whose head the Japs have set a price of $300,000, formally presented credentials and his government's request for recognition.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull did not even acknowledge their receipt. Instead, Assistant Secretary Adolf Augustus Berle Jr. sent the Corean patriot a mimeographed press release and a short covering letter calling his attention to the department's stand on "free movements."

Excluded from Pact.

Despite this rebuff Dr. Rhee asked if his nation might sign the allied nations pact. The state department did not reply to this request.

Corea then sought the intercession of the White House, the war department, and the navy department but nothing came of it. The only person in all official Washington to interest himself in the situation is Col. William J. Donovan, head of the office of strategic services. However, he has been able to do virtually nothing.

Meantime, American friends of the Corean people obtained an answer from Secretary Hull. He said the department could not recognize Corea as there were "various Corean groups."

The American friends submitted a wealth of evidence from returned American missionaries to the effect that Dr. Rhee was the only leader recognized by the people of Corea, but stated that Dr. Rhee was ready to withdraw if the department would recognize any group of Coreans so that the full military potential of 25 million people might be utilized. The department ignored this offer.

Friend of the Yanks

[The Friend of the Yanks department will answer questions about the draft and military service, both in the daily columns and by mail, if stamped, self-addressed envelopes are sent with the queries.]

B. M. R. asks: "Do you happen to know about any opportunities for young women in the army weather bureau?"

ANSWER: We don't happen to know about such opportunities except that there are a few positions open with the weather directorate of the army air forces. They want young women with a knowledge of drafting, mechanical drawing or cryptology who are willing to go to Washington for the duration plus six months. Inquiries should be addressed: Headquarters, Army Air Forces, Attention: Administrative Division, Directorate of Weather, Washington, D. C.

E. F. F. writes: "Isn't there any protection given to manufacturers engaged in war production from having their essential men drafted away from them? My plant is manufacturing rubber products used directly by the armed forces. We have lost several foremen, the last just before Christmas. Now they want to take the last one away from us and tell us to find some more, and it's just impossible. I have appealed to the local occupational director, to the state director, and so on, and I get no satisfaction whatever. Now McNutt comes along with his blast of 'work or fight' and it just doesn't make sense."

ANSWER: Apparently you've done all you can do, but the local board is still supreme despite Mr. McNutt's speech. If the local board refuses deferment, there isn't anything to do about it.

A. W. K. asks: "Are boys of draft age in the 18 to 20 year old group exempt from army service if they are employed in war work? Most of the married men in my neighborhood who were working in this plant are gone, but these boys all have deferments and the jobs they do can all be done by women."

ANSWER: If you have reason to believe there is anything wrong in this instance, you can complain to the state director of selective service in Springfield.

H. R. writes: "I have an ampro 16 mm. sound movie and projector. Also an Allied radio loud speaker system with a 25 watt amplifier and two dynamic speakers, microphone and wires. I've heard the army is looking for just such equipment, but know of no one to contact."

ANSWER: The army signal corps needs and will purchase certain amateur radio and photographic equipment. The needed equipment includes commercially built transmitters and receivers ranging from 25 to 450 watts; audio frequency and radio frequency signal generators and oscilloscopes, precision A C and D C voltmeters, ammeters, millimeters, and other testing equipment. They also want motion picture cameras, animation cameras, projectors, sound producing equipment, printers, and film examining machines for both 16 mm. and 35 mm. film. High speed cameras, exposure meters, filters, and tripods will also be bought. Write or phone Capt. Nelson G. Craig, Signal Corps Depot, 1903 West Pershing road, Chicago.

HOW CHICAGOAN GUARDING BRITAIN EXPLODED U-BOAT

Flies the Atlantic, Fights, Finds War Dull.

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Feb. 6.—It was on a pine bench which is the best seat in the improvised office of Lt. Col. Jack Roberts, commander of the provisional United States antisubmarine wing attached to the British coastal command, that Lt. Irving T. Colburn of 4309 North Keeler avenue, Chicago, a bombardier, told how the first submarine officially credited to this group was sunk sometime ago.

Outside it was raining and a cold wind howled. Carpenters were busy amid the skeletons of old hangars fixing up an office and quarters, and field mechanics were repairing, fitting and refueling some of the Liberator bombers for which as yet there were no hangars. Only a short while ago, it seemed, some of these Liberators had brought the members of this wing over the Atlantic from Langley field, Va.

Colburn, who in civilian life was paymaster for a copper company, told how the U-boat was first sighted about six miles away by a patrol Liberator. The weather was hazy and the sub evidently was unaware of its danger until the Liberator was only half a mile away. Then it tried to crash dive, but the conning tower was plainly visible as the big American bomber zoomed not more than 150 feet above the water.

Claims Damage Only.

"I released the bombs," Colburn said, "and while I make no claims except that I damaged the U-boat—that I know—the tall gunner insists he saw it blown to smithereens, and débris and oil on the water afterward."

The prosaic story of a successful attack emphasizes the monotony of routine submarine patrol, which is broken only when a U-boat is sighted or when the patrol plane itself is attacked by Junkers-88s, long distance fighter-bombers.

These actions are only a matter of seconds, while the patrol itself lasts from 4 to 14 hours during which the 10 men in the plane must be constantly on the alert. The tall gunner, for example, must crouch in one position all this time and never relax his watch, for enemy patrols also are busy. There are days when the patrols fail to see anything and others when submarines are sighted, but too late to prevent the subs from crash diving successfully.

Share with British.

This command is working directly under the British and is still sharing with British comrades both the airdrome and the officers' mess.

There are many midwesterners in the group, including Lt. Joseph P. Schilling, a pilot, of Champaign, Ill., who used to be a watchmaker, and Staff Sergt. Harold E. Russell, 20 years old, of 4512 Sheridan road, Chicago, who has become an expert radio operator.

Another is Pvt. Thomas H. Ives, 35, of Oak Park, Ill., who two years ago was a sales manager and is now a radio maintenance expert. Then there is James Woodrum, 38, of Jamestown, Ind., who switched from superintending an automobile shop to aircraft inspection back in 1920. Still another is Technical Sergt. Roy C. Gilmore, of Wheatland, Ind. He was a farmer and coal miner in 1941 when he joined up, but now is a radio operator.

CREDITED WITH SUB SINKING.

Lt. Irving T. Colburn, 24 years old, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Cullen I. Colburn, 4309 North Keeler avenue. He graduated from Carl Schurz High school and North Park junior college. He enlisted in the air corps in February, 1941, and spent 11 months in Newfoundland. Two months ago he was transferred to England. In a news dispatch last Jan. 13, he was credited with sinking a U-boat in the Bay of Biscay.

Sergt. Harold E. Russell is a brother of Mrs. William Edwards, 511 Emlyn place, East Chicago, Ind. He was born in La Salle, Ill. He enlisted in the army Dec. 26, 1941, and was stationed in Florida until recently.

BURNS TO DEATH IN FLAT.

Joseph Bonura, 65 years old, unemployed, died of suffocation and burns yesterday when flames from a small stove set fire to his three room flat in the rear of 557 Cabrini street, apparently while he was asleep.

DAY CHILD CARE CONTROL BACKED BY LEGION GROUP

Local administration of agencies for day care of children of working mothers, with those who benefit paying for such service to eliminate charity, was advocated yesterday in closing resolutions of the Area D child welfare conference of the American Legion and affiliated organizations. The two day session in Hotel Sherman drew delegates from 13 midwest states.

By its stand for local supervision the conference approved state legislation to provide proper investigation, certification, and inspection of nurseries and children's homes. Another resolution opposed employment of mothers, however, unless absolutely necessary to meet family emergencies.

Increasing juvenile delinquency was blamed on lack of responsibility placed on children in homes and schools, and the conferees pledged themselves to more energetic participation in recreation programs and facilities to combat the problem.

Open McKibbin Headquarters

In Hotel La Salle

For three hours yesterday thousands of Chicago Republicans marched thru the receiving line at the campaign headquarters in the La Salle hotel. In the line were George B. McKibbin, candidate for mayor; Morgan L. Fitch, candidate for city treasurer; Henry D. Lindblad, candidate for city clerk; and Patrick B. Prescott Jr., aspirant to a vacancy on the Municipal court bench.

In a radio speech last night, Arthur F. Albert, also a Repubican candidate for mayor, charged that Mayor Kelly, for the purposes of this campaign, has deserted the New Deal.

"You haven't heard him lately boasting that he is spokesman for the New Deal in Illinois," said Albert.

CITY'S CHURCHES MARK BOY SCOUT FOUNDING TODAY

Services in observance of national Boy Scout week, which started yesterday and will continue thru Friday, are planned in many Chicago churches today. Tomorrow is the anniversary of the founding of the Boy Scout movement 33 years ago in England by the late Robert Baden-Powell.

Approximately 25,000 boys in the Chicago area are members of 1,000 Boy Scout troops, Sea Scout ships or Cub packs, and they will have their own unit programs this week, it was said yesterday at their Chicago headquarters. The annual message from President Roosevelt will not be broadcast this year, but will be read at meetings to be held tomorrow night by most troops.

An Indian ceremonial dance was held by four Boy Scouts at the University of Chicago's Home for Crippled Children, as they inducted a new member yesterday. He is Paul Pontjeris, 14 years old, Gary, Ind., who walks with crutches. Two of the boys require wheel chairs.

Federal Judge Lenroot, 74, Obtains License to Wed

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—Federal Judge Irvine Lenroot, 74 years old, of Washington, D. C., former United States senator from Wisconsin, obtained a license today to marry Miss Eleanor Von Eltz, 48, a real estate agent. They will be married in New York next Tuesday.

'NINE YOUNG MEN' UNITE IN SENATE TO DIG UP 'TRUTH'

1st Term Republicans Get Together for Study.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6 (AP).—A powerful new group—"The Nine Young Men"—has emerged as a factor in the senate.

The nine new Republican senators say their election over experienced incumbents indicates deep dissatisfaction over the way the nation is being run, and they intend to do something about it.

So they are working together, studying together, gathering weekly for lunch—and, significantly, they already have voted as a unit more than once.

They will attend a dinner tomorrow night at which the guest of honor will be former President Herbert Hoover, here to testify before a senate committee investigating man power. Host will be William R. Castle, assistant secretary of state under Hoover.

Ferguson in Group.

The nine young men—some really aren't so young, but they laughingly acknowledge the name—have no formal organization. They are Senators C. Douglass Buck [Del.], Harlan J. Bushfield [S. D.], Homer Ferguson [Mich.], Albert W. Hawkes [N. J.], E. H. Moore [Okla.], Chapman Revercomb [W. Va.], Edward V. Robertson [Wyo.], Kenneth S. Wherry [Neb.], and George A. Wilson [Ia.]. All but one displaced a Democrat. Wherry succeeded the veteran George Norris, Nebraska Independent.

Oddly, their luncheons grew out of a treat by Vice President Henry A. Wallace, who some time ago invited all freshmen senators to a noon "get-together."

Since then the nine have met regularly in a private capitol dining room known as the Vandenberg room.

Counseled by Vandenberg.

Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg [R., Mich.], for whom the room is named, might qualify as godfather for the nine. They consult him frequently and recall that he once was the sparkplug of a similar group of outspoken senate newcomers—"The Young Turks"—of more than a decade ago.

"We're not organizing to upset anything," Ferguson declared in an interview. "We're not here as politicians, and I don't believe there is one among us who cares a rap whether he comes back. We just want to get at the truth—and truth is the hardest thing in the world to find."

STEAL HOSIERY WORTH $200.

Chester Bernstein, manager of the Eastern Hosiery company, 212 West Adams street, told Central police yesterday burglars broke a display window and took $200 worth of hosiery.

Brazil Joins Allies as Full Partner in War on Axis

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Feb. 6 (AP).—Brazil joined the allied nations today as a full partner against the axis in a move which places this country at war against Japan as well as Germany and Italy. Brazil previously had been formally at war only against the European axis partners. The decision to sign the pact was reached at a meeting of the cabinet with President Getulio Vargas, who recently conferred with President Roosevelt.

PLANT ERECTED FOR MAKING OF BUNA S RUBBER

Method Is One Used for German Army.

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 6.—An American pilot plant for a German process of rubber production, proved by a decade of successful operation abroad, is nearing completion, 14 months after Pearl Harbor. This process is different from those planned in the government's 750 million dollar program, which will use mainly new methods. Some are now considered by federal engineers as of speculative merit.

The introduction of the German process into America is being financed by private capital. It is a joint enterprise of the Celanese corporation and the United States Industrial Alcohol company, both with headquarters here.

Will Make Buna S.

The pilot plant, under construction at Cumberland, Md., will cost approximately half a million dollars and will produce about two tons of butadiene a day. Butadiene is the main ingredient of the buna S rubber on the tires of Hitler's army.

Rubber Director William M. Jeffers has overcome the companies' priority difficulties and it was announced the plant will be in operation next month.

The butadiene is to be obtained by heat treatment from 1-3 butylene gycol, made by hydrogenation from aldol, which is produced from acetaldehyde. The chemicals do not have any other names, so the description is unavoidably technical. Acefadehyde is a big brother of formaldehyde.

The Germans obtain their acetaldehyde by hydration of acetylene made from carbide produced from coke and limestone. The Celanese corporation makes acetaldehyde by oxidation of natural gas. The same chemical is made commercially by the United States Industrial Alcohol company by oxidizing alcohol. Acetaldehyde is used by both companies in making various chemicals for wartime and peacetime industries. Butadiene will be just one more end product.

The laboratory research by the two private industries, according to reports from government engineers, has improved the German process over the last available data. The yield has been increased and the purity of the product has been bettered.

"The next development, if the pilot lives up to expectations," said Glenn Haskell, president of United States Industrial Alcohol, "is for the government, thru its defense plant corporation to build a several million dollar plant for production with this process in quantities of thousands of tons per year. Of course if the other processes, those developed in America or borrowed from Poland or Russia, prove to be better than our entry we will have invested half a million mainly in experience."

Tribune Is Pioneering.

George Schneider, vice president and chief chemist of Celanese, emphasized that the source of acetaldehyde makes no difference in the final product. It makes no difference whether it comes from natural gas, in fields where it is now wasted, or from alcohol. The alcohol, he said, can be made from grains or from petroleum or from wastes of American forestry, including the sulphite liquor waste at woodpulp mills from which THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE is pioneering a recovery of alcohol at its paper mills at Thorold, Canada.

"Economy will determine the base source," said Schneider, "and the economic outlook for the rest of the war and for the post-war reconstruction period is rapidly taking shape."

5TH WARD DEMOCRATS SWING TO LINDHEIMER, BUT MOSS WON'T QUIT

Charging that the regular Democratic organization in the 5th ward had withdrawn its support after giving him its indorsement, Bertram B. Moss, independent candidate for alderman in the large south side ward, said yesterday that he would remain in the race despite promises and threats in a "crusade in behalf of the decent people of the 5th ward."

Moss predicted that the meeting called for today at Democratic ward headquarters, 1503 East 55th street, by David Eichner, ward committeeman, would result in public announcement of withdrawal of the indorsement given him previously and approval of Horace G. Lindheimer, rival candidate.

"I was indorsed by the regular 5th ward Democratic organization as well as by other organizations and individuals in the ward," Moss said. "I was approved by P. A. Nash and by Eichner. Recently Eichner came to me and told me if I would withdraw it would be worth my while. When I refused he said he would have to support Lindheimer.

"The record of Lindheimer as former ward committeeman, when the ward was overrun with gambling and vice, and as county treasurer, is well known. It was well known to Nash and to Eichner, when he first asked for their indorsement and was refused. Whatever happened to change them, there are many decent organizations and thousands of individuals in the ward who are still with me and I am sticking in the race to prevent the return of Lindheimerism to the 5th ward."

POLICE SURVEY 50 AT RITES FOR ESTELLE CAREY

Fifty persons, half of them friends and relatives, attended private funeral services for Miss Estelle Carey, 34 years old, a dice girl and gangster's sweetheart, in the chapel at 3419 North Clark street. She was beaten and burned to death last Tuesday in her apartment at 512 Addison street.

Capt. William Drury and several other policemen were at the chapel to view the persons attending the services. Capt. Drury said he thought it possible some suspicious person connected with the unsolved murder might appear. Among those attending the services were Mr. and Mrs. John Carey, mother and stepfather of the slain girl, and Earl M. Weymer, 900 North Michigan avenue, who spent an evening with Miss Carey shortly before she was slain.

HOUSE MEMBERS TO DRAFT FIGHT FOR NEWSPAPERS

Delegates from 16 States Invited to Rally.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—Rep. Fred Bradley [R., Mich.] today invited the congressional delegations from 16 paper manufacturing states to meet in his office on Monday to plan their course of legislative action in defense of the newspaper industry.

Rep. Fred Bradley.

Bradley's letter of invitation to his colleagues said there has been "an exodus of the currently limited number of workers in paper production" as a result of an announcement from the office of civilian supply that "surplus" man power can be taken from paper manufacturing by adding this occupation to the list of draft nondeferrables.

New Reduction Plan Reported.

"I am also reliably informed that the group downtown responsible for curtailment programs is hurrying to apply another 10 per cent reduction in the use of printing papers," the letter said. "Unless quick action is taken this will be done within 30 days."

Representatives from midwestern states invited to the rally include those from Wisconsin, Indiana, Michigan, and Minnesota. Those from New York, Pennsylvania, Florida, and New England and Pacific coast states also have been invited.

The method favored by this group in preliminary discussions is a resolution introduced in the house Wednesday by Rep. Charles A. Halleck [R., Ind.]. It calls for an investigation by the interstate and foreign commerce committees of a plan contemplated by alphabet agencies to substitute government labels for the trade names which are the familiar guide to purchases of civilian supplies.

Plot to Curb Press Charged

In speeches by Halleck, Bradley, and by Rep. Paul Shafer [R., Mich.] it was charged this label proposal was part of a plot to suppress a free press in America by eliminating the advertising revenue which makes papers independent of governmental control.

It was said suppression of the press is the first step taken by dictators to establish a totalitarian administration.

The resolution is believed by supporters to be broad enough so the investigation can cover other asserted administration attacks on the press. These have included regulations, curtailments, censorship, and prosecutions, including the current prosecution of the Associated Press.

100 SEE LOWRY RELINQUISH HELM AT GREAT LAKES

Capt. Frank J. Lowry was "piped ashore" from duty as commanding officer at the United States naval training station at Great Lakes yesterday in an informal gathering of 100 of the station's officers. He left immediately for Washington where he will report for sea duty.

He will be succeeded this week by Capt. Robert R. M. Emmet, who was decorated with the navy cross during the World war for directing laying of a mine barrage in the North sea.

Capt. Emmet was born in Wilton, N. H., entered the United States Naval academy at Annapolis in 1904, and served as naval attaché at The Hague, Netherlands, in 1927-'28.

RATIONING BOARD AID OUSTED FOR CRITICIZING OPA

Objects to Red Tape; He's Fired Without Hearing.

Moline, Ill., Feb. 6 [Special].—Robert H. Lundahl, chief clerk of Rock Island county rationing board 6282-1 since last July, said today he has been peremptorily discharged by Carter H. Jenkins, state administrator for the office of price administration.

The discharge followed a talk which Lundahl made Jan. 12 before the Moline Kiwanis club in which he criticized the intricacy of OPA regulations. He told the Kiwanians that OPA rules were written by college professors in language so technical that laymen had difficulty in understanding them. He also said that "no one man knows all there is to know about rationing."

Given 5 Days to Answer.

Lundahl said he received a letter from Jenkins a week ago warning him of his impending discharge and setting forth five specific accusations which he was ordered to answer within five days. He said the accusations included a charge that he had made "injudicious and embarrassing statements" and another charge that he was guilty of "mismanagement" in operating the rationing office.

"I wrote to Jenkins denying all the charges," Lundahl said, "and today I received notification of my discharge without any hearing. The 12 members of the local board are angry about it and want me to appeal. The heads of the Association of Commerce and the school administration have also told me they will stand back of me."

Lundahl said he will decide Monday whether he will file notice of an appeal. Regulations provide for a hearing before a board named by the state OPA director, he said.

No Pay for 6 Months.

Lundahl, who is 54 years old, served as county rationing director without pay from January, 1942, until July. At that time the board was created and he was appointed executive secretary with a salary of $2,000 a year. The title was later changed to chief clerk.

"The salary doesn't make any difference to me," Lundahl said. "I am a retired business man and I was glad to serve without pay because I thought I was helping my country. After the board was appointed I remained in the office for the same reason."

CADETS NEAR END OF TRAINING AT CALUMET SCHOOL

The fourth class of naval aviation cadets enrolled under the navy's V-5 program since July, 1942, will complete its elementary flight training next week at the Calumet air service school at the Gary airport, Nicholas Jankovich, chief pilot of the war training service unit at Gary, announced yesterday.

The cadets, who received a minimum of 35 hours of flight instruction under Jankovich and 240 hours of ground school instruction at Gary Junior college, will move to the Navy Preflight school at Iowa City to continue their work as fledglings.

Gary's school is one of 12 units, formerly known as civilian pilot training bases, in the Chicago area.

VOTE CRACKPOTS OUT OF CAPITAL, SUMNERS URGES

Make Government Fit for Boys in War, He Asks.

Rep. Hatton W. Sumners [D., Tex.], chairman of the house judiciary committee, warned Washington burocrats in a speech here yesterday that "plain, old fashioned people in this country, thinking in a plain, old fashioned way are going to take charge of the government and again restore democracy."

In an address before a joint session of the Illinois County and Probate Judges' association and the Illinois Circuit and Superior Judges' association in the Hotel Sherman Sumners called upon American voters to bring government back to the people.

"Our boys are dying on battlefields all over the world and the ones that do come back are going to have a government fit to come back to," Sumners said amid great applause. "The American people are awakening at last."

Facing Facts of Burocracy.

Except by conquest, no nation has ceased to be free unless its people lost their capacity to govern, he said.

"Only a great people fit to be free can be free. The American people are now facing facts of burocratic government. They have been asleep for a while, but they are awakening.

"This democracy is not going to die. The American people are fit to be free."

Sumners told the judges that American citizens have little voice in the government, "and the time has come when congress again must perform its legislative functions as provided by the Constitution."

Common People on Top.

"Everything in this nation is planned for us by a bunch of burocrats," he asserted. "We have a planned economy, a planned this and a planned that, all planned by a bunch of crackpots who have been turned out of universities because of their cockeyed theories.

"But the common people are on top in this nation. Those burocrats in Washington are going to find our boots in the seat of their breeches."

Sumners appealed to both Republicans and Democrats to halt the trend of burocratic government.

"In this fight to restore democracy we must not think of ourselves as Republicans or Democrats, but as American citizens," Sumners said. "We have a community responsibility and a community opportunity to preserve this great system of free government.

Close Two Day Session.

"Our Constitution is not in the Congressional library. It is a living thing. God intended that people should be free, and under God, our boys who survive the war are going to come back to a democracy."

More than 130 judges attended the two day session, which closed after Sumners' address. Judge Win G. Knoch of Naperville was elected president of the Illinois Circuit and Superior Judges' association, while Judge D. M. Gregg of Wenona was named head of the Illinois County and Probate Judges' association.

Knoch succeeded Judge Frank B. Leonard of Champaign. Gregg took over the office formerly held by Judge William G. Peacock of Morris.

Other newly elected officers of the associations are:

Circuit and Superior judges—Judge A. J. Scheineman of Sterling, vice president, and Judge Philip J. Finnegan of Chicago, secretary-treasurer.

County and Probate judges—Judge Virgil O. Whipp, Petersburg, first vice president; Judge Russell W. Keeney, Glen Ellyn, second vice president, and Judge Rodney L. Stuart, Galesburg, secretary-treasurer.

MACHINIST DIES OF INJURIES IN AUTO COLLISION

Andrew Bandura, 50 years old, 3566 West 182d street, Lansing, a machinist, who was injured Friday night when his automobile collided with another car at Field drive and Jackson boulevard, died yesterday in St. Luke's hospital. The other car was driven by Max Loewensohn, 44, of 1635 Fargo avenue.

D. T. Woods, a chemist living at 258 Southcote road, Riverside, saved his life yesterday by jumping from his automobile, stalled on the Herbert road crossing in Riverside, a few seconds before it was struck and demolished by a Chicago bound Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad passenger train. He said he saw the train approaching but kept trying until the last moment to start his car because it was worth $750. After the crash he sold it for junk for $30.

Constantine Drapanes, 44, of 5000 Princeton avenue, a postoffice clerk, died in Evangelical hospital of injuries received when a hit and run driver struck him in front of his home Jan. 31.

Up to 2:30 p. m. yesterday 52 persons had been killed by automobiles in Cook county since Jan. 1. Of these, 48 were killed in Chicago, where 1,312 were injured in traffic accidents during the same period.

ROGGE IS NAMED U. S. PROSECUTOR IN SEDITION CASE

Succeeds Maloney, Target of Congress Blast.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—O. John Rogge, former assistant attorney general in charge of the criminal division of the department of justice, today was named special assistant in charge of the prosecution of the sedition conspiracy case.

O. John Rogge.

The appointment was announced by Atty. Gen. Francis Biddle. He will assume his new duties Wednesday and begin preparation of the government's case against 34 defendants in the alleged "morale" conspiracy trial which has been widely criticized.

Sen. Burton K. Wheeler [D., Mont.] has assailed the proceedings as contrary to American principles of justice and fair play. He also expressed grave doubts that the government has a case against the defendants.

Out of Maloney's Hands.

Following blasts by Wheeler and other members of congress the prosecution of the case was taken out of the hands of William Power Maloney, assistant attorney general, who conducted the grand jury investigation which brought about the indictments.

Maloney was appointed chief of the trial section of the criminal division last Jan. 27. This appointment was regarded by his friends and critics alike as a "kick upstairs" to get him out of the sedition case.

Justice officials described Rogge as "a vigorous prosecutor." His most important litigation as head of the criminal division of the justice department was the series of mail fraud and graft conspiracy cases in Louisiana, which resulted in conviction of former Gov. Richard Leche, Seymour Weiss and other members of the political machine built by the late Sen. Huey Long.

Graduate of U. of Illinois.

Rogge was born on a farm in Case county, Illinois in 1903. He was graduated from the University of Illinois in 1922 and from the Harvard law school three years later. His record in the law school attracted the attention of Thomas G. Corcoran, then a White House favorite, who is also a Harvard graduate.

In 1937 Rogge was appointed special counsel for the securities and exchange commission and in 1939 he was named assistant attorney general in charge of criminal cases. This appointment was a surprise in Chicago where it was known that Rogge had voted the Socialist ticket in 1932.

Resigns to Join Utility.

In 1941 Rogge resigned from the department of justice to become assistant general counsel of the Associated Gas and Electric company. It was reported that Rogge was forced out because he had shown no regard for politics in his prosecutions.

Some New Dealers opposed his Louisiana prosecutions on the ground that it tended to drive votes from the administration. He also drew New Deal wrath for ordering an Illinois grand jury to investigate a financial transaction of former Sen. James M. [Strong Box] Slattery with an Illinois utility. New Dealers blamed him for defeat of the Democratic state ticket in Illinois.

5 OUSTED UNION OFFICERS FIGHT STEP AS ILLEGAL

Five ousted officials of the Track Layers', Construction Workers', and Repairmen's union, local 1099, who were evicted from office by petition proceedings Friday night, charged yesterday the action was illegal.

Nine hundred members of the local protested Friday that they had had no election for president in 24 years and asked for an accounting of the treasury into which they said more than a million dollars had been paid and which now shows a balance of $105. Sam Luzzo, president, thru Alfred O'Brill, executive secretary, questioned legality of the vote and said the money is all accounted for. "We have benefits and national federation dues to pay, and we must pay our officers. They don't work for nothing," O'Brill said.

The officers unseated, besides Luzzo and O'Brill, are: Charles Mathews, recording secretary; Tony Shanel, vice president, and Novak Rosevich, business agent. The ouster action was started by a group headed by Angelo De Iulis and Jack Veich. Petitions circulated early in the week were returned at Friday's meeting.

CHILD AND MOTHER BURNED.

Joy Corcoran, 3½ years old, and her mother, Mrs. Violet Corcoran, were burned yesterday, the child seriously, when a gas stove flame set fire to her clothing in her home at 7758 Wood street.

MOVE TO RATION CANNED MILK IN ABOUT 3 MONTHS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6 (AP).—Rationing of canned milk will begin in about three months, it was learned today. It was said shortages of evaporated milk have appeared in many localities, caused partly by large demands of the fighting services and lend-lease, and rationing has been regarded here as inevitable. Claude R. Wickard, food administrator, has assigned powers for the task to the office of price administration.

It was understood one reason for waiting about three months to start the program is that the government wants to see how the point system for rationing canned fruits and vegetables works. It was said perhaps the same coupons will be used, altho new ration books will be available by then.

Now is the time to apply fertilizer for your spring and summer victory gardens. CHARGE BILLIONS ON 'WAR' BUDGET BUY NO BULLETS

Byrd Group Rips Evasions by 'Spendthrifts.'

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6 [Special]. A sweeping indictment of the President's $109,000,000,000 budget, charging that nonmilitary items are concealed among war expenditures and that certain anticipated expenditures, which will send the budget over the $109,000,000,000 figure, are not mentioned at all, is being prepared by the Byrd committee, committee sources revealed today.

A tentative draft of a detailed analysis of the 1944 budget is being prepared by staff members of the joint committee on reduction of nonessential federal expenditures. It will serve as a "guide" for members of appropriations committees before they take action on the bill.

Details of Charges.

As now outlined the analysis will condemn the proposed budget, submitted to congress by President Roosevelt on Jan. 11, on the following specific grounds:

1. That, in numerous respects, the budget is "misleading" and "tells only part of the truth."
2. That certain nonwar items are included as war expenditures and, the differentiation between nonwar and war expenditures is not accurate.
3. That the failure to list all anticipated expenditures makes the $109,000,000,000 figure meaningless, since total disbursements may exceed this amount by "billions."

The joint economy committee is considering recommending to the senate and house appropriations committees that a careful study be made of how the service charge on the vast public debt is carried. A belief is indicated that some of this service charge is carried in the proposed budget as a "war expense."

The preliminary draft takes the position, in effect, that "every single bit of inefficiency in the vast, overstaffed scores of government agencies is waste and therefore nonessential spending."

Assail "Spendthrift Habit."

In his budget message the President mentioned the necessity of continuing expenditures for the control of white pine blister rust to protect the nation's timber resources. The preliminary draft of the joint economy committee's staff criticizes the expenditure as a "spendthrift habit" and an "entrenched burocratic practice" on the part of the department of agriculture.

It suggests that, if the trees haven't been protected after many years of spending millions of dollars for control of white pine blister rust, it might be better to spend some of that money now "to buy bullets with which to fight the war."

AGNETE LOUISE WILFRED.

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—A young West Nyack, N. Y., girl has pleaded guilty to a charge of impersonating an officer in the United States navy, E. E. Conroy, chief New York FBI agent, said today.

He identified her as Agnete Louise Wilfred, 18 years old, a former student at Dana Hall, Wellesley, Mass. She told Conroy she purchased the uniform of a naval lieutenant because she told her parents she was in the navy and "I had to get the uniform to back up the story."

Conroy said the girl explained she obtained the uniform from a Brooklyn department store by a ruse. Bail of $500 was put up by her father, Thomas Wilfred, an artist.

GIVE UP HUNT FOR FLYER IN RENTED PLANE

Search was abandoned yesterday for Ted Rapala, 26 years old, a Chicago aviator, whose disappearance still was as much of a mystery as it was the day he took off from the American airport here four weeks ago. His mother, Mrs. Antoinette Rapala, 3116 Avondale avenue, airport officials, members of the civil aeronautics office, and the Illinois aeronautics commission agreed that the small training plane he rented at the airport for a farewell flight before joining the army may have crashed unseen into Lake Michigan. One theory, that he might have flown into Canada, was discounted when the search failed to bring any report of a possible landing to pick up gasoline. When the plane took off, it had gasoline enough to fly only 100 miles.

FOUND DEAD; HEATER BLAMED.

Joseph Dombrowski, 67 years old, 2867 Archer avenue, was found dead yesterday in his bed. He is believed to have been asphyxiated by the fumes of a coal heater in his room.

REPORT FUNDS ASSURED FOR SERVICE CENTER

The recreation center for service men at 1249 South Wabash avenue, formerly sponsored by the work projects administration, has gained a new lease on life, Miss Gladys Aspelmeyer, director of the center, said last night. Liquidation of the WPA had threatened the existence of the center.

Donations solicited by various women's clubs and other organizations, Miss Aspelmeyer said, have provided funds to keep the center alive.

The center depends upon voluntary contributions for its existence, she said. She issued an appeal for musical instruments, a juke box, books, magazines, and gameroom equipment. More than 25,000 service men were guests of the center during January, Miss Aspelmeyer said.

NEW SCRAP DRIVE BY PUPILS WILL OPEN TOMORROW

Chicago's 650,000 elementary and high school pupils tomorrow will begin a two week drive to collect scrap articles made of bronze, brass, and copper, the three metals needed most critically by war industry. The campaign will be climaxed by free movies for all contributors and election of a brass, a bronze, and a copper queen. The war labor board plans a national drive for these metals after the Chicago campaign, which will serve to fix quotas for urban areas.

SMOKES IN BED; DIES OF BURNS.

Louis Haynes, 33 years old, colored, of 309 East 59th street, a porter, died yesterday in County hospital of burns suffered Feb. 3 when the mattress caught fire while he was smoking in bed.

NEAR-ZERO COLD EXPECTED AFTER TOUCH OF SPRING

Rain and Snowstorm Put Mercury on Skids.

Swift transition in 12 hours from balmy spring weather to a howling storm—an extreme of the wide variety of Chicago weather that develops hardy midwesterners and some of the nation's most efficient soldiers—marked the beginning of a week-end that brought promise of brighter but colder days.

From a high temperature of 50 degrees at 3:35 p. m. Friday, with a warm sun melting the accumulated snow and soft breezes causing Chicagoans to shed their overcoats, the weather changed suddenly to a thunderstorm and then to a driving snow that brought handicaps to transportation systems and pedestrians.

Near Zero Drop Predicted.

The storm started early yesterday with large flakes but thinned out during the day as it was driven by a hard wind. The mercury was expected to reach a minimum temperature of 12 degrees above zero early today and a slight rise was predicted for this afternoon.

Swift changes in weather such as Chicago experienced are an important factor in the hardy development of men and women in the midwest, according to Owen T. Lay, officer in charge of the Chicago weather bureau. To this he credited the quick growth of Chicago and the fact that Chicago soldiers are giving a good account of themselves in the heat of Guadalcanal and the cold of Alaska.

Quotes Noted Authorities.

Lay quoted the late Dr. J. Paul Goode of the University of Chicago and the late Henry J. Cox, professor of meteorology of the United States weather bureau, for confirmation of his contention that sturdier people from areas that are subject to sudden changes in temperature work better in both industrial and military life. Hot temperatures of the south cause sluggishness, Lay contended, and in the north too much energy is used up in fighting the cold.

"The people of the middle west have long been known for their sturdiness, their initiative, and their energy," Lay declared, "and I think our variable weather with swift changes from warm to cold has done much to build up these strong bodies and alert minds. It is showing up also among our fighters, for the best of them come from the middle west."

The thunderstorm of Friday night brought .57 inches of rain which, added to the melting snow of the afternoon, flooded highways at many points, turned fields into miniature lakes and, where drainage systems were clogged with ice, flooded basements and caused other minor damage. Colder temperatures during the night turned the rain into snow, slowing elevated and surface lines in yesterday morning's rush hour because of hampered vision.

The surface lines put snow sweepers into operation on its bus routes and the Chicago Motor Coach company, sanding its routes to prevent skidding, reported operations near normal. The snow interfered only slightly with train schedules but the Chicago Motor club warned motorists to watch for patches of snow that might camouflage ice sheets.

January, 1943, was the fourth snowiest January in the history of the Chicago weather bureau, 20.8 inches falling during the month. The average for January is 9 inches. The heaviest downfall was in January, 1918, when 42.5 inches fell, one storm sending drifts as high as light poles. In 1886 there was a total of 26.7 inches and 24.7 inches in 1939. This year there were only 11 days without snow thruout the month and subzero temperatures were recorded on three days, Jan. 20 setting an all time record for that date with a minimum of 13 degrees below zero.

Lt. Frank M. Hadden, 24, Reported Killed in Action

Mr. and Mrs. Ray W. Hadden, 5665 Fulton street, were notified yesterday that their son, Lt. Frank Murray Hadden, 24 years old, has been killed in action in the South Pacific. He was reported missing in action on Dec. 29. Lt. Hadden was a graduate of Austin High school and joined the Illinois National Guard in 1937. He was inducted into service in March, 1941, and embarked for overseas service in January, 1942. His grandmother, Mrs. James Fox, also survives.

POISON KILLS 2; POLICE HUNT 3D TO SAVE HIS LIFE

Police were searching yesterday for an unidentified man they said is in danger of death if he drank some fluid he and four friends believed was alcohol. Two of his friends are dead and two others were near death in County hospital. All five drank from a jug they found in an alley at 224 East Hubbard street, police said.

The men believed the jug contained alcohol, police said. Dr. William D. McNally, coroner's toxicologist, said it contained a fluid poison. Walter Kranz, 55 years old, and William Butwil, 57, both of 436 North State street, are dead. Joseph Krettler, 55, and a man known only as "Herman" are expected to die.

Police said Butwil and Kranz found the jug and invited Krettler, "Herman," and a fifth man to join them in drinking from it. The fifth man, whom police are seeking, left with a pint of the fluid, saying he intended to drink it elsewhere.

20 Blood Donors Sought for Boy, 13, Ill 7 Months

Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Tripp of Harvard, Ill., yesterday appealed for 20 blood donors for their son, Jerry, who is critically ill at Illinois Research hospital, 1819 Polk street. Weather conditions made it impossible for relatives and friends, also of Harvard, to travel to Chicago to be donors. Jerry, who is 13 years old, has been a victim of Bright's disease for the last seven months. Hospital authorities asked that volunteers contact the hospital for appointments.

ASSERTS YOUNG THUGS OVERFLOW SHERIDAN SCHOOL

Crowded conditions at the Sheridan model prison branch of the Illinois State Training School for Boys prevent the transfer of all possible troublemakers from the institution near St. Charles, Russell W. Ballard, managing director of both schools, said yesterday.

Replying to a charge by Chief Justice John A. Sbarbaro of the Criminal court that young hoodlums sentenced to the Sheridar security unit had been sent to St. Charles instead, Ballard explained that only 45 incorrigibles could be accommodated at Sheridan.

"The capacity is 60," Ballard said, "but we were forced to turn part of the Sheridan prison into living quarters for employés. We can't get priorities to build homes for the workers, and moving them into Sheridan was the only solution."

Ballard, however, said Judge Sbarbaro's charge was based on a misunderstanding.

"As we interpret the law, a boy can be sentenced to the Illinois Training school, not specifically to St. Charles or Sheridan. After they arrive at St. Charles they are placed in quarantine for 30 days and are put thru a diagnostic clinic, which determines to which institution they are to be sent."

Dough Mixing Machine Injuries Fatal to Boy

Rocco Pergola, 13 years old, 1431 Erie street, died yesterday in St. Elizabeth's hospital of injuries suffered Friday when he was drawn into a dough mixing machine he was cleaning at the Scavo bakery, 1444 Ohio street. Mrs. Jennie Scavo, owner of the bakery, said the boy, who did odd jobs at the bakery, started to scrape dough from the machine while it was running, and the machinery caught his arm.

A Message to Victory Gardeners:

FOR GARDENERS of the Chicago area, who this year must grow vegetables as a patriotic duty, we have provided large stocks of seed of the same high quality we have supplied for 66 years.

We cannot expand our store space and clerical staff to the same extent, however, and already it is apparent that the demand will be far greater than we normally handle.

By buying early, before the spring rush, you will insure prompt service and a selection from undepleted stocks.

No one can tell with certainty how great the seed demand may be. Careful planning of your garden and the purchase only of the seed you need will help insure that no one else shall go without.

In Vaughan's Gardening Illustrated for 1943 is embodied a Victory Garden Guide, which includes data enabling you to plan a garden for continuous abundant supply sufficient for your family needs without wasteful surpluses.

If Back Aches or Ankles Swell, Flush Your Kidneys

If you're feeling out o'sorts, Get Up Nights or suffer from Burning Passages, Backache, Swollen Ankles, Nervousness, Rheumatic Pains, Dizziness, Circles Under Eyes and feel worn-out, the cause may be non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles.

Worry, Colds, working too hard, or overeating or drinking may create an excess of Acids and overload your Kidneys so that they need help to flush out poisonous wastes that might otherwise undermine your health.

Help Kidneys Remove Acids

Nature provides the Kidneys to clean and purify your blood and to remove excess Acids. The Kidneys contain about nine million tiny tubes or filters through which the heart pumps blood about 200 times an hour, night and day, so it's easy to see that they may get tired and slow down when overloaded.

Fourteen years ago a practicing physician's prescription called Cystex was made available to the public through drug stores, making it easy and inexpensive to help thousands suffering from non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles in these three simple ways: 1. Help the Kidneys remove excess acids which may become poisoning and irritating. 2. To palliate burning and smarting of the urinary passages, and bladder irritation. 3. Help the Kidneys flush out wastes which may become poisonous if allowed to accumulate, thus aiding nature in stimulating an increase of energy, which may easily make you feel years younger.

Guaranteed Trial Offer

Usually, in non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder disorders the very first dose of Cystex goes right to work helping the Kidneys flush out excess Acids, poisons and wastes. And this cleansing, purifying Kidney action, in just a day or so, may easily make you feel younger, stronger and better than in years. An iron clad guarantee insures an immediate refund of all your money unless you are completely satisfied. Get Cystex from your druggist today for only 35c.

AUTHOR'S NOTE: Cystex is produced under the direction of a licensed physician for The Knox Co., one of the largest drug companies in the world with laboratory connections in the U.S.A., Canada, England, Australia and South America. The guarantee of money back unless satisfied is enforced 100% and is a dependable form of assurance to all users of Cystex.

BEFORE BUYING B-COMPLEX VITAMINS

Make This Quick 2 Minute Test That Shows How To Get The Most For Your Money

Here's a quick easy way to tell if you are getting the most for your money when you buy your B Complex vitamins. In less than 2 minutes, using the chart at the right, by simply comparing the contents of any capsule, you will get startling proof that you, too, have been paying much too much.

B Complex vitamins as generally sold, consist of 5 separate vitamins, processed into one capsule. The only factor that distinguishes one vitamin capsule from another is the amount or number of units of the several vitamins present. As the vital test of quality in vitamins is the number of units, it is easy to see the capsule with the larger number of units is the capsule possessing the greater value. The more units the more quality. The fewer the units, the poorer the quality. Any competent authority on vitamins will corroborate this statement.

On this true basis of determining value, VITAMIN-QUOTA B COMPLEX vitamins can be shown to be the most outstanding value in America. Here is how you can prove it to your own satisfaction. The chart at the right shows the units and price of VITAMIN-QUOTA B Complex capsules. In the blank spaces, write the corresponding contents and costs of any other vitamin product you wish. This amazing comparison test shows not only that there are more units of the several vitamins in the VITAMIN-QUOTA B Complex capsules but their cost is as much as 40% less.

Don't Be Fooled!

Check Value of B-Complex Vitamins This Simple, Easy Way

Vitamins and Units In Each Vitamin-Quota B-Complex Capsule	List Units In Any Other Product
B_1 1000 USP Units
B_2 2000 Gammas
B_6 500 Gammas
Niacin Amide 20 Milligrams
Calcium Pantothenate 2000 Gammas
Price 25 Capsules $.75
Price 100 Capsules $2.50
Price 250 Capsules $5.25

Wise buyers first compare units or gammas, then price. Such tests conclusively prove Vitamin-Quota values are unequaled anywhere.

GUARANTEE

VITAMIN-QUOTA B COMPLEX CAPSULES are sold by one of the world's largest distributors of vitamins. Submit the formula as it appears on the chart at the right to any physician or expert on vitamins. If it is not confirmed that this is a truly outstanding value in terms of units and cost, every penny you spent will be returned to you. VITAMIN-QUOTA B COMPLEX Capsules are chemically tested and biologically assayed by independent laboratories. These reports are available upon request.

COST OF BEATING AXIS NEARS HALF TRILLION DOLLARS

U.S. Bureau Figures We'll Pay 50 Pct. of It.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—The cost of defeating Adolf Hitler will reach 500 billion dollars—half a trillion dollars—if the war continues thru the year. And the United States will pay half of it.

This estimate was released today by the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce. It was prepared by Leon S. Wellstone of the bureau's division of commercial and economic information.

115 Billions This Year.

He estimated the war already has cost all belligerents more than 400 billion dollars. In the current year the United States plans to spend 97 billion dollars and the United Kingdom 18 billion dollars.

"The cost of Hitler, assuming that another year may pass before his downfall, will well exceed the staggering total of 500 billion dollars," he said.

The direct money cost of the last World war to all belligerents has been estimated at 300 billion dollars. Of this sum the United States spent 50 billion dollars. The estimate of the cost to the United States is exclusive of some 15 billion dollars of war debts owed the United States by foreign nations.

U. S. Is Leading Spender.

Altho the United States was the last of the great powers to enter the war, Wellstone revealed this country is leading the world in money spent in the struggle.

He listed expenditures as follows:
United States, $112,300,000,000.
United Kingdom, $58,200,000,000.
Canada, $4,814,000,000.
Soviet Union, $96,000,000,000.
France, $10,100,000,000.
Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, $2,620,000,000.
Netherlands, $889,000,000.
Belgium, $3,400,000,000.
Norway, $93,000,000.
Greece and Jugoslavia, $385,000,000.

To this amount the author adds a loss of 100 billion dollars in national income in axis conquered countries and the 108 billion dollar expenditures by Germany and Italy since Hitler came into power.

Spending on War

Length of the bars indicates approximate expenditures thus far for war made by several of the allied nations.

TEACHERS' UNION BOARD VOTES TO OUST SECRETARY

Ouster of Kermit Eby, executive secretary of the Chicago Teachers' union for the last five years, was voted yesterday by the executive board of the union after it finished hearing charges brought by officials of the union. He had been suspended 10 days ago.

The board's action will be considered by the house of representatives of the union on Feb. 17 for ratification or veto. Eby was voted a severance pay of six months' salary by the board.

The vote for discharge of Eby, who is not a member of the union but only a paid employé, was reached after a second day session lasting nine hours. The vote was 19 to 10 for discharge and 17 to 12 in finding him guilty of the charges presented. It was specified that Eby had been consistently insubordinate and had from time to time used his office in the union as a means of furthering his personal political leanings.

A free press stands as one of the great interpreters between the government and the people. To allow it to be fettered is to fetter ourselves.—United States Supreme Court.

OUR INTRODUCTION TO THE WORLD.

Lt. Andrew S. Rowan carried the message to Garcia. Elbert Hubbard wrote a journalistic sermon on the soldier who did not ask where Garcia was but found him. "By the Eternal! There is a man." The recent death of Col. Rowan at the age of 85 aroused more than one sentimental memory for Americans who were his younger contemporaries.

There comes first the recollection of some thrills—Dewey startling the nation by victory in strange waters, Hobson reviving the exploits of Decatur, T. R. and his Rough Riders, Sampson and Schley destroying the last of the Spanish ships which once had ruled the Western hemisphere. Altho it was strange to be fighting a European nation, the war might have been only a chapter in the defense of the western world. If Spain had not at the time still held a share of the European conquests in Asia our war of '98 would have introduced little that was new in policy. It would have been only an active period in the life of the Monroe Doctrine.

The name of the Philippines sent curious Americans to maps of a part of the world little known to them. Theretofore the Hawaiian Islands had been the political pillars of Hercules for the United States. Dewey's squadron opened up strange temptations which appeared in the Puritan garb of duty. There was talk of manifest destiny, but the Yankee could not have been beguiled into the far Pacific by maharajahs, dancing girls, temple bells, and crown jewels. He would have been ashamed to confess a desire for them. The tempter in a tall black hat with a black cravat beckoned to the health officer, school teacher, administrator, and lawgiver, as well as the business man to follow the man with a rifle.

Mr. Bryan shook his finger and raised his voice at these deviations and there were many who agreed with him that these were dangerous ways for a republic. Secretly we liked them but we quieted our conscience, when and if any. We were going in only to come out. That dodge had been worked before, but we meant it. It is curious that the retreat to get out of the liabilities which possession of the Philippines entailed and the trend into world-wide and unlimited liabilities should have been simultaneous. Uncle Sam seems to have been led in one direction by a pull on his coat collar and dragged in another by a clutch on his coattails.

Many shrewd Europeans watched American symptoms with absorbing self-interest. The American function had been understood to be one of receiving capital investments and adventurous or forlorn populations. In '98 there was recognition abroad that the United States, whether aware or not, was ready for another rôle. The British, observing that Germany as a new power was not friendly, wanted colonies and would be a rival on the sea, was destroying the equilibrium and might soon be dangerous, sought reinsurance in America.

England had awakened to the realization that it was isolated. Its two-way expansion in Africa, into the Transvaal and into the Sudan had brought disquieting events in train. Germany and France were angry. The kaiser, altho he had dropped Bismarck, was not a bad fellow until he sent the telegram of congratulations to Oom Paul Kruger following the suppression of the Jameson raid. Then Victoria's German grandson began to acquire his war guilt. The sequence of events with closely knit consequences explains a great deal of what happened to the United States.

In 1895 the German consul in Pretoria promised support to the Transvaal against Great Britain. The kaiser's telegram in 1896 underwrote the speech altho his government thought it intemperate. Six months after Wilhelm's outbreak the United States challenged Britain in Venezuela and the secretary of state, Richard Olney, declared that the fiat of this government was law in this hemisphere. In February, 1898, Germany authorized the construction of 12 battleships and 33 cruisers. In September of the same year Kitchener discovered French Maj. Marchand at Fashoda on the White Nile and ordered him out.

Within this period of two years Great Britain had found itself in trouble on three continents, close to war with four nations, and without a friend or ally. It was time to look about. The United States was then at war with Spain. That war was the answer to a diplomat's prayer. It was the opportunity for England's final liquidation of our Civil war. Olney's note had been a reverberation of the antipathies which must be overcome.

In Manila bay there was an incident which helped. Dewey had trouble with the German admiral whose squadron was more powerful than the American. If the Americans did not want the Philippines the Germans did. When Dewey was about to bombard the Spanish positions the British admiral moved his ships to a position between Dewey and the Germans. Later it was explained that he wanted a better seat for the show, but the maneuver carried a greater tale than that. Capt. Coghlan of the Raleigh, returning to New York, made an international incident by reciting: "Hoch! Der Kaiser!—Myself—und Gott."

The old English diplomacy here had been offish and supercilious. An evidence that it was to improve came when Washington was raised to a post worthy of an ambassador instead of a minister. The Germans did not believe that England could win America. They reasoned it out logically according to their wont. They thought that immigration admixtures had about obliterated the English tradition. It seemed impossible that the Germans in America and people of other blood, all politically active, would permit the accord the British wanted. The Irish alone were counted on to prevent it. The Germans were wrong, and not for the last time.

Much happened between the lesson to Ambassador Pauncefote that he did not rank the Vice President and the welcome to the king and queen in the White House. When the ambassador and his wife to their own astonishment made the first call on Mr. and Mrs. Hobart they made a diplomatic discovery of great importance. The country cousin was willing to go to town not only of a Saturday night with his six shooters but also of an afternoon for a cup of tea and some little cakes. This was the second discovery of America and worth more than the gold of the Incas. The British embassy became a charmed spot in Washington. The Richard Olney type disappeared in the state department. The Adams type disappeared in London. The English took up our ambassadors, few of whom could speak any foreign language, patronized them and introduced them into aristocratic society in which, of course, none of them was born, and thus pretty well took over our state department and our traveling millionaires.

Men of rank and tact were sent to Washington to capture and hold the foreign relations of the republic. The change in British policy which began nearly 50 years ago was the most brilliant and far seeing accomplishment in the modern history of Europe. The map of the world was not changed. It was preserved. The British empire was saved. Twice the United States has become a nation in arms to send troops abroad when one of Britain's European partners in war had jeopardized everything by failing to stand the test in conflict. Each time the republic has given all and asked for nothing. Now union with the empire is offered as by a superior to an inferior as a natural procedure and a proper finale.

At the turn of the century there were doubts whether the course embarked upon was good for the republic. The century is reaching its half way mark and still there are doubts.

THUNDERER OF THE PRAIRIE.

THE TRIBUNE is soon to celebrate its 100th birthday. For 96 years this newspaper has been active in reporting the news and in discussing the questions of the day. The objective of the editorial columns has been to set forth continuously a midwestern point of view with sufficient vigor to influence the course of affairs in this country. Our severest critics, and we have never lacked them thruout the century, have always conceded that in this purpose we have had a large measure of success.

Two circumstances go far to explain the great influence of this newspaper, even in its early years. In the first place, it was edited and directed by topflight men of their times in knowledge, in wisdom, and in courage. In the second place, its editors possessed the genius to create a medium capable of bringing their powers to bear upon public affairs.

Joseph Medill was one of the giants of the United States from the late 1850s well thru the '90s. He took a leading part in the creation of the Republican party. He was largely responsible for making Lincoln President. He was chosen by agreement of all parties as a delegate to the constitutional convention which drafted the present constitution of Illinois, and he was the outstanding member of the convention. When this city was burned to ashes he was the strong man who was elected mayor because all looked to him for leadership in rebuilding Chicago. He became an expert in monetary matters, and at the height of the controversy over the gold standard wrote about it almost every day. He made many thoughtful speeches during the greenback period following the Civil war. He was undoubtedly one of the principal architects of the American monetary system. By many people he was regarded as the best informed man of his time on public affairs, and was often mentioned for the Presidency, altho he was ineligible by reason of his Canadian birth.

THE TRIBUNE, under Medill's direction, was an instrument of immense national influence. Ida M. Tarbell, the historian of the '70s, '80s, and '90s, said that there were four newspapers in the country which were well informed about economic matters. These were two New York papers, the New York Tribune and the New York Post; the Springfield, Mass., Republican, and THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

West of New York there was one newspaper, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, which towered above all the rest, and no doubt influenced the thinking in a large section of the country.

Miss Tarbell said that THE TRIBUNE was the outstanding advocate of tariff reform in this country. She called THE TRIBUNE a valiant fighter. At a time when nearly all leading Republicans were for a high tariff wall about the country THE TRIBUNE, almost alone in Republican circles, perceived that the United States could not sell goods abroad if foreign goods were not permitted to enter this country. In demanding moderation in tariff schedules THE TRIBUNE was far ahead of its time.

Printer's Ink, the trade paper of printing, publishing, and advertising, in its issue of Feb. 14, 1900, made the following statement in speaking of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE: "Many Americans assert that it is, and for many years has been, the best daily newspaper in the world."

Bessie Louise Pierce of the University of Chicago, who is engaged in writing a history of this city and has completed the second volume, points out that it was THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE which was responsible for the federal naturalization law. When an illiberal bill was before congress in 1868 THE TRIBUNE objected to it and blocked its passage until the bill was amended to declare expatriation an inherent right. THE TRIBUNE insisted that a naturalized American citizen had all the rights of any American citizen, and could not be held for military service to a foreign monarch. A naturalized citizen could therefore visit his native country without fear of arrest.

Thus, three-quarters of a century ago this newspaper, with a circulation of only 30,000, was of such power that it determined the nature of immigration legislation that was before congress. It did this single handedly. Every immigrant to this country for 75 years has benefited from the provisions of this law.

All of this and much more of the same sort that we propose to recall on this page from time to time makes the tradition of THE TRIBUNE. The strength, the independence, and the influence of this newspaper today are the product of nearly a century of just such aggressive leadership.

THE BILL OF RIGHTS

[The following address was delivered last night by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, on the Chicago Theater of the Air, over W-G-N, W59C, and the Mutual Broadcasting system.]

BY COL. ROBERT R. McCORMICK.

We saw last week that the Constitution had given to the people the following rights:

The guarantee of regular elections; that freedom of speech in congress should not be questioned elsewhere; that writ of habeas corpus should not be suspended; that trials for crimes should be held in the states where the crimes were committed; that all bills should originate in congress; that no bill of attainder or ex post facto law should be passed; that no title of nobility should be granted; that treason should only consist of levying war against the states or adhering to their enemies; that the United States should guarantee every state a republican form of government; that no religious test should ever be required as a qualification for office.

The state conventions to which it was referred for adoption insisted on further guarantees. More than 40 suggested amendments were sent to the first congress. These Madison combined into 10 amendments, ever since known as the Bill of Rights. They include all the rights Englishmen ever had, and additional rights which only Americans enjoy. They are expressed so clearly and succinctly that I will read them, name their source, and comment on their enforcement and evasion.

AMENDMENT I.

"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the government for a redress of grievances."

The right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the government for a redress of grievances is the British common law. The fiat that congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof was a guarantee of religious freedom which as we have seen had been growing in the colonies since early settlements. It had already been proclaimed in all the states and now it became a national rule. It was wholly American. The prohibiting of any law abridging the freedom of speech or of the press is so important and so involved as to require an entire evening for its discussion.

AMENDMENT II.

"A well regulated militia, being necessary to the security of a free state, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed."

In the English bill of rights only Protestants were given the right to bear arms. Religious equality naturally demanded that members of all religious sects should have the same right to bear arms. This amendment, however, is flouted in the state of New York, where citizens are not allowed to possess pistols or revolvers in the defense of their homes.

AMENDMENT III.

"No soldier shall, in time of peace be quartered in any house, without the consent of the owner, nor in time of war, but in a manner to be prescribed by law," was from the English petition of rights.

AMENDMENT IV.

"The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized." This was in the British common law, which had been violated in the colonies by the issue of writs of assistance.

AMENDMENT V.

"No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia, when in actual service in time of war or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb, nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation." These were rights dating back to Magna Charta.

AMENDMENT VI.

"In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense."

This is one of the rights of Englishmen mentioned first in Magna Charta and constantly repeated. In colonial days it was found in the remonstrance of the frontier inhabitant of the province of Pennsylvania against being taken to Philadelphia for trial.

It was set up as one of the principal reasons for the Declaration of Independence. It was included in the Constitution and now repeated in the Bill of Rights. It is a very serious offense, therefore, against the people of America that it is in process of being nullified by the department of justice and the federal courts thru the fiction of conspiracy charges. Combined with the violation of the constitutional definition of treason, it becomes a tyranny which it is the duty of congress to redress.

AMENDMENT VII.

"In suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed $20, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved, and no fact tried by a jury, shall be otherwise reëxamined in any court of the United States, than according to the rules of the common law," and

AMENDMENT VIII.

"Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted," also is from the British bill of rights.

AMENDMENT IX.

"The enumeration in the Constitution, of certain rights, shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people," and AMENDMENT X.

"The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states respectively, or to the people." These can hardly be called dead letters, but are in desperate peril and have been for a number of years.

You will note that the Bill of Rights only conferred rights on white men. It was not until the years 1865, 1868, and 1870 that they were conferred upon Negroes, and it was not until 1920 that women were enfranchised.

The 14th amendment extended the federal Bill of Rights to all states: It says:

Section 1. "All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

Under this amendment the Supreme court of the United States, notably in the case of Near vs. Minnesota, has many times restrained individual states from abridging the freedom of the press, which will be the subject of next week's lecture.

It is a surprise that a number of umpires of minor leagues are now in the armed services. We didn't suppose these fellows could get beyond the top line in the eye chart.—Detroit News.

THE PENALTY FOR OVERWEIGHT.

THE penalty for obesity is invalidism. The span of life is shortened and the individual is less comfortable, less efficient. An old adage has it that the weight of a healthy person at 30 is the ideal for life. In other words, extra pounds in the later decades do not mean any more strength or reserve.

To these general statements, there are exceptions, of course. The overly thin man or woman may need to gain, but for most of us the addition of 25 pounds is as unnecessary as it is undesirable.

Why do certain people "fatten up" in the fourth decade? The chief reason is inactivity. They do not walk as much and, in consequence, fewer calories are used up and less heat is dissipated.

Many of these sufferers can blame their parents or grandparents. They are the victims of a constitutional tendency which has been inherited. Furthermore, they seem to utilize every morsel that is eaten. They include our stolid, phlegmatic citizens who rarely give way to excitement. The individual sees to it that he wastes no energy. His easy-going attitude spares the body unneeded effort.

Of course we must not forget the rôle of the endocrine glands, particularly the thyroid. If the basal metabolic rate is checked the reading may be subnormal. This explains why fat can be deposited despite the fact that the meals are temperate. The foodstuffs ingested are not burned up. Oblige one of these subjects to work vigorously on a moderate diet and the excess will fall away.

Occasionally, thyroid extract can be administered with marked benefit. Under its influence, the use of oxygen is increased. Thus more adipose tissue is consumed with a corresponding decrease in avoirdupois. But such a program is safe only when conducted under the watchful eye of the family physician.

To accuse these patients of overeating is the height of folly. Routinely, we hear the comment, "What I take in 24 hours would scarcely keep a bird alive." But a detective would soon demonstrate otherwise. The trouble is that no account is kept of what is imbibed between meals. Enough candy, cookies, cake, etc., may be devoured during the day to equal a sizable dinner.

One difficulty with a reducing plan lies in the fact that food acts as a solace. It satisfies an emotional craving. With little to occupy the mind, the temptation to do something is translated into the act of eating and swallowing. As substitutes, mental and physical occupation will be demanded.

As a rule, "chubbies" are always tired. The answer is simple. There is too much luggage to carry about. Menus can be planned which will allay hunger and, at the same time, prove effective. Skimmed milk, fruits, lean meat or fish, green vegetables, eggs, and whole wheat bread will do the trick.

A complete balanced régime can be made up of these simple materials so that the digestive tract can be happy with one thousand instead of two thousand calories. This, plus exercise and something to do, will offer a sensible prescription.

EAR DEFECT.

Mrs. H. L. writes: My son was told by the school doctor that he has a perforated eardrum. Is there any cure?

REPLY.

No. This came about because an abscess within the middle ear ruptured the membrane. Fortunately, little interference with hearing may be experienced.

COULD BE.

H. W. M. writes: Can a person's hair turn white overnight?

REPLY.

If so, a huge quantity of pigment will require absorption. What appear to be authentic cases have been reported.

ISOLATE.

L. A. writes: Should a child with trench mouth be kept home from school?

REPLY.

By all means—until the oral cavity is free from parasites.

WILD VEGETABLES.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—With the curtailment of all meats at hand, and further drastic cuts to come, many of us will have to turn to vegetables as a table food in order to meet government restrictions. And so the question arises as to whether we will have sufficient green vegetables on the market until the fall crop is harvested. Have we ever stopped to consider that right here within our reach many varieties of wild edible vegetables grow in abundance every spring? Just to name a few, one need not go far to find dandelion greens, mustard greens, wild turnips, wild onions, watercress, and wild rhubarb. These are eaten by south Europeans and found very appetizing and rich in minerals. Some of these vegetables may be found in and around Chicagoland as early as March.

FRANCIS J. BUSSONE.

TALE FROM INDIANA WAY.

Warsaw, Ind., Jan. 25.—A man in northern Indiana who owned a hammer mill [which, in case some do not know, is a portable mill for grinding feed] and drove a regular route among the farmers applied to the local ration board for extra gas to continue his business.

A man on the board who personally disliked him refused him a rationing card, so he wrote the state board. The reply he received was that the rationers "thought, in these hard times, he could do something else besides making hammer handles, and running around selling them to the farmers." DISGUSTED.

AUTOMATIC RATIONING.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—What has happened to American good sense? Take this matter of rationing canned goods. If the proper persons had merely said—and we seem to live in a world where saying makes it so—that every housekeeper must return to her grocer a properly prepared, salvaged tin can when she wished to buy another tin of food—presto, tin would have been salvaged by all, tin would have been saved, food would not have been hoarded and ration boards would have been reduced and man power saved. Why not try it now? HORSE SENSE.

40-YEAR-OLD DISCHARGED.

Chicago, Feb. 1.—This is an answer to "Wondering." Yes, men have been released from the army. My friend went to Oregon Nov. 23. He wrote to his company and they immediately sent a letter to his commanding officer. He came home Jan. 23. He tells us 19 men from the camp and 5 from his company were released. It seems to be up to the company and the letter they send. He is 40 years old.

FARMER'S COMPLAINT.

Downers Grove, Ill., Jan. 24.—Why don't the authorities look into the fact that there are many autos from surrounding towns with "B" and "C" cards parked at bowling alleys, movie shows, and dine and dance halls in this and, I suppose, other towns, while some of us farmers are unable to get enough gas to haul our produce and feed for our stock?

WM. H. C.

PRAISE FOR POSTAL SYSTEM.

Mundelein, Ill., Jan. 18.—Why doesn't some one compliment the postoffice department for the fine work it is doing, instead of criticizing it for a few small errors? I have a relative in Hawaii. I received a letter from him Jan. 2 that he sent air mail Dec. 30, and all his letters reach me in from four to six days. Pretty good time, I think.

MRS. R. W. NORDLUND.

NO RATIONS FOR BABY?

Chicago, Jan. 28.—Last December I went to our local rationing board to register my baby. The clerk asked me how old the baby was and when I told her 4½ months, she asked why I had not registered her before she was a month old. When I said that I was unable to get there and furthermore a month old baby does not need sugar and coffee I was told that I couldn't do anything about it but would have to wait until there was another registration, but that they couldn't tell me when that would be.

The evening of Jan. 15 I saw a small article in the paper saying that that was the last registration date. Inasmuch as it was too late then to go to the board [they close at 5 p. m.] I called the main office the next morning and this is the conversation that took place:

ME—I was unable to get to the local board to register my baby and wonder what I can do about registering her now.

CLERK—Sorry, there is nothing you can do.

ME—Well, I can't let my baby starve, how can I get the necessary foods such as milk, butter, and eggs?

CLERK—She'll just have to eat your share. MRS. MARY E. LANG.

FROM REP. HOFFMAN.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 30.—Since election THE TRIBUNE has printed three editorials in which my name was mentioned and I wish now to express my deep appreciation of your courtesy and of the help which your editorials have been to me both prior to and since election.

I do not get around very much, but I am firmly of the opinion that no other publication—no group of publications—has done as much to aid in retaining what little constitutional government we have as has THE TRIBUNE.

CLARE E. HOFFMAN.

LAST REPORTED IN MANILA.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—I have two sons in the service. My second son, Pvt. Harry L. Terry, was at Manila, P. I., care of Sternberg General hospital, when the city was first bombed. Nothing has been heard of him since. We exchanged cables a year ago at Christmas time and received the last letter from him dated Dec. 15, 1941.

If other readers have sons in Manila, perhaps they heard from them and can give me some information about my son.

MRS. OLIVE TERRY.

ANOTHER PREDICTION.

Chicago, Feb. 2.—Glad to see in last Saturday's lead editorial, last paragraph, you say, "This is probably Hitler's last anniversary." Suggest you watch April 14 to 17. MAY MILLER.

HIS CUSTOMARY CUT.

Chicago, Feb. 2.—I wonder if old Two Per Cent McNutt is going to collect when he gets us all regimented. A. E. A.

STREET CAR SERVICE.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—I am one of the many unfortunates forced by the war to ride the most poorly run street car system in the United States. I work in a defense plant and quit at 12 p. m. Tuesday night, like many nights, the street car managed to go by a minute before we got outside the gate.

Then we waited 12 minutes and the next car, with only half a load, passed us by. The next one came five minutes later. The conductor, a good fellow, picked up everybody, so when we get off we're all bruised from the crowd, while two cars ahead roll along empty. Then, transferring, the car we want is just crossing the intersection, so another wait of 20 minutes.

I call this fine teamwork, because they know they will get your 8 cents sometime during the night, as you have no alternative. J. F. WHELAN.

JUST GLAMORIZE THEM.

Urbana, Ill., Jan. 27.—The solution to the farmer's problem re labor is in his own hands. Why don't farmers glamorize their jobs? Select a group of attractive farmerettes, slip them into trim uniforms designed by some topnotch Hollywood designer, then put these helpers at their various tasks, milking cows, driving tractors, etc. Next, let some of the bosses who have photogenic value be photographed in good looking business suits. This is a day of advertising.

MABEL CRAWFORD.

"POLAND NOT YET LOST."

Chicago, Jan. 28.—I wish to commend Miss Harriet Pribble's article today, entitled "Poland's Spirit Is Undefeated, Envoy Asserts." In my opinion, the treatment of Pan Kwapiszewski's talk was admirable, and you are to be commended. The heading of the article was an epitome of the Polish national anthem, "Jescze Polska Nie Zginea," which, freely translated, means "Poland Is Not Yet Lost."

LEON A. KUPECK.

General Adviser,
Northwestern University Polish Society.

ALARM CLOCK, COUNTRY STYLE.

Chicago, Jan. 30.—I, too, have combed the city for an alarm clock and even wrote to out of town people trying to buy one. Guess I'll just build a coop in my bedroom window and buy an old rooster. Perhaps I could buy a couple lady friends for him and maybe if I got a couple of eggs I could have some ham with them, if I could get the ham, which I doubt. DISGUSTED.

FROM A NEW ZEALAND AIRMAN.

NAPIER, New Zealand, Jan. 22.—During my stay in America the people showed me so much hospitality that I would like to thank them one and all for their courtesy and kindness. America has been a real home away from home, and much will always remain as a memory of a pleasant stay in this favored land.

FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

The volume of Legal Friend mail necessitates printed statements on common questions. No copies or records of the letters or answers are kept. Hence follow-up letters should be complete in themselves. If questions are based on some previously printed problems a clipping of the article should accompany. Most of the replies are mailed. Letters bearing no name and address are disregarded. A self-addressed envelope will expedite handling.

SOCIAL SECURITY.

Chicago, Jan. 30.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—In the event of my death would my wife receive social security benefits if she earned more than $15 a month?

D. W.

Eligibility to social security would depend both on what has been paid in on your account and on the facts as to her. We suggest that you take your question up with the social security board.

Under the federal social security act, each fully insured individual, regardless of "need," who has reached the age of 65 receives benefits based upon his "average monthly wages." It is hardly practicable for us to give complete instructions for the calculation, but, as examples, if a person has been "covered" by pay roll taxes for three years and makes $100 per month, his benefit, if single, will be $25.75 per month, and if married $38.63. If covered five years, the figures will be $26.25 and $39.38.

A 65 year old wife gets supplementary benefits, sufficient to bring her primary benefits, if any, up to one-half of her husband's. Dependent children under 17 are similarly eligible to supplementary benefits.

A 130 page pamphlet entitled "Social Security Act as Amended, 1939, with Explanation and Charts of New Provisions," has been published at $1 by Commerce Clearing House and is available at book stores, but the principal source of information will be the social security board, whose offices are listed under United States of America in the telephone directory.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

DEDUCTIONS.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I am buying a house on a mortgage with a monthly payment plan. May I deduct the following when computing my 1942 income tax? 1. The total amount of interest paid thru the years on the mortgage? 2. An amount spent to rip out and reënforce an entire ceiling in order to protect the house? 3. The total amount spent for supplies and labor to maintain the inside and outside of the building? H. R.

1. No. You should deduct only the 1942 interest. 2. and 3. No, assuming that it is your residence and not an income producing property. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

UNPAID TAXES.

Decatur, Ill., Jan. 30.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I own a property in Chicago on which I redeemed my 1939 taxes. Sale was in May, 1941, and I paid the amount in November, 1942. The county clerk informs me that all other taxes have been paid to date but I did not pay the 1940 assessment. Could the bond company which paid the 1939 taxes also have paid those for 1940, and would the company have a claim to the property? H. K.

The tax officials are the best source of information as to the status of the 1940 taxes. You should be able to find out whether [1] some other person has paid them, [2] they have been purchased at tax sale, or [3] there has been a forfeiture.

CLOSED SHOP BAN TO BE SOUGHT IN HOUSE THIS WEEK

Drastic Revision of Labor Act Demanded.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—Sweeping revision of the national labor relations act will be demanded in the house next week in a bill to be introduced by Rep. John S. Gibson [D., Ga.]. He said he will propose a series of amendments which would outlaw the closed shop and the practice of requiring dues-paying union membership as a condition for employment.

The measure would also require the bonding of labor leaders, make it mandatory for them to issue regular financial statements to their rank and file members and prevent them from using union funds for political campaign contributions. In addition, it would ban strikes arising from jurisdictional disputes between rival unions.

Patterned After Rail Unions.

Gibson said the bill contains all the fundamental principles under which the Railroad Brotherhoods have operated, including the requirement that a union official must have at least six months' experience in the craft which it represents. It is a modified version of a measure introduced by him in the last session and on which the house had no chance to act because of the failure of the labor committee to report it.

Charges have been made frequently in congress that the present labor relations act has benefitted union bosses at the expense of working men.

After the war, Gibson said, it is probable that there will be 20 million men and women in unions and if the dues are only $1 per month the leaders would have 240 million dollars a year which they could spend, under the present law, virtually without any restraint.

Aimed at Political Gifts.

"Is it wrong," he asked, "to demand that such sums of money shall be spent under direction of persons who have had experience in the work of their followers; that they shall be bonded, and that they report to their organizations on how the funds are being handled? Is it wrong to say that the powers vested in a few individuals by such great sums of money shall not be used to influence the American voter in the use of his franchise?"

The ban on political contributions by unions was seen as aimed at preventing a repetition of the famed $500,000 donation to President Roosevelt's campaign chest by John L. Lewis, then czar of the CIO in 1936.

Home for Funeral

Four of her five sons serving in the army and the navy returned to Chicago for the funeral of Mrs. Anna Majko, 2132 North Lorel avenue, who was buried Wednesday. Theodore, 21 years old, a paratrooper, came from Camp Toccoa, Georgia; Walter, 29, from Chanute field; Leo, 34, from Helena, Mont., and Stephen, 32, from Ogden, Utah. The fifth son, Stanley, who could not return, is in the navy. He is 33. Mrs. Majko died last Sunday. Her husband, Thomas, and four daughters also survive.

OKLAHOMA JOINS IN RESENTMENT OVER BUROCRACY

Bungling of Cattle Feed Among Complaints.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Oklahoma City, Okla., Feb. 6.—Resentment against the New Deal in Oklahoma is expressed chiefly in opposition to the actions of burocracy and to regimentation. Folks here say Oklahoma, a southern Democratic stronghold, put on a revolt of its own against the New Deal in November, when it elected E. H. Moore, a dyed-in-the-wool Jeffersonian Democrat, as a Republican senator.

Moore beat Sen. Josh Lee, supporter of New Deal policies and experiments, who was backed by a powerful machine, and his election was hailed as an expression against the infiltration of burocrats into all sorts of human activity. Lee, as a lame duck, has been appointed a member of the civil aeronautics board, a $10,000 a year job.

Critical sentiment seems to be running stronger than ever. The criticisms cover largely the same ground as those heard in other states of the deep Democratic south in what appears to be a growing revolt against the New Deal.

Observers List Grievances.

Political observers here list the main grievances from business men, farmers, and ordinary folks as:

A deluge of questionnaires.

A feeling that winning the war is being retarded by confusion among boards and bureaus at Washington.

Regimentation in agriculture.

The shortage in farm labor, and its effect on production of essential food.

A feeling that too much money is being squandered on activities not essential to winning the war.

One complaint from agriculture is a deadlock in the feed situation for cattle in the face of calls for increased production of foodstuffs.

The details of the situation are complicated, but they refer to cottonseed, peanut, and soybean meal and cake, needed as protein supplements in feeding dairy cattle and to put meat on beef cattle. One agricultural journal says surveys show Oklahoma has in sight less than one-fourth of the protein feeds needed for the number of livestock in the state.

Mills Wait for Crops.

Peanuts, a large crop, have been moving out of warehouses slowly, altho a dozen Oklahoma mills are ready to crush them. The Farmer-Stockman says arrangements were made for southwestern mills to crush part of the cornbelt soybeans, but the Commodity Credit corporation met difficulty in getting the beans released due to crop loans. The amounts crushed, too, are not all available, as the CCC is holding back 50 per cent of the output.

"We still lack assurance from Washington that this deadlock will be broken in time to supply dairymen and feeders with the protein supplement they need," says the Farmer-Stockman. "Livestock cannot wait.

"Statistics show a big crop of oilseeds but we can't feed statistics to live stock. Efforts are being made to break thru red tape. If we are to reach 1943 production goals, we must have action now."

Unfinished Cattle Slaughtered.

At the stock yards cattle are being slaughtered before they have put on the usual amount of meat. One dealer said:

"Yesterday a herd of 160 steers came in. The average weight was 700 pounds. If sufficiently fed they should have weighed 850 pounds before being marketed. A couple of days ago a farmer brought in 200 head of young steers—400 to 550 pounds. He talked about the lack of enough feed to finish them and that's why he was letting them go. Yet meat is an essential to war."

One estimate from an expert is that of the 179,000 farms in Oklahoma in 1940, 10,000 and 15,000 have been given up by their former owners, due to difficulties of getting labor.

Gas Rationing Lesser Complaint.

Gas rationing does not appear to be as much of a source of irritation here as in some other states. The local boards here appear to have been liberal with B and C cards. The Daily Oklahoman at the outset invited letters showing how the rationing was working out, but only a few were received, indicating the rank and file of drivers believe they are getting a square deal from the local boards.

There is complaint, however, that the four gallon ration was based on conditions in the east where towns are close together and population is congested, as against the agricultural states, where distances are longer.

Opposed 40 Hour Week.

Residents recall that a year ago Oklahoma started what was called the "prairie fire" which swept thru southern states in the form of mass criticism of the conduct of the war effort on the home front. It was directed against a basic 40 hour week, strikes and the closed shop, and lockouts and excess profits by management on war contracts. Last Easter southern congressmen trekked back home, getting an earful of what folks were saying. Sentiment shown in this movement is held to be one reason why Moore as a Republican nominee for senator unhorsed Lee, an administration spokesman. Only twice before has the state elected a senator on the Republican ticket.

The state is not so closely attached to the Democratic party as some other southern states—it was carried by Harding in 1920 and by Hoover in 1928.

HEART SOCIETY IN FINAL WEEK OF SEALS SALE

The Chicago Heart association is opening the final week of the annual valentine seal sale with the plea to "spend a dollar to help save a life." The dollar is the price of a book of 100 seals. Funds are used to carry on the association's work to aid heart sufferers thru education, coördination of the work of 30 different agencies, and direct service to child patients recommended by clinics and physicians.

Mrs. Ruth P. McEldowney, executive director of the association which has headquarters at 203 North Wabash avenue, has announced that 2,500 more subscribers would put the drive over the top. This year's fund quota is $15,000. Stamps are available at booths in loop department stores, and they will be sent thru the mail from the association.

There will be a special seal sale effort Saturday by members of the American Women's Voluntary services staff in city hospitals.

Medical Care Is Available at UNITED MEDICAL SERVICE

Open Evenings for Those Who Work

The war is creating a serious shortage of physicians for the civilian population. In this connection we wish to assure our many patients and their friends that United Medical Service is even more fully prepared to render complete medical protection and care than ever before. Members of our staff who have joined the medical Corps have been replaced with physicians of excellent training and experience. As a result this big medical organization begins its 11th year more complete and modern in all of its facilities . . . more widely experienced . . . and more efficiently staffed. Centrally located it can be reached by railroad trains, street cars, buses, elevated trains and all other forms of transportation. Its offices occupy four complete floors in the Finchley Building, one of Chicago's most modern and conveniently located office buildings. In addition to its competent staff of associated physicians, there are extensive X-ray facilities; a highly efficient laboratory and all other necessary medical equipment. No expense has been spared to make it one of the most modern and efficient medical institutions in the country. Yet the fees are moderate and the same to all. Appointments are not necessary; come in any time; office hours were made for your convenience.

Diseases of Women Women who have persistent headache, pain in the abdomen, irregular menstruation, bleeding or discharges, frequent or painful urination should seek prompt medical attention. These symptoms can be very serious. The most dangerous possibility, especially in women past forty, is cancer. Early diagnosis and care offers greater protection. RADIO TO ROAST MEAT ON TABLE AFTER WAR ENDS

Research Opens Amazing Thermal Wave Uses.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Sensational new industrial techniques which in peace time would have required years to develop, are being rushed to help win the war. After the war they will be adapted to peace needs to create new industries, jobs, and sensational new labor saving devices.

Dr. Harold Vagtborg.

The Armour Research Foundation, affiliated with the Illinois Institute of Technology, which is contributing to this development, is permitting a few glimpses of things to come:

For instance, the new science of thermal radio, developed to become a great time, man power and electric energy saver for industry in recent months, after the war will invade the kitchen and dining room, to the delight of the housewife.

Whole Fowl to Cook at Once.

"After the war we will have radio cookers," Dr. Harold Vagtborg, director of the foundation, promised. "While you have your soup the turkey will be roasting before your eyes on the table in a sort of glass chafing dish powered by radio. No long hours of cooking will be required. The radio waves in the form of induced heating will reach all parts of the bird simultaneously. And you won't have to add another 15 minutes for each added pound. If it takes an hour to cook a small portion of ham it will take no longer to cook a whole ham."

Hot Dogs from Machine.

Dr. Vagtborg said that this treatment, applied by packers in precooking meats, will effect savings in time, power and cost, and substantially reduce shrinkage. Thermal radio can be adapted also to preserving fruits and vegetables. The radio heat treatment will stop enzymic and bacterial action and prevent the loss of vitamins and other valuable food elements that normally results from boiling.

Machines which now vend beverages and candies will be developed, according to the research men, to turn out radio cooked hot dogs and hamburgers while you wait a minute or two.

The uses to which thermal radio will be put are almost limitless, the scientists say.

The thermal radio techniques of the war are outgrowths, in a broad way, of the diathermy and "artificial fever" treatments of medicine. Radio waves have been harnessed to heat, dry, glue, stitch, rivet, weld, and case harden in war industries.

Develop Explosive Rivet.

The Armour Foundation, the Westinghouse company, and others have developed a technique that has been applied to the tin plating industry. This process helps reduce the amount of tin required from one-third to one-half, an extremely important factor now that the Asiatic supplies of tin are cut off. To this process Armour has contributed factors that help to reduce the power required. The radio process brightens and smooths the tin plate as it comes off the line. The Inland Steel company is installing two lines for electroplating tin employing the radio process.

For some types of radio heat treatment radio waves of the order used in broadcasting are the most useful.

Other applications of thermal radio have been made by the Radio Corporation of America. One of these, developed in coöperation with duPont engineers, is a rivet, with an explosive charge in its head, that is detonated by radio thermics. It is reported to be extremely useful in inaccessible positions in the aircraft industry.

Far East Lecture Series to Begin Tuesday Evening

CHINESE TO HAIL NEW YEAR; PLAN 1ST LADY'S VISIT

Plans for the visit of Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, first lady of China, to Chicago on March 6 or 7 will be discussed in New York early this week by Paul G. Hoffman, national chairman of United China Relief, and Mme. Chiang and her advisors.

Silas H. Strawn, former special United States delegate to China and Chicago attorney, said yesterday that Mr. Hoffman, president of the Studebaker corporation with offices in South Bend, Ind., will leave on a business trip to New York today and will discuss the visit while there.

If the weather permits, a parade climaxing Chinatown's celebration of the Chinese New Year will start from Wentworth avenue and Cermak road at 2 p. m. today. The parade will be led by a gold and red papier-maché lion. Gerald Moye, unofficial mayor of Chinatown, emphasized yesterday that the celebration is a quiet one and that three days of the holiday are being observed in honor of the recent American and British treaties ending rights of extraterritoriality in China.

INDIANA SCORES 7TH VICTORY; ILLINOIS NO. 6

U. S. ASKS CANCELLATION OF KENTUCKY DERBY MAY 1

REQUEST MADE BY EASTMAN TO CURTAIL TRAVEL

Break Would Be 1st in History.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6 (AP).—The government requested officially today that the Kentucky Derby, scheduled for May 1, not to be run this year.

If the request is complied with, it would represent the first break in the holding of the event, in war or peace, since the first race was run in 1875. Entry blanks already have been mailed for this year's 69th running and Matt Winn, president of Churchill Downs in Louisville, Ky., scene of the race, had said previously that it would be held to maintain the tradition even if no one attended.

The recommendation against the running of the Derby was issued by Joseph B. Eastman, transportation director, with the view of conserving transportation. In this it differed from the request previously made by William M. Jeffers, rubber administrator, that state governors cancel race meetings at tracks which can be reached only by motor. Jeffers' request was aimed at conserving rubber.

Expected Race Would Be Held.

Louisville city officials had generally expected that the race would be permitted, with Louisville residents comprising most of the spectators.

Eastman acknowledged that the ODT had no direct authority over sporting events but emphasized his authority over transportation and said that "this authority could be exercised in such a way as to affect sports seriously."

Because of the heavy demand on railroads and inter-city buses for troop movements and other essential traffic, Eastman said in a statement, "it would be better from a transportation standpoint if the Kentucky Derby were not run this year."

"If it is held," Eastman added, "the ODT will not permit the operation of special trains, extra sections or charter buses or cars.

Must Take What They Can Get.

"Those who attend from a distance will have to put up with whatever regular service may be available. They should bear in mind that such unnecessary travel on their part may interfere with the proper accommodation of members of the military forces or of those whose traveling is necessary. These same comments apply to any other sporting events which attract fans from a distance."

Eastman quoted from a statement by President Roosevelt March 10 outlining the general attitude of the government toward sports and recreation.

Within reasonable limits, the President said, he felt the war effort would not be hampered but actually improved by sensible participation in healthy recreation. Eastman said he did not interpret Mr. Roosevelt's statement as meaning the best interest of transportation, from the standpoint of the war, should be sacrificed to protect "recreation as usual."

WINN IS SURPRISED.

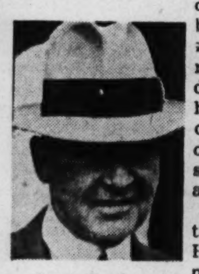
Matt J. Winn, president of Churchill Downs, who built the Kentucky Derby up from a Louisville event to a national institution, expressed surprise yesterday when informed of Transportation Director Eastman's statement from Washington, advising cancellation of the historic race.

"I have not yet received a request from the government," he said when interviewed in his Drake hotel apartment. "Meanwhile I do not feel at liberty to comment on it. We have not anticipated asking any favors this year. We merely wished to keep the Derby alive. It has been run continuously since 1875 before there were any automobiles. Our idea was to conduct it as a local affair this season, depending on the Louisville street cars for transportation and the Louisville people for attendance."

Winn, who has been present at all of the 68 previous Derbies, has personally supervised the last 40 as head of Churchill Downs. He is president of the American Turf association which operates Lincoln Fields in the Chicago area in addition to the Louisville track.

Jim Coffroth, Boxing, Turf Figure, Dies

San Diego, Cal., Feb. 6 (AP).—James W. [Sunny Jim] Coffroth, 70 years old, dean of American boxing promoters and once a prominent turf figure, died today. He had been in an oxygen tent much of the time since suffering a heart attack Jan. 29.



Jim Coffroth.

Coffroth's sister, Mrs. Flora C. Hughes, and Tommy Silence, his secretary for many years, were at the bedside. Coffroth was a bachelor.

After promoting many bouts in San Francisco featuring great fighters of three and four decades ago, Coffroth turned to horse racing. In 1916 he opened the old Tijuana, Mex., race track where he established the first $100,000 stake.

Son of Legislator.

The son of James Coffroth, one of California's first legislators, Coffroth was born in Sacramento, Sept. 12, 1872. His parents moved to San Francisco while he wa still an infant and young Coffroth grew up in an era when boxing was rapidly gaining in popularity.

While still a novice in the fight game, he teamed with Big Jim Kennedy, eastern promoter, and together they promoted bouts which are legendary in sporting annals.

It was in 1903 that they held the San Francisco rematch between Jim Corbett and Jim Jeffries. Corbett, hurt badly in the second round, fought on to the 10th before his manager tossed in the towel to end the historic fight. Three years previously, Jeffries had knocked out Corbett in the 23d round.

Tours with Fitzsimmons.

In 1904 the combine toured the west with Bob Fitzsimmons, Jack Monroe, and Jeffries. Later Coffroth took an unknown middleweight, Stanley Ketchell, under his wing and developed him into a colorful champion.

During World War I, Coffroth was called east as a dollar-a-year man to head the war time boxing division. He and associates raised $7,500,000 for relief funds, with cross-country series of exhibitions featuring Benry Leonard, lightweight, and Jack Dempsey, who then was battling his way up thru the heavyweight division.

Bay Meadows Hears It's O.K. to Run Feb. 20

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 6 (AP).—General Manager William P. Kyne of Bay Meadows track said today he had been informed that Rubber Administrator William Jeffers had provisionally agreed to withdraw his opposition to a horse race meeting at the track beginning Feb. 20. Two days ago Jeffers asked California authorities to urge the track not to hold the meeting in the interests of rubber conservation.

Would Bar Automobiles.

Kyne said Jeffers' position was outlined in a telephone conversation with Neil S. McCarthy, stable owner and breeder of thorobreds, in Los Angeles, and that McCarthy had in turn relayed the information to him.

Jeffers was represented as saying he would withdraw opposition to the track's operation if the management would bar the automobile parking area to the general public. He also stipulated that patrons should be requested not to use train facilities to the track, located in San Mateo, 23 miles south of here.

Kyne issued a statement declaring Bay Meadows stockholders would comply with any requests by the government.

Plan Now for Opening.

The track management, which previously had ordered the plant closed and help dismissed, made plans to open as scheduled. A 52 day meeting is contemplated. There are some 700 horses stabled at the track, with 200 stabled near by, and others en route.

CAMP GRANT, NORTHWESTERN WIN IN STADIUM

De Paul Falls, 52-48. Purdue Loses, 67-40;

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Don Blanken, one time Purdue star, came thru in the clutch last night in the Stadium as the Camp Grant Warriors scored a 52 to 48 victory over De Paul university. Blanken scored four of his nine field goals when the Demons were threatening in the final six minutes. It was Camp Grant's 23d victory against one defeat.

In the opening contest of the double header Northwestern, after a slow start in which only seven points were scored in 10 minutes, ran up its second highest Big Ten mark by trouncing Purdue, 67 to 40. This was the Boilermakers' fourth defeat in seven conference games and the Wildcats' second victory in five games.

De Paul Stays in There.

The lead in the De Paul-Camp Grant contest changed five times and there were five tied scores in the first half. With six minutes of the initial half remaining the Warriors were in front, 22 to 16, and they led, 28 to 21, when Ray Adams, veteran forward, was excused on four personal fouls.

Mel Frailey, substituting for John Jorgenson, and big George Mikan, led De Paul's rally which came within 2 points of a tie at the intermission. Camp Grant led, 32 to 30.

The Warriors spurted to a 39 to 30 advantage and later held command at 41 to 33 before Dick Starzyk sparked a De Paul drive. Starzyk topped the Demons with 13 points. It was Starzyk who finally got the goal that tied the score at 42. Then Blanken broke lose.

Blanken Leads Victory Attack.

With Mickey Rottner dominating the floor play by his brilliant dribbling, Blanken opened firing with a side shot to break the 42 to 42 tie and three times more he paced the Warriors' counter attacks. His third field goal of this series and the eighth of the game made the score 50 to 46 with two minutes to play. Starzyk hit from far out and Blanken then capped his night's scoring with a field goal in the final eight seconds.

The battle between Northwestern and Purdue produced a series of almost unbelievable contrasts for the crowd of 6,000. In the first 10 minutes the total score was 13 points with Northwestern leading, 7 to 6. In this time the lead had changed five times after Al Menke, Purdue captain, had opened the scoring from under the backboard.

Wildcats Finally Pull Away.

Five minutes later the Wildcats were in front, 20 to 12. They had command, 24 to 14, at the intermission. Then the Boilermakers came back with an eight point rally on four field goals. Menke hit from close in. Max Biggs got two in succession, and Ed Ehlers, sophomore guard, scored from far out in the court.

Just as it seemed Purdue would at least catch the Wildcats, Nick Vodick, substituting for Ronnie Schumacher at center; Bud Hasse, Otto Graham, Russ Wendland, and Bobby Jake hit a scoring stride that defied the Boilermaker defenders.

Graham, who had scored only seven points in the first half, doubled this production in the second period and led all players with 21 points. Vodick got five field goals in the second half, as did Jake. Capt. Wendland added three goals to the same number he had accomplished in the opening half.

Wildcats Finish Strong.

Against this shooting Purdue was helpless and Northwestern rushed to a 19 point lead at 32 to 23, getting 18 points to one for Purdue in five minutes.

Purdue cut Northwestern's margin to 48 to 38 before the Wildcats took off once more. In the last six minutes, Northwestern outscored its opponents, 19 to 2. The Wildcats' total of 67 has been surpassed by them in confernce history only by their victory last winter over Chicago. In that game Northwestern tied the conference scoring record of 69 points. This mark was broken this season by Illinois' 71 points against Iowa. Lineups:

Columbus, O., Feb. 6 [Special].—Illinois tonight made up an 8 point deficit in the first half and then had to put the stopper on a spectacular second half Ohio State rally to win its sixth straight Western conference basketball game without a defeat. The score was 60 to 48, with Andy Phillip, Big Ten scoring leader, contributing 19 points to the winners' total, giving him 126 points for the campaign.

It was the Illini's second victory of the week, but they still trail the Hoosiers, who have won seven conference games.

In the early stages of the opening period the Buckeyes astonished the spectators—and the defending champions—by rushing into a 20 to 12 lead, largely on the shooting of Capt. Fred Miller and Jack Dugger. Then the Illini buckled down to work and had a 33 to 27 lead at the intermission.

Buckeyes Come to Life.

It looked like a walkaway when the Illini quickly scored 5 points as the second half opened for a 11 point advantage. After an Ohio State basket, Illinois racked up 6 more points for a 44 to 29 lead.

This was where the Buckeyes suddenly came to life, scoring 10 points while blanking Illinois, and bringing the score to 44 to 39. At this point, the champions took time out, found the answer on stopping their opponents, and then went on to win decisively. From this point to the finish, Phillip made 7 of the 16 points and Ken Menke 5.

Nine minutes of the first half remained when the Illini scored 17 consecutive points to turn the 20 to 12 count against them into a 29 to 20 advantage. Capt. Art Mathisen, Phillip, and Menke each contributed two baskets in this surge. Later in the period Mathisen bagged two more goals. He had 13 points for the game.

Start Strong in 2d Half.

A field goal by Mathisen and a goal and free toss by Vance gave Illinois its 38 to 27 lead early in the second period. Jimmy Sims tallied for Ohio, but the Illini came back with 6 points on baskets by Phillip and Mathisen and foul shots by Phillip and Vance for a 44 to 29 lead.

The resultant 10 point Buckeye thrust was accomplished on a basket by Lou Trabitz, two free throws by Ken Eichwald, two field goals by Dick Shrider, and another 2 pointer by Eichwald. Then Illinois took command. The two teams will meet here Monday night. Lineup:

HOOSIERS WIN NO. 14

Bloomington, Ind., Feb. 6 [Special]. —Grabbing the rebounds from both backboards, Michigan's rangy basketball team gave Indiana, the Big Ten conference leaders, a genuine scare before going down by a 32 to 24 count in the Hoosier's first home Big Ten game tonight. The victory was the 14th in a row for the Hoosiers, who have won all seven of their Big Ten contests.

The winning total was the lowest in two years for the Indiana five, which has been averaging 55 points per contest this season.

Logan Sets Pace.

Altho Indiana got 73 shots at the basket, its fast break was slowed down by the Michigan defense and the Hoosiers stalled out the last 8 minutes after they finally had rolled into a 28 to 20 lead. Michigan's rebounding had the Hoosiers stumped thru the first half, which ended in a 14 to 14 deadlock after the score had been tied on four previous counts.

Johnny Logan kept the Hoosiers in the game during the first half by making eight of his team's 14 points and then added three in the final period for 11 and scoring honors. Hamilton and Ward Williams of Indiana and Ralph Gibert of Michigan made 7 points each.

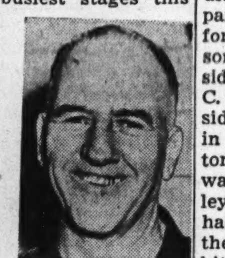
GOLDEN GLOVE BOXERS FIGHT FOR CHICAGO TITLES THURSDAY

BY HOWARD BARRY.

The Golden Gloves campaign goes into one of its busiest stages this week with a program topped by the Chicago championship bouts, which will be held Thursday night in the Armory, 16th street and Michigan avenue. There also will be action in 13 out of town centers in such widely separated areas as Minneapolis, Minn., and Fort Worth, Tex.; Columbus, O., and Oklahoma City, Okla.



Jess O'Brien. Veteran Referee.

The city finals will be north side against south side, one fighter in each weight division remaining in the struggle from each section. Novice and open division titleholders will be crowned, after which the winners in the latter class will go on to the Tournament of Champions, which will be held in the Stadium Feb. 22, 23, and 24.

Sensational Punching Foreseen.

Husky sailors from Navy pier, boxers from the army, representatives of the city's various athletic clubs, and a number of unattached fighters are expected to do some sensational punching in the armory on Thursday night. The spirit of rivalry is particularly strong because each boxer now is within reach of a highly prized championship. Moreover, those who watched the sectional tournaments in St. Sabina's and Loyola gymnasiums agreed that the boys were pretty evenly matched.

The man to man slugging is scheduled to bring up some interesting pairings. In the lightweight division, for instance, Tim Dalton of the Madison A. C. will represent the north side against Melvyn Johnson of the C. Y. O., who will carry the south side's hopes. Both were outstanding in their sectional tournaments. Dalton's most distinguished performance was delivered when he whipped Stanley Berg of Ringside gymnasium, who had been one of the favorites of the north side fans. Dalton had to hit sharply for every point, but he earned a clear decision. In last season's Golden Gloves tournament Dalton won the novice lightweight title.

Dalton Has Terrific Task.

Johnson, who is the C. Y. O. lightweight titleholder, smothered all opposition in marching to the south sectional title. Many believe that Dalton has a terrific job cut out for him in meeting this hard hitting colored boy next Thursday.

One of the surprises of the tournament was the performance of Russ Fitzsimmons of Navy pier in winning the north side heavyweight title. Fitzsimmons' opponent in the finals was Dave Brown, a big and powerful colored boy from the Ringside gymnasium, who had won handily earlier in the tournament.

Fitzsimmons Shows Power.

After getting somewhat the worst of it in the first round, Fitzsimmons showed tremendous hitting power by knocking his opponent out of the ring and onto the floor in the second round and then giving him a thoro

Gophers Deal Maroons 35th Straight Loss

Minnesota's Gophers won their fourth Western conference game in seven starts, defeating Chicago's Maroons, 47 to 25, in a ragged game last night in the Midway fieldhouse. It was Chicago's 35th straight Big Ten loss, the fourth this season. Bernie Nelson, a Minnesota second string player, was high scorer with 14 points.

Minnesota scored first on a tip-in by Wes Windmiller after two minutes of scrimmage. Reuben Epp scored again nine minutes later, these two baskets being the only scores in the first nine minutes.

Two Maroon baskets by Ed Nelson and Harold Ellman tied the count at midperiod at 4-all and three minutes later Chicago took an 8 to 7 lead. B. Nelson, Lind and Dave Ruliffson scored for the Gophers to regain the lead, and the score at the half was Minnesota 18; Chicago 13. B. Nelson scored three baskets while Ellman was picking up one for Chicago, increasing the Gophers margin to 9 points. In the next five minutes Minnesota increased the margin to 19 points. The last five minutes were devoted largely to scrimmaging for possession of the ball.

Great Lakes Beats Badger Quintet, 55-48

Madison, Wis., Feb. 6 [Special].—The Great Lakes basketball team achieved its 24th victory of the season in 26 games here tonight and protected its mark of never having lost to a team from the state of Wisconsin by scoring a 55 to 48 victory over Wisconsin. The Bluejackets led, 28 to 24, at the half. It was the 14 straight in the sailors' present winning streak.

John Kotz and Walt Lautenbach led the Badgers' futile attempt to avenge the previous 61 to 43 loss to Great Lakes by scoring 12 points each. Forrest Anderson, contributing mightily to the final spurt of the sailors that broke a 43 to 43 tie, paced the winner's scoring with 10 points. Lineup:

IRISH BEAT SPARTANS

Notre Dame, Ind., Feb. 6 [Special].—Bob Rensberger, Notre Dame senior guard, put the pressure on Michigan State with nine of Notre Dame's first 10 points, and kept it there until the Irish had chalked up their tenth victory in 11 starts, 45 to 34, before 3,500 tonight.

Rensberger opened the second half with three field goals in as many minutes to run the score up to a 31 to 20 lead. He made 16 points, one less than his all-time record for Notre Dame guards, before retiring with three fouls with 13 minutes of play remaining.

The Irish took a 7 to 0 lead before Oliver White broke the ice for Michigan State with a field goal after six minutes. After White and Nick Hashu made a free throw and a field goal to open the second half, the Irish raced to a 38 to 22 lead with White making a free throw during a stretch of nearly 10 minutes in which the Spartans were scoreless otherwise. HAWKS GET LAST HOME WHACK AT RANGERS TONIGHT

Hamill Is to Leave After Game for Army Test.

Games Tonight

New York at Chicago.
Montreal at Boston.
Toronto at Detroit.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The New York Rangers doublecrossed the Blackhawks in New York last Thursday night by playing them to a 1 to 1 tie, but it's going to be different tonight, the Chicagoans vow, because they play the Rangers on the Chicago Stadium rink, a sheet of ice adored by the Hawks. It will be their last whack at the New Yorkers here.

The Hawks will take to their skates this evening with the knowledge they beat the Rangers in the Stadium 10 to 1 on Jan. 28. They will have the further incentive evolved from the fact they have lost only two of the 18 matches they have played at home this season, as contrasted with the horrible thought they have won only once in 16 performances on other folks' rinks.

Unbeaten on Sunday.

It probably will be easy for our boys to forget that the Rangers, by whipping them, 2 to 1, on Thanksgiving night, registered one of those two home defeats this season. Still that was on a Thursday, as was the other home defeat, 4 to 1, at the hands of the Detroit Red Wings on Dec. 17. The Hawks haven't been defeated here on a Sabbath evening.

With all their confidence about playing an encore to their 10 to 1 victory over the Rangers here a week ago Thursday, the Hawks were a bit shocked by the way the Rangers battled the Toronto Maple Leafs last night. The Leafs won, 3 to 2, but they didn't eke out the winning goal until 19:32 of the final period, 28 seconds before the end of the game. The Rangers led, 2 to 1, going into the final period.

Canadiens Cause Concern.

Even more startling was the way the Montreal Canadiens pummeled the league leading Boston Bruins last night, 8 to 3. The Hawks, you know, are particularly concerned over Canadien successes because the Montrealers are threats to push the Hawks into fifth place and out of the Stanley Cup playoffs.

After the game tonight, Red Hamill, the Hawks' leading goal scorer, will go to Toronto for an examination by his draft board. Hamill is a family man, however, and the call was believed to be a routine checkup on his status rather than a step in an early call to service in the Canadian army. Hamill has a total of 23 goals, two behind the season high by a Blackhawk, set by Babe Dye a decade and a half ago.

CANADIENS WIN, 8-3

Montreal, Quebec, Feb. 6 (AP).—Ray Getliffe was the hero in Montreal tonight as he led the Canadiens to an 8 to 3 triumph over the Boston Bruins, leaders of the National Hockey league. Getliffe shot five goals and assisted in a sixth to help the Canadiens move to within three points of the fourth place Chicago Blackhawks.

Before an enthusiastic crowd of 10,046 paid customers, the Canadiens put on a great scoring show. In addition to Getliffe, Charley Sands, Smiley Meronek, and Joe Benoit all tallied for Montreal. Lineups:

LEAFS, 3; RANGERS, 2

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 6 (AP).—The downward spiral of Toronto's hockey fortunes, which started when Syl Apps was sidelined for the season with a leg fracture, was halted tonight as the Maple Leafs shaded the New York Rangers, 3 to 2, before 10,788.

Two third period goals by hard working Bob Davidson enabled the Leafs to move within three points of the second place Detroit Red Wings and marked the 15th consecutive game in which Rangers have failed to produce a victory. Lineup:

BREEZING ALONG

A N old fashioned melon cutting went wrong last week when word was whispered around that Quatre Measure, a 2 year old filly, was a "goodie" that couldn't miss at the Fair Grounds. . . . The "goodie" was not so good. . . . The horse finished 10th. . . . The grapevine reports that the wagering smart boys bet a bundle on the horse. . . . Since the close of Florida racing the mutuel handle at the Fair Grounds in New Orleans has jumped up 100 per cent. . . . Before the ban the daily mutuel handle was $100,000. . . . The average now is close to $200,000.

The raising of the New Orleans handicap from $10,000 to $25,000 and the Louisiana Derby from $7,500 to $15,000 has started another flood of telephone calls from Miami, Fla., to the Fair Grounds from horse owners for stall space. . . . It is apparent that the best horses now in training will be nominated for the richest winter race. . . . Arlington Park, one of the finest racing plants in America, has a seating capacity of 24,000. . . . 19,000 can be accommodated in the grandstand and 5,000 in the clubhouse inclosure. . . . Few racing stands in the world can boast of comfortable seating capacity of more than 24,000.

New Orleans Used to Hold Its Races on Nearby Plantation.

Al Tauzier, the Clem Nance of the Louisiana state racing board, declares that he has a New Orleans, La., newspaper printed in 1820 detailing a series of races for horses of all ages on a plantation near the Crescent City. . . . Tauzier claims that no other racing center in the country can go back that far in the sport. . . . F. Jerome McNulty, who has a large string of horses at the Fair Grounds, is a nephew of the governor of Oklahoma. . . . The city of New Orleans received $1,434 in sales taxes on horses claimed during the month of January at the Fair Grounds.

Golden Gloves Fans Will Meet Signor Janiro

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cleveland, O., Feb. 6.—"Why, that child should be in bed at this hour of the night!" exclaimed the middle aged woman whose son had induced her to attend the finals of the Cleveland Plain Dealer's 15th annual Golden Gloves tournament last night. And there was more than one person in the crowd of 11,000 that packed the arena who agreed with her about the moppet who caused her remark.

The only real exception would have been Sailor Peter Megas, who said afterward that he wished Anthony Joseph Janiro had been in bed early last evening. The sailor testified that Anthony threw more punches than there are parts in the Diesel engines Pete is studying in a navy school here. By the time Janiro was thru firing, he had earned a well-deserved three round decision, the Cleveland featherweight championship, and a ride to Chicago and the Tournament of Champions.

Sheds Choir Boy Demeanor.

This cherubic little Italian, who will be 17 years old come Feb. 17, looks and acts like a 10 year old until he hears a timer's gong sound. Tony apparently has a definite allergy to such, for he sheds his choir boy demeanor as soon as he hears one and becomes a punching whirlwind until a round is over. When Tony hops into Chicago Stadium ring Feb. 22 to make his debut in the Tournament of Champions, the officials can prepare to give him all the points available for aggressiveness, and it's an effective aggressiveness, too, as Megas and three other foes of Janiro in the Cleveland tourney will testify.

Janiro, who was born in Springdale, Pa., has lived in Youngstown, O., for the last eight years. Until a year ago, his only connection with boxing was that of rooting for his older brother, Frank, who took part in a number of Youngstown Golden Gloves bouts. He confined his athletic endeavors to making himself an All-City half back in a Youngstown parochial school league.

Recognizes Competitive Spirit.

Then County Commissioner Tom Carney, who has conducted all Youngstown qualifying rounds for the Plain Dealer tournament for the last 15 years, decided that Tony would go just as well in a ring as he did on the gridiron. Carney recognized the kid's great competitive spirit, and, so far, he hasn't been wrong. Carney assigned Carmen [Chick] Chickilo, who had fought amateur bouts in Louisville and Los Angeles, to teach Tony the fundamentals. Chick admitted last night that once that bell rang, Tony didn't need much teaching, and certainly no urging.

Janiro was an unknown until this tournament, and it appeared that he would remain one when he drew for his first round opponent, Bobby Quinn of Cleveland, an Irish-born lad who was a top favorite in the featherweight division. Quinn fought the good fight, as Tony confessed last night, but when it was over, young Signor Janiro was the winner, and without an argument. He then ran into two other favorites in George Timoteo and Leo Garrett, but they also fell before Tony's fury. In gaining his title last night, Janiro decisively defeated Megas.

LANDIS CANCELS DAHLGREN'S SALE TO INDIANAPOLIS

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers today received word that Commissioner K. M. Landis had canceled the deal that sent Babe Dahlgren, veteran first baseman, to Indianapolis of the American Association.

Dahlgren, obtained by the Dodgers from the Chicago Cubs last year, originally was sent to Indianapolis in a trade for Third Baseman Joe Bestudik and Pitcher Earl Reid. That deal was canceled soon after Branch Rickey became president of the Brooklyn club when Bestudik joined the army.

Rickey then sold Dahlgren to Indianapolis but Landis ruled he was sent to the minor league club for less than the waiver price.

Baseball Men Open Sessions on Problems

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—With their fingers crossed against the tightening government strictures on sports, baseball's most prominent leaders gathered today for the 20th annual dinner of New York baseball writers tomorrow night and for various meetings of major and minor leagues over the week-end.

The outlook for baseball was the subject of much private discussion, but all the game's principal figures insisted that they were going ahead with plans for the 1943 season in the belief that baseball is worth while in war time.

Commissioner K. M. Landis, William G. Bramham, president of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues [the minors], and William Harridge, president of the American league, are present, along with many major and minor league club owners and managers.

National to Meet Tuesday.

The National league will meet Tuesday, faced with the problem of straightening out the Philadelphia Phils, who are in financial difficulties.

Ford Frick, president of the National league, has been leading an effort to find new backers for the club, but has not been successful.

One possibility is that the league, from which President Gerry Nugent of the Phils has borrowed nearly $200,000, might move to assume management of the club as a trustee. This would be less drastic than voiding the franchise and would protect minority stockholders.

Nugent, who controls 52 per cent of the stock, has been unable to sign a manager or proceed with other plans for the new season up until now and it was evident that some change in the situation would have to be made at the league meeting.

Williams to Get Award.

At the writers' dinner an award will be made to Ted Williams, the Red Sox slugger now training for naval aviation, as the player of the year.

Speakers will include Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, Wendell Willkie, and Elmer Davis, but to keep the program from getting too serious the 1,300 guests will be entertained by Abbott and Costello, Jimmy Conzelman, Chicago Cardinal coach, and by the writers' own burlesque of the baseball scene.

TIGERS TO PLAY CUBS, SOX

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 6 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers announced today a curtailed schedule of 13 exhibition games, seven with the Pittsburgh Pirates and two each with the Chicago Cubs and White Sox and Minneapolis of the American association. The spring schedule opens March 27, less than two weeks after the Tiger squad reports at Evansville, Ind.

Last year in Florida the Tigers had 30 exhibition games. General Manager Jack Zeller said one or two additional games would be booked with the world champion St. Louis Cardinals. The schedule:

March 27 and 28, Chicago White Sox at Evansville; April 3 and 4, Chicago Cubs at Evansville; April 10, Pittsburgh at Muncie, Ind.; April 11, Minneapolis at Terre Haute, Ind., and Pittsburgh at Evansville; April 14, Minneapolis at Evansville; April 15 and 16, Pittsburgh at Muncie; April 17, 18, and 19, Pittsburgh at Detroit.

The Tigers also listed their official camp roster of 35 players—3 catchers, 15 pitchers, 11 infielders and 6 outfielders. Eighteen are newcomers, with the Tigers possessing a large holdover squad only in pitching, where there are nine veterans headed by Paul Trout, Tommy Bridges, Virgil Trucks, Hal White, and Hal Newhouser, who among them won 55 of Detroit's 73 games last year.

NAVY BLANKS BUCKEYES.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 6 [AP].—The United States Naval academy wrestling team won every match as it defeated Ohio State tonight, 34 to 0. It was the fourth straight victory of the season for the midshipmen.

MAJOR LEAGUE OWNERS MAY CUT DEEP INTO WAGES

Magnates Face Hazards This Season.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Salary affairs so far as the big leagues are concerned shouldn't cause even a ripple of excitement this spring. Considering conditions, it's possible the printers won't be called upon even once to peck at their linotype machines to put together the word "holdout."

Of course, the absence of the annual squawks which sometimes really involve money, other times ballyhoo, and not infrequently mean nothing more than that some temperamental athlete is dodging the monotony of spring training, won't be because of a splurge of generosity on the part of the 16 club owners.

On the contrary, there probably will be reductions on a wholesale scale for the very sound reason that the magnates face a hazardous season. Most of the athletes will be tickled to grab whatever is offered, appreciating that it could be worse.

Storeroom of Gold?

There always has been an impression held both by the public and the players that a big league club owner has a storeroom bulging with gold nuggets and that if he doesn't hand it out freely he's a skinflint. Apparently it is difficult to remember that baseball, after all, is a business and that its custodians aren't in the game because of civic pride. Give big league baseball just one bad season and you'd see about a half dozen of the clubs gasping over finances.

The recent treasury department ruling allows clubs to pay anything between last season's maximum and minimum without transgressing the wage-freeze law, but there's not much danger that the 1942 tops will even be touched, a fact that will establish lower maximums for 1944—if there is baseball. Many of the maximum men on various clubs already have gone or will go shortly to one of Uncle Sam's fitters.

The Case of Ted Williams.

An outstanding maximum case is that of Ted Williams, the Red Sox hit artist, who supposedly drew in excess of $30,000 last season. Ted's in the navy now. Presumably this exceeded Manager Joe Cronin's wage. He is listed as a player-manager. Joe DiMaggio, who intends to enlist, was the top Yankee with an approximate $40,000 for 1942. There's nobody on either the Red Sox or Yankees entitled to expect such compensation.

There's the case of Thornton Lee of the White Sox. He balked on terms a year ago and wound up the best paid of the Comiskey's diamond employés. But he had a bad season because of arm trouble, so he can expect a neat trim. The club's next highest was said to have been Luke Appling and he, too, slowed down considerably as a hitter during 1942. There'll be another shearing there.

Claude Passeau was thought to be the Cubs' ranking man on the salary list. On his work the club might feel he is entitled to an increase, but it could be granted only with the consent of the treasury department.

Cubs' General Manager to Leave for Meeting Today

James T. Gallagher, the Cubs' general manager who had announced he would pass up the National league's spring meeting Tuesday in New York, changed his mind yesterday. He will go east today to assist President P. K. Wrigley in looking after the club's interests during the session.

DON'T LET THOSE RABBITS SCARE YOU; TRAP THEM

Easy to Get While Snow Is on Ground.

BY BOB BECKER.

If property owners who are suffering from the depredations of rabbits and prospective victory gardeners who are worrying about possible damage from these animals want to cut down the number of cottontails, this is the time to do it. Better get after the rabbits while there is snow on the ground rather than wait until spring, when it is more difficult to bag them. In April, May, June, and other growing months it is not so easy to get a rabbit into a baited trap. He has plenty to eat at that time of year, so bait doesn't have much appeal for him.

We have been getting letters from many home owners about the damage that the rabbits have been inflicting on trees and shrubs this winter. And gardeners who tried to raise vegetables last year also have been writing us about the trouble they had with cottontails that consumed many pounds of vegetables that were far too valuable for rabbit food.

Heavy Damage Inflicted.

Livingston Osborne, director of conservation, said recently that his department was aware of the heavy damage being inflicted by rabbits this winter. He added that an overabundance of cottontails in the spring and summer may seriously affect victory and community gardens by depleting potential food stocks badly needed during the war period. Inasmuch as the department does not have the authority under the state constitution to open a special rabbit season so that hunters may go after them, it's up to different communities to launch an anti-rabbit campaign and ask residents to coöperate.

We are using box traps [they take animals alive] to catch the rabbits which already ruined some of our trees. [We are going to put in a garden this spring, so we want no cottontails around the place.] One may make [out of wood] either a box trap with the trigger which drops a small door behind the rabbit and holds it alive, or a figure 4 trap which when baited with a carrot or apple also is a successful outfit. One suburbanite reports that he has caught 22 rabbits this winter with a figure 4 trap.

Trap Diagrams Available.

This department has prepared mimeographed diagrams of both box and figure 4 traps with directions on how to make them. Any one wishing a copy of this leaflet may obtain one by sending a stamped addressed envelope to us. Along with the diagram there is a suggestion on a copper soap rodent repellant which can be painted on trees and shrubs to keep rabbits away. The leaflet also tells about a ready made live trap which can be bought. This is a trap 24 inches long. We are using one of these to catch rabbits.

Apparently many readers are having their troubles with rabbits this winter. Mrs. William Harrison Severns of Urbana writes that an old fashioned box trap baited with carrots will catch cottontails that are a pest. [Such a box trap was described by this department on Jan. 28.] She points out that trapping now will protect victory gardens next summer for one rabbit can make short work of garden produce like peas or beans or lettuce.

ASK VOLUNTEERS TO AID PROGRAM AT PLAYGROUNDS

Among the skills sought are building of model airplanes, dramatics, Indian craft, art, dancing, photography, woodworking, and the ability to supervise game rooms and playground activities.

Applicants may call the volunteer office of civilian defense and the Council of Social Agencies, 111 West Jackson boulevard [Wabash 0529] tomorrow, Tuesday, and Wednesday between 9:30 a. m. and 8 p. m. for an interview. AUTHORS BLAME MONOPOLIES FOR U. S. RUBBER MESS

Tell Synthetics Story in 'Germany's Master Plan.'

BY HAL FOUST.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—International monopolies—one controled by Germany and another controled by Great Britain—are blamed for America's shortage of rubber and synthetics in a new book, "Germany's Master Plan" [Duell, Sloan & Pearce, Inc.]. The authors are Joseph Borkin, economic adviser, anti-trust division, department of justice, and Charles A. Welsh, a cartel expert for the office of price administration. The introduction is by Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general heading the anti-trust division.

A chapter tells of the long research and perfection of synthetic rubber by the German chemical trust and charges that thru commercial alliances it prevented the processes from being developed in America. The chapter also tells of restraints in the propagation of natural rubber enforced by an intergovernmental agreement headed by England with Holland, France, India, and Siam participating.

Farben Produces Tires in 1912.

As early as 1912, I. G. Farben, the German firm, displayed tires produced in its laboratories. During the first World war between 300 and 500 tons a year were produced. Thereafter research continued and later production capacity increased.

"In both England and the United States," a paragraph reads, "large supplies of natural rubber as well as the interests of the rubber planters and fabricators precluded any large scale efforts to develop synthetic rubber beyond the stage of the laboratory."

Standard Oil of New Jersey and I. G., as the Germany company is commonly abbreviated, joined in an agreement to exchange know-how and experience for exclusive mutual benefit.

Two Chief Difficulties.

"For the entire decade after 1932," reads the book, "Standard endeavored to keep its control untouched. There were two chief difficulties. First, the rubber manufacturers might seek to develop their own synthetics, which would void Standard's control. . . . The second burden under which Standard pursued its policy of averting independent research in synthetic rubber came from I. G.

"I. G. prevented Standard from committing itself to a positive program of synthetic rubber developments, and withheld the necessary know-how. As early as 1935 Standard knew that I. G. was not living up to its agreement to exchange full and complete information on Buna rubber. . . .

"I. G.'s attitude was motivated by military expediency; war was coming and the German government would not arm its enemies.

"Had Too Much at Stake."

"Despite I. G.'s refusal to adhere to its own side of the bargain, Standard, as a 'loyal partner in marriage,' decided to give its own knowledge of butyl rubber, a Standard Oil development, to Germany. . . . Standard conveyed this information because of commercial considerations: It had too much at stake."

"There would have been no synthetic rubber problem," reads another section of the book, "if we could grow enough natural rubber or if the natural rubber industry over the last 20 years had not used a geographical monopoly as an opportunity to create one of the most important of raw material cartels."

The familiar modern history of natural rubber is related, the smuggling of seeds from Brazil to England and their cultivation in British Malaya, Ceylon, and the Dutch East Indies, while the wild trees of the Amazon suffered a blight. In 1920 and '21 the British Rubber Growers' association petitioned parliament to compel a restriction on production, and such a law was passed in 1922. The Dutch plantations expanded.

In 1933 conferences were started and in 1934 Great Britain, Holland, France, India, and Siam reached an intergovernmental agreement governing world rubber production.

Agreement Renewed in 1938.

"Accumulation of excess stocks of rubber was prohibited," reads the book. "Nothing was overlooked. The export of 'leaves, flowers, seeds, buds, twigs, branches, roots, or any living portion of the rubber plant that may be used to propagate it was prohibited. Here indeed was the ultimate in cartel regulation of nature's processes.

"The intergovernmental agreement was renewed in 1938 for a period of five years."

It controled 90 per cent of the world's natural rubber production. After Pearl Harbor, Japan seized the plantations. And America today is spending millions of dollars trying to hasten cultivation of rubber trees in South and Central America and in the West Indies.

And other millions are being spent in a hasty construction of synthetic rubber plants.

Transportation Collapse Threatens.

And Rubber Administrator William M. Jeffers says we're threatened with a collapse of transportation on the home front this fall due to the rubber shortage.

And Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson says the erection of aviation gasoline refineries, needed for air combat, and the construction of escort vessels to fight submarines are both being delayed so we can build the synthetic rubber plants more quickly.

A KNOWLEDGE OF ARITHMETIC WILL PAY MOTORIST

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—There's no rationing of the midnight oil motorists will burn during the next few weeks in computing expenses of automobile ownership and operation for their 1942 income tax reports. With less pleasure driving, owing to the tire and gasoline rationing, the proportion of car costs which may be deducted from gross income is larger than in former years. And with the higher tax rates, the rewards for arithmetic are greater.

To economize in the consumption of midnight oil, an outline for guidance in these money saving calculations is contained in this story. The information is from governmental sources here and from the Chicago Motor club.

Pleasure Driving Shrinks.

All operating and maintenance expenses, including gasoline costs and depreciation, are deductible when the car was used exclusively for business. A pro rata portion of these expenses may be subtracted when the car was used for both business and pleasure. The amount of pleasure driving has shrunk since Pearl Harbor.

Furthermore, Charles M. Hayes, president of the Motor club, pointed out that under recent interpretations, the definition of "business use" has been somewhat broadened to include deduction of expense of operation of automobiles used for the purpose of collection of income or for the management, conservation, or maintenance of property held for production of income.

Depreciation varies according to the use to which an automobile is put, ordinarily depreciation for a pleasure car being approximately 20 per cent per annum. Depreciation has been allowed in excess of that amount where a car is put to excessive use.

No Claim with Allowance.

Where an employé receives an allowance or mileage from the employer for automobile operation, unless such allowance is declared as part of income, no claim can be made by the employé for deduction because of operating expenses.

Other deductible items, summarized, include the following:

All sums paid during the calendar year as registration fees, vehicle license fees, federal use tax fees, personal property taxes, and municipal taxes;

Interest on money borrowed for the purchase of an automobile;

The amount of financing charges on automobile purchased, which covers the interest on the loan, when specifically set forth in the contract, but not the amount covering the premium on insurance to protect the finance company's interest;

Gas Tax in Most States.

Gasoline taxes in most states, including Illinois and Indiana, and retail sales tax on purchase of tangible personal property, such as automobiles or accessories, when the tax is separately itemized in the purchase price;

Automobile insurance on cars used for business purposes;

Uncompensated losses sustained by reason of damage to automobiles used for business or pleasure;

Damages paid for injuries to persons or for destruction of property, provided the automobile was being used for business at the time of the accident, and provided loss is borne by taxpayer;

Loss sustained when a car used for business is sold outright at a price less than its depreciated value; [loss sustained where an automobile used for business is traded in for a new car cannot be deducted, but such loss can be considered as part of the cost when computing the depreciation for the ensuing year].

Nondeductible Items Listed.

Nondeductible items include the federal gasoline tax and the federal taxes on lubricating oil, tires, tubes, accessories, new cars and trucks. A federal ruling is that these taxes are imposed upon the manufacturer or distributor, not upon the consumer.

No deduction can be made for the amount paid for an automobile used for either business or pleasure, this being a capital expenditure and subject to claim for depreciation where the automobile is used for business.

NEWS AND VIEWS

The first vehicle to traverse the recently opened Alaskan-Canadian [Alcan] military highway on the long trip from Dawson Creek, B. C., to Fairbanks, Alaska, was one of the trucks it built for the army, reports the Dodge division of the Chrysler corporation. The truck was a four wheel drive vehicle driven by Sergt. Otto Gronke of Chicago and Corp. Robert Bowe of Minneapolis.

The truck drivers encountered bitter winds and temperatures as low as 30 degrees below zero on the record breaking run. The first part of the 1,670 mile trip was from Dawson Creek to Whitehorse, in the Yukon territory. After a brief rest at Kluane lake—just outside Whitehorse—the truck continued on to Fairbanks.

Steve J. Barrett, president of the Logan Square Buick company, has been elected a director of the Chicago Automobile Trade association. He succeeds Lt. Comm. Victor C. P. Dreiske, former Cadillac branch manager, who resigned to join the navy. Barrett, who has been in the automobile business in Chicago for 30 years, organized the Logan Square company 12 years ago.

Alvan Macauley, chairman of the board of the Packard Motor Car company, recently received a dispatch from the British air commission stating that Packard built Rolls-Royce engines were used to power four-motored Lancaster bombers which bombed Berlin last month.

Wing Comm. L. S. Lee, D. S. O., who led the first bombing flight on Jan. 16 over Berlin, sent the following message to Packard workers.

"I flew the first Lancaster powered by Merlin engines [Rolls-Royce] to take off to attack Berlin. I had not previously tested the engines, but I took off confident that the workers of America would not let me down. They did not. Thruout all the difficulties and dangers of the flight the engines ran smoothly and efficiently and gave me a feeling of confidence which is so essential when you go out to attack German targets. Best wishes to you all and let us have more of your engines."

Harry J. Klingler, vice president of General Motors and general manager of the Pontiac division, states that because of an improvement developed by Pontiac in the manufacture of the Oerlikon 20 mm. automatic anti-aircraft cannon the navy gunners who use them may be tall, short, slender or "left-eyed." Because of shoulder rests that were unadjustable and were set very close together only slender men could squeeze into firing position. Today—and for a long time—the Oerlikons that now are supplied our fighting men have fully adjustable shoulder rests and are so designed that a man of any size may fire them.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

A MORONIC DRIVER.

Chicago, Feb. 3.—About 7 p. m. I was walking west on Madison street. Crossing the street at 4100 I had the light and a black sports car drove up blocking the crossing. The driver, a man about 24, a fat lad with a moronic grin, was looking at the west side of the street and inching his way north. I crossed in front of the car, nearly getting hit. I turned to look at him. He saw me and thumbed his nose. Frankly, I was flabbergasted, so I turned again, thinking I must be seeing things, when he went thru the same performance. Then, I walked over and took down his license number.

These lads, knowing our brothers and husbands are in the service, can be very daring. They must derive great satisfaction from their brave deeds. Incidentally, my two brothers are in the navy.

JEAN O'BRIEN.

IT'S RUBBER THAT'S SCARCE.

Chicago, Feb. 3.—Is this "gas rationing" really a serious thing? In traveling west on Harrison street recently, I have noticed that for several days the West Chicago Park truck has been removing the snow from the area flooded for skating in Altgeld park. When we were children if we wanted to skate we had to shovel the snow and they did not have "gas rationing" in those days!

I believe the children would be glad to help by doing the shoveling and saving the gas for a better purpose.

POLICEMAN HITCHHIKER.

Chicago, Feb. 1.—In driving my motor car I was stopped by a policeman and asked if I was going north. He stated that he was going to 6000 north and on his way home, opened the door and sat down next to me.

In my opinion the police are not allowed to stop citizens, only to command a car in time of emergency. Certainly the police have not the authority to force a request on a citizen to drive the police to their homes.

When the policeman left my car I told him I had two sons in service, and he said that's nice.

Worlds Boxes Maxin Feb. 15 at Stadium

Lee Savold, Paterson, N. J., heavyweight, who knocked out Nate Bolden in Chicago Stadium last month, tomorrow will return for a 10 round bout with Lem Franklin, former Cleveland sectional Golden Gloves champion, in the Stadium Feb. 15. Franklin, who scored a knockout over Altus Allen on the Savold-Bolden card, floored Savold for the count in a previous meeting four years ago.

A 10 round supporting match on the impending program will bring together Clayton Worlds, Chicago, and Joe Maxin, Cleveland, both Golden Gloves products. In his last appearance, Worlds scored a victory over Pat Comiskey, giant stablemate of Savold. It was Clayton's sixth professional appearance. Earlier he scored triumphs over James Fitzjames, Bill Petersen, and Allen. Maxin defeated Clarence Brown in Marigold Gardens Jan. 18.

Al Reasoner and Alvin Gomez, local lightweight rivals, are all set for their 12 round contest in the Marigold arena tomorow. In two previous fights with Gomez, Reasoner scored a 10 round decision and was held to an eight round draw. Jackie Nichols and Jimmy Joyce, Gary junior lightweights, will meet in a six round semi-windup. A five round event will involve Jack Hill, Bloomington, Ill., middleweight, and Tito Taylor. Elbert Adams is matched with Young Ted Lewis, and Al Nedoff is paired with Sam Scully.

Walter Palmer, north side heavyweight wrestler, will oppose Ivan Kalmikoff in the windup bout of a mat card in White City tomorrow.

International Calls Off Its All-Star Game

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—The International league met today in an aura of optimism and went over details of the 1943 schedule which, as previously announced, calls for 154 games to open April 22 and close Sept. 12.

The league voted against holding an all-star game this year because of transportation difficulties and placed the matter of the little world series in the hands of Frank Shaughnessy, league president, for consultation with George Trautman, president of the American association.

Close on Different Dates.

The barrier to continuance of the little world series rests or the fact that the International league will end its season this year a week earlier than the American association. Both circuits have playoffs planned at the conclusion of the regular schedule and it was thought possible that some adjustment of these post-season games might make possible continuance of the interleague competition.

The matter of charity games was left to each individual club, altho President Shaughnessy took occasion to point out that the league last year raised approximately $105,000 for various relief funds, a sum that was more than 40 per cent of all the relief money raised in all the country's minor leagues.

Opening Day Pairings.

As planned now the opponents on opening day, April 22, will be Toronto at Baltimore, Montreal at Syracuse, Buffalo at Jersey City, and Rochester at Newark. The "second openers" on May 6 will be Jersey City at Buffalo, Newark at Rochester, Baltimore at Montreal, and Syracuse at Toronto.

Fred Vincent.

New demands on Chicago's few vacant apartments are to be made later this month with the arrival of about 250 officers and civilian employés of the war bond division of the war department, Fred Vincent, assistant national manager of the office of decentralization service, Washington, announced yesterday.

Since Feb. 23, 1942 more than 11,000 government workers have been transferred here from Washington, it was said, and more are to come. The vanguard of the army's war bond group will arrive here between Feb. 15 and 27, and others are to follow later, but a large part of the division's expected staff of 2,400 workers are to be recruited here.

Lowell Baker, Chicago branch manager of decentralization service, 366 West Adams street, yesterday issued a fresh appeal to apartment building and house owners to list vacancies to expedite locating the newcomers.

Many Families Double Up.

Chicago because of the vast amount of war industries and activities here would have had a far tighter situation in apartments than has been the case except for induction of many men into military service and the transfer of many persons from one part of the city to another because of employment changes.

"Families of many of the men drawn into service are doubling up," said Baker. "Many wives are returning to the homes of their parents. Others are renting their apartments furnished. The result of these various factors has been to give us a turnover in apartments, making some available for our new citizens.

Newcomers Like Chicago.

"A surprising thing to many of us has been the way the newcomers from Washington are taking to Chicago. The reception given them by Chicagoans has helped increase their liking for the city. As a result, it has been much easier for us to get them settled. But we must have more listings of flats and houses, especially in the moderate priced brackets."

Because of the many fiscal agencies located here Chicago has become a sort of second governmental financial capital, it was said. The treasury department alone has a staff of about 4,600 persons concentrated mainly in the Merchandise Mart, tho a number are in the building at 24th street and Prairie avenue.

Would Fill Half of Mart.

Under the government decentralization policy, bureaus moved here from Washington alone account for about 1,600,000 square feet of office space—equal to more than half the rentable area of the Merchandise Mart or four times the size of the Conway building.

The army's war bond division will occupy space in the 6 story former Carson Pirie Scott & Co. wholesale building at Adams street and the river. The first three floors are being cleared rapidly, and the first floor will be ready for occupancy tomorrow. The building was recently leased for the war department's accounting and examination divisions, including the war bond division.

The war bond division will have the task of expediting the movement of war bonds bought by soldiers thru pay roll deductions to the persons named to receive them.

OUTPUT OF MEAT NOT AS LARGE AS IT APPEARS

Total Is Distorted by Federal Rules.

BY ARNOLD ERICKSON.

Production of meat in the United States this winter not only is far below the volume expected by the government, but is not even what it appears to be, a department of agriculture representative disclosed yesterday. The big output totals reported the last few weeks for federally inspected packing plants have been inflated by inclusion of many packers that did not have this inspection a year ago, he said, thus making the totals an inaccurate production gauge.

The addition of more plants was not for the purpose of "blowing up" the inspected meat totals or to give a false impression of production, he explained, but to make available a larger tonnage for army and lend-lease purposes. Only plants having federal inspection can sell to the government. The program to bring more packers under federal inspection is expected to continue.

Reports Are Misleading.

December figures of the department of agriculture on live stock slaughter, latest official data, illustrate how misleading the "inspected" reports can be unless analyzed. Cattle slaughter was shown at 982,403 head, only 2.1 per cent less than in December, 1941. After the numbers handled by "new" plants are deducted, a decline of 8.4 per cent is indicated.

Hog slaughter for December was the largest of any month on record. However, instead of exceeding the former record by 177,000 head as the figures indicated, the margin was only 55,000 after deduction of volume handled by packers added to the inspected list. The government disclosed that these "new packers" handled 6.4 per cent of the December cattle total, 2.7 per cent of the calves, 1.8 per cent of the hogs, and 2.6 per cent of the sheep and lambs. Last September the percentages were only 2 per cent for cattle and approximately 1 per cent for calves, hogs, sheep and lambs.

Establish 23 Year Highs.

Lively competition for supplies lifted prices of meat animals to 23 year highs in the Chicago stock yards last week. Steers, hogs, and lambs averaged $15.50 a hundred pounds, top for any week since March, 1920, and third highest on record for February. This cost was 25 per cent over that in the corresponding week last year, 56 per cent above two years ago, and 20 per cent above the level of February, 1929.

Steers and yearlings closed 25 to 50 cents higher than a week earlier. Heifers showed gains of 25 cents. Beef cows and calves were steady to strong. Gains of 5 to 10 cents were general in hogs. Lambs finished strong to 25 cents higher.

PHILIP MORRIS DECLARES EXTRA DIVIDEND OF $1.50

Directors of Philip Morris & Co., Ltd., New York, yesterday declared an extra dividend of $1.50 a common share and the regular quarterly disbursement of 75 cents. Regular quarterly disbursements of $1.06¼ a share on the 4¼ per cent and of $1.12½ a share on 4½ per cent cumulative preferred stocks also were announced. An extra of $2 was paid on the common last April.

Southern Pipe Line company, Oil City, Pa., announced a 30 cent dividend on the common stock, the same as last February, but 20 cents less than was paid in December.

Seeks to Stop Sale of Million Pounds Meat

Suits against 32 meat and poultry slaughterers and wholesalers to stop the sale of 1 million excess-quota pounds of meat in the Chicago area per quarter were filed yesterday in the Chicago district Federal court by the regional office of price administration.

Injunctions were asked to restrain the defendants from either selling excess quantities; charging excess prices; or failing to keep proper records of their transactions. Alex Elson, chief OPA attorney for this region, said motions for the preliminary injunctions may be heard early this week.

Civilian Meat Supply to Be Cut.

"The type of illegal operations described in these suits has taken many millions of pounds of meat from the army and navy procurement agencies in the Chicago area," Elson said. "Our investigations are continuing."

The injunctions, he said, would effect an immediate cut in the meat supply to civilians, but he said this would be only in accordance with the quotas that should have been observed since October.

The civil suits seek to prevent the defendant slaughterers from delivering more meat for civilian consumption until they bring their delivery volume within the bounds of the present quota period, which ends March 31. Forrest Randolph, chief of the meat rationing section for the regional OPA, directed 40 investigators for a month before the suits were filed.

Defendants Are Listed.

Defendants are H. C. Thurnau, Bartlett, Ill.; Fred Ackman, Hampshire, Ill.; Henry H. Oedzes, 16 East 123d street; Albert Willrett, De Kalb; Blasco Roviaro, Blue Island; Alexander De Young, Calumet Park, and D. T. Nicholson, Elgin, slaughterers charged with overselling their quotas; Nagle Brothers, Lansing, Ill., failing to keep records; Lloyd Brown, South Holland, Ill., failing to keep records; Penczek Brothers, Willow Springs, exceeding price ceiling; Thomas J. Fenessy Sr., 848 Fulton street, price violations; Alexander Brincivalli, Dolton, Ill.; Emil Johandes, 81st street and Central avenue; August Peterson, Burling, Ill.; George Johannesma, Worth, Ill., and Ernst Nadler, Blue Island, selling in excess of quota.

Accused of Price Violations.

Defendants charged with violating price ceilings were Peter Fox Sons company, 1122 Fulton street; Forrest Poultry company, 1238 George street; M. Mannebach, 1246 George street; Great Northern Packing company, 838 Fulton street; Russell Packing company, 3946 Normal avenue; S. Lowenstein & Son, Inc., 849 Fulton street; Lincoln Wholesale Market, 926 Fulton street; A. Lederer company, 816 Fulton street; Fulton Market Provision company, 906 Fulton street; Fulton Meat company, 935-37 Fulton street; Peter Britten & Sons, 832-4 Fulton street; Prime Provision Company, Inc., 911 Fulton street; Peoria Provision company, 127 North Peoria street; Superior Packing company, 4111-4119 Union avenue; S. EASTERN GROUP BUYS CONTROL IN ALBERT PICK CO.

Controling common stock interest in Albert Pick Company, Inc., Chicago hotel and restaurant equipment maker, has been acquired by a group of investors headed by Jacob Arronson of Philadelphia, Pa., and Samuel S. Flug of New York, the company announced yesterday. The new group said present officers, personnel, and policies will be retained. Maurice Rothschild is chairman of the board and I. S. People and Events

Members of the Illinois Lumber and Material Dealers association will hold a two day war conference at their 53d annual meeting which opens Tuesday in the Hotel Sherman. Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota will speak the first day. Ernst Hammerschmidt, of Lombard, Ill., association president, will preside.

The American Institute of Baking announced the election of Ralph D. Ward as president of the Drake Bakeries, Inc., New York, and chairman of the war committee of the American Bakers' association.

Appointment of Dr. Frederick Conrad Blanck, chief research chemist for the H. J. Heinz company of Pittsburgh, as director of subsistence research for the army quartermaster corps was announced by the war department.

New Railroad Oil Carrier

This is the "flexitank" offered as a solution to the oil tank car shortage. Four of the "tanks" are placed in an ordinary frieght car.

Freight Cars Are Converted to Carry Oil

Fifty freight cars are being outfitted with tanks in an Aurora shop so that they can be used for transporting petroleum products, Mark J. Fields, Chicago inventor, announced yesterday. Fields developed a method whereby freight cars can be converted to oil carriers, offering one possibility for relieving the tank car shortage.

The 50 cars are being supplied from a pool arranged by the Association of American Railroads. Fields calls his product "flexitank" car.

Martin Process Also Used.

Meanwhile, Jesse Jones, secretary of commerce, announced in Washington, D. C., that the United States Rubber corporation is equipping another 50 cars with the "marengcell," a patent process owned by the Glenn L. Martin company, so that they can transport petroleum.

The Defense Plant corporation has authorized contracts for approximately $185,000 to cover the cost of converting the two groups of 50 cars.

The Santa Fe railway disclosed recently that it had coöperated in tests of one of the cars developed by Fields. Prominent railroad men and engineers were present at the Santa Fe tests in its yards here.

Four Compartments Built.

The "flexitank" car is made by dividing the interior of a box car into four compartments by means of wooden bulkheads. In each compartment a canvas container, treated with a rubber synthetic, is suspended by a series of ropes and pulleys. Each of the canvas tanks has a capacity of more than 3,000 gallons.

The compartments are filled thru a four inch valve at the top of the car and unloaded thru a valve at the bottom.

"If these cars prove successful, as it is expected they will," said Fields, "we will convert as many cars as the railroads can handle for delivering petroleum to the east."

Fields is president of the Soldine corporation, manufacturing chemists. The cars are being converted at the plant of the Aurora Cotton Mills company.

COFFEE COUPON 25 ELIGIBLE FOR DEPOSIT IN BANK

Banks taking part in the ration banking program were informed by the Chicago regional office of the OPA that coffee stamp No. 25 will be acceptable for deposit tomorrow, altho the bank memorandum covering the stamp will not reach the banks until later in the week.

Rationing boards no longer are handling the rationing stamps which now go thru the banks. Retailers who in December, 1942, did a gross business of less than $5,000 have the option of opening bank rationing accounts or of passing their stamps or certificates on to their wholesalers. Retailers who did a gross business of $5,000 or more in December 1942 handle their stamps thru bank rationing accounts.

Chicago Bank Clearings Rise to 422.2 Millions

Chicago bank clearings last week totaled $422,200,000, compared with $413,500,000 the preceding week and $388,200,000 in the corresponding period last year, the Chicago Clearing House association announced yesterday. The report follows:

STRIKES IN LAST YEAR COST U. S. 4½ MILLION MAN DAYS OF OUTPUT

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6 [Special].—The war labor board today reported there were 1,363 strikes involving 569,801 workers and causing a loss of 2,095,294 man days in war industries during 1942. The period covered the first full year of United States' participation in the the war and operation of the no strike, no lockout agreement between industry, labor, and government.

Preliminary figures for both war and nonwar plant stoppages during the year showed a total of 3,000, involving 825,000 employés and causing a loss of 4,565,000 man days.

The figures compared with a 1942 total in Great Britain of 1,281 strikes directly involving 349,000 workers with a loss of 12 million man hours. This, on an eight hour day basis, would amount to approximately 1,500,000 man days.

Germany Buys, but Dutch Have to Pay the Bills

LONDON, Feb. 6 (AP).—Aneta, Netherlands Indies news agency, reported today that Germany exploited the Netherlands financially and economically thruout 1942 by levying occupation charges far in excess of necessary amounts and by maintaining a constant flow of goods, capital, and labor from the conquered nation to Germany.

By April, 1942, the agency said in a review of last year, Germany had accumulated a debt stated by the Nazis at 500 million guilders but estimated by private Netherlands sources at 750 million guilders. [The guilder last was quoted in 1940 at 53 cents.]

That debt, Aneta said, was canceled and the amount, representing goods supplied to Germany, was called a contribution toward occupation expenses.

Debt Soars with Taxes.

"The increase in the national debt gives some indications of the burdens which have been imposed upon the people of the Netherlands," the review said. "In spite of the prevailing depression, taxation yielded twice as much as in 1939 but the national debt has continued to increase.

"At the end of 1940 the consolidated debt was 3 billion 588 million guilders, at the end of 1941 it was 4 billion 490 million—thanks to two semi-forced loans of 500 million each—and at the end of 1942, according to a preliminary estimate, it was approximately 5 billion 400 million guilders. Last November another semi-forced loan of a billion guilders was imposed."

Aneta explained that when Germany requisitioned goods the owner was compensated from the Netherlands treasury, the Germans paying nothing.

"Exports" Termed Thefts.

"The second form of exploitation—theft of goods and capital, disguised as export—is financed chiefly by the Netherlands bank," Aneta said.

"Germany boasts that she pays for everything which she takes from the Netherlands, but the guilders with which she pays have to be provided by the Netherlands bank. This bank is compelled to make these guilders available whenever demanded. In exchange it receives German marks, which it is forced to 'invest' in German treasury bonds."

VOIDING OF RATE HIKE PERILOUS, BUDD DECLARES

Says Rail Fate Might Be U. S. Seizure.

Washington, D. C., Feb 6 (AP).—Ralph Budd, president of the Burlington road, arguing for continuation of last year's rail rate increases, told the interstate commerce commission today that if the industry winds up in "a dilapidated condition" after the war "the specter of government intervention may materialize."

The ICC has under consideration a request of the offices of price administration and economic stabilization to cancel the increases, 6 per cent on freight and 10 per cent on passenger fares. The two agencies contend the increases are inflationary. Today's testimony completed presentation of the railroads' opposition to canceling the increases.

Severe Strain Caused.

Budd asserted that heavy movement of war materials and personnel is causing a severe strain on railroad plants that will necessitate large expenditures after the war when, he said, revenues will decrease.

Tho asserting the necessity for maintaining the carriers on an efficient basis for war service, he argued that of even greater importance in the public interest is the threat of government ownership which he said would arise if the carriers became hard pressed financially.

"The principles here involved transcend even the great interest of the nation in sound transportation," declared Budd. "The whole system of private enterprise may be threatened.

"If this important industry is to be denied an opportunity to prepare for the inevitable dislocations of the post-war period, and is thus forced to emerge from its war work in a dilapidated condition, the specter of government intervention may materialize."

Paid for Jobs Yet to Be Finished.

A. F. Cleveland, representing the Association of American Railroads, contended that net earnings of the railroads actually will not be as large as they now seem. He said the financial results of 1942 railway operations were distorted by the vast quantity of government goods now held in storage depots. Under special transit arrangements, he said, the government can move the goods on to final destination either free or at rates much below normal.

Hugh W. Siddall of Chicago, chairman of the Trans-Continental Passenger and the Western Passenger associations, said a reduction of passenger fares would result in a "most unfortunate" situation at a time when railroads are being called upon to handle rapidly growing military traffic.

The increase, Jones said, would result in an over-all commitment of approximately $83,750,000. Studebaker will operate the new facilities.

Farm Income for Year Soars to Nearly Nineteen Billions

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6 (AP).—Reflecting a large wartime demand for food and a 22 per cent increase in prices, the 1942 gross income of American farmers climbed to the record figure of 18 billion 700 million dollars, the department of agriculture said today.

This estimate was 4 billion 43 million higher than 1941 gross income. The department also forecast an increase of 12 to 17 per cent in the 1943 gross income, and further advances in farm prices.

Gross income includes returns from marketing of agricultural products, the value of products retained as food and fuel on farms where grown, the rental value of farm dwellings, and government benefit payments.

The 1942 net income—the amount remaining after deducting farm production expenses—was estimated at 10 billion 200 million, compared with 6 billion 748 million in 1941.

The department said 1942 income from marketing of farm commodities totaled about 15 billion 384 million, compared with 11 billion 244 million in 1941. Should present prospects for higher prices and larger production be realized, it added, the 1943 income from marketings would be from 15 to 20 per cent higher.

Cash income from marketings by major classes of products in 1941 and 1942, respectively included:

Food grains, $770,000,000 and $923,000,000; feed grains and hay, $586,000,000 and $787,000,000; cotton and cotton seed, $1,107,000,00 and $1,408,000,000; vegetable oil crops, $232,000,000 and $400,000,000; tobacco, $325,000,000 and $462,000,000; vegetables, $752,000,000 and $1,104,000,000; fruits and nuts, $607,000,000 and $830,000,000; meat animals, $3,261,000,000 and $4,889,000,000; dairy products, $1,897,000,000 and $2,289,000,000; and poultry and eggs, $1,105,000,000 and $1,588,000,000.

The graph compares the upturns of income groups since 1939.

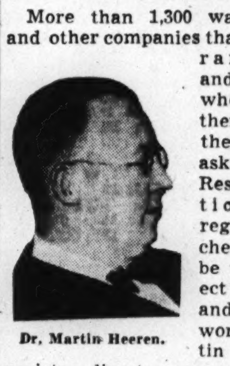
Rare Chemical Registry Cuts Output Delays

BY LELAND FORRESTER.

More than 1,300 war contractors and other companies that have needed rare chemicals and didn't know where to find them have solved the problem by asking Armour Research foundation's national registry of rare chemicals, said to be the only project of its scope and kind in the world, Dr. Martin H. Heeren, registry director, reported yesterday. The registry began functioning last summer.



Dr. Martin Heeren.

Some chemicals are so rare that only two or three drops can be found anywhere in the world. Sometimes a research organization or a manufacturer who needs a certain chemical does not know where to find a supplier. Often it takes months of searching to locate a source.

Lists Only Rare Products.

In at least one case an important war production contract was said to have been delayed for months because a certain chemical could not be found. The foundation organized the registry to solve such problems.

It now has 4,300 chemicals listed, with the names of suppliers and amounts available. No chemical listed in chemical catalogs or other well known listings is ever put on the index at the registry, but only those which cannot be located thru ordinary means.

About 200 chemicals have been added in the last week, Heeren said.

The registry is purely a clearing house for information. It does not carry any stocks of chemicals. An inquirer is referred to a supplier of the chemical he needs. Many transactions are so confidential that a secret user is put in contact with a secret supplier without either learning the identity of the other. In such cases, which usually involve trade secrets, the registry acts as intermediary.

Seeks New Information.

Dr. Heeren, who is chairman of chemical engineering research for the foundation, said that some of the incomplete filings of specialized chemicals previously indexed by private laboratories, and also lists compiled by the American Association of Scientific Workers in a pioneer effort along the same lines, have been incorporated in the index.

He has requested laboratories, individuals and industrial companies to send information on rare chemicals still not listed.

No charge is made for the service, which is available for educational as well as industrial use. Armour Research foundation is affiliated with Illinois Institute of Technology.

MORTGAGE LOAN CUT OF 15 PER CENT THIS YEAR IS INDICATED

A survey by mortgage experts has indicated that 15 per cent of outstanding loans will be retired in full this year, more than in any other year of the nation's history, the Mortgage Bankers' Association of America announced yesterday. To the mortgage bankers this means that their choice investments are thus liquidated before maturity, with little possibility of replacing them for the duration.

"It must be admitted that heavy repayments mean considerable sacrifice on the part of mortgage lenders," Charles A. Mullenix of Cleveland, association president, said.

"'A mortgage is among the most costly banking operations to handle from the lender's standpoint, and requires constant attention, supervision, and servicing while outstanding. Obviously, when many of them are repaid quicker than anticipated, the large initial expense involved often means an ultimate loss to the leader."

RETROACTIVE PAY BOOST IN STEEL PLANT APPROVED

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6 (AP).—The war labor board approved today a wage agreement between the Continental Steel corporation, Kokomo, Ind., and the CIO United Steelworkers of America providing for a general increase of 5½ cents an hour, retroactive to Feb. 15, 1942. The agreement also sets minimum rates, voluntary maintenance of membership, and the check-off.

The company is one of 70 steel companies asked by the WLB to show cause why the directives in the "big steel" decision should not apply to them.

The board approved a 10 cents an hour wage increase agreement between American Steel Foundries, Chicago, and the Pattern Makers League of North America, AFL, involving 146 workers. It is retroactive to May 1, 1942.

F. D. R. ATTEMPT TO KILL PAY TOP REPEALER FAILS

House Group Merely Delays Action.

BY WILLIAM STRAND.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—President Roosevelt's personal intervention today failed to shake the determination of members of the house ways and means committee to repeal the $25,000 salary limitation he imposed last year by executive decree.

In a letter to Rep. Robert L. Doughton [D., N. C.], chairman of the house committee, Mr. Roosevelt urged that pending legislation to increase the national debt limit to 210 billion dollars be reported to the house without a proposed amendment abolishing the salary limit. By way of reply, the committee merely postponed action for a week to give the President time to state his objections to the repealer.

"We've got the votes," declared one Republican member after the session. "He can have the time to say anything he wants in the record. The more time he gets the more votes we will have."

Disney Offers New Plan.

Meanwhile it was disclosed that Rep. Wesley E. Disney [D., Okla.] has proposed a new version of the repeal legislation, providing for the freezing of salaries over $25,000 [after taxes] at the levels of Dec. 7, 1941, the day of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, and outlawing increases beyond that sum.

A net income of $25,000 actually means a gross of $67,000, which would be the limit under the Disney proposal for every one making less than that before the start of the war. But, as explained by Disney, it would permit those who were receiving more in peace time to continue at their former high level. The allowable increases would be controled by the present price law.

G. O. P. Members Confer.

"It is salary control under orderly, legal procedure—a real ceiling—and not thru confiscation," Disney said. "It would meet the objections of those who say that as long as wages are controled there must be a similar control on salaries."

The 10 Republican members of the committee, who are lined up behind the move to nullify the Presidential order, held a separate conference after the ways and means session and agreed to accept Disney's version. With the aid of least three insurgent Democrats, the G. O. P. members hold the majority in the committee of 25 on the issue of repealing the President's limitation.

GAINS, DECLINES IN STOCK MARKET ALMOST BALANCE

Volume Tops Half Million Shares in 2 Hours.

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—The stock market was irregular in active trading today, altho selective buying sent many issues higher. More profit cashing was a retarding factor. Gains and losses of fractions to a point or so were almost evenly divided at the close.

Schenley, National Distillers, Hiram Walker, and Distillers-Seagrams dipped as proposals were disclosed in Washington, D. C., for sharp curtailment of liquor consumption. A wage and rate question impeded the rails.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks today was up to 44.1, a gain of 0.1 both for today and the week. The composite also was only 0.1 under its peak since July, 1941, established Monday.

Low Priced Issues Active.

Transfers totaled 500,250 shares, against 612,101 a week ago, with low priced stocks accounting for much of the turnover.

After an advance Monday, based mainly on war optimism, investment demand and inflation psychology, the "technical correction" which analysts had been predicting set in on Tuesday to push the market down for the first time since Jan. 20. The decline continued thru Thursday. Secrecy surrounding developments in the Solomons restrained buyers despite Russian battle successes.

Prime industrials, led by steels and motors, came back Friday, while rails and utilities failed to get anywhere. Volume slackened after million share trading Monday and Tuesday.

RAILROAD BONDS RISE.

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—Advances predominated in an irregular market for railroad bonds today and the average was at about its highest level since 1938. Industrial issues were a shade lower, and utilities were steady.

United States government loans held about steady in light trading. A 3½ point rise in New South Wales 5s was the principal change in a quiet foreign list.

CHICAGO STOCKS ADVANCE.

Chicago Stock exchange prices advanced yesterday on turnover of 18,000 shares. Volume leaders included Chicago corporation, up ⅛; Midland United A preferred, up ¼; American Radiator, unchanged at 7⅛ after reaching a new 1942-'43 high of 7¼, and Electric Household, up ⅛ to a new high of 4⅜.

In the final half hour Borg-Warner, Butler Brothers, Pullman, and Standard Oil [New Jersey] were down ⅛; Pennsylvania railroad and Standard Brands, up ⅛, and Sears Roebuck, down ¼ from the New York close.

CEILING PRICES SET FOR ONIONS AND POTATOES

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6 (AP).—Ceiling prices were established today for country shippers of early and midseason dry onions and potatoes which the OPA said assured farmers at least 100 per cent of parity. Retailers will set prices on the basis of fixed margins over their net cost.

Maximum prices for all varieties of early dry onions range from $2.60 per 50 pounds for those harvested from Feb. 8 thru March 1 to $1.65 for those harvested from June 1 to June 30. Imports from Mexico must be priced no higher than the maximum for domestic dry onions.

Prices for early white potatoes in the South Atlantic, south central, and western producing areas range from $2.15 to $2.50 a hundredweight except for Florida and Texas, where the range is $3.10 to $3.75.

Egg Futures Close Highest Since 1929, Near 36 Cents

Egg futures rose 0.05 to 0.10 cent a dozen on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday to close at the highest level since 1929. February contracts closed at 35.55 cents and March at 35.90 cents a dozen.

MOVIE THEATERS REPORT GAINS IN ATTENDANCE

Patrons Have More Money with Less to Buy.

Attendance at moving picture theaters is increasing in Chicago and thruout the nation, spokesmen for two large exhibitors said yesterday. They attributed the gain to the combination of high wages and curtailed production of consumer goods, leaving persons with more money to spend for entertainment.

Gasoline rationing, so far as Chicago and other war centers were concerned, had little effect on attendance, they said. In Chicago, particularly, both the large theaters in the loop and the neighborhood houses are adequately served by public transit lines.

Farmers in Town Oftener.

Theaters in smaller cities in agricultural districts have reported increased attendance with more farmers coming into town for diversion. Gas rationing has curbed the trips of small town people and farmers to the larger communities and enhanced the position of the small city theater, it was said.

Another factor in the increased attendance in Chicago, a spokesman said, was the concentration of service men in the city and nearby. Most theaters are giving reduced rates to service men in uniform.

Week-end visitors from out of town and families and friends of service men have also increased attendance figures, especially in the downtown theaters, it was explained.

More Go to Loop Shows.

One theater official said that with more money to spend, persons who otherwise would attend a smaller neighborhood theater to see a second run picture were coming into the loop to attend the more expensive first run feature pictures.

Comparing this year with a year ago, a spokesman said that the movie theater business had shown a comfortable gain, a trend that has been continuing for the last six months. As to the future he would not guess, explaining that further curbs on the use of gasoline and automobiles may upset any predictions.

MILL PURCHASES OFFSET BY LATE WHEAT SELLING

Buying attributed to mills lifted wheat futures early yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade, but profit taking reduced final price gains to ⅛ cent a bushel. Corn and oats closed unchanged to ⅛ cent higher and rye ⅛ to ¼ cent higher.

The mill buying of futures was believed to be for removal of hedges as a result of flour sales.

Movement of cash wheat in the southwest showed a considerable increase, but in the northwest unfavorable weather conditions have delayed shipments.

The advices of the Kelsey Statistical Service "cost" $100 per year, but there is a reason—based on our past record, which includes purchases in Chrysler, Douglas, Sperry, Homestake, Dome, etc. in the bull markets of 1932-1937, short sales of U. S. Steel at 122 and 112 in 1937, with the prediction of the collapse of that year, successful handling of War Markets since.

DIVERSIFICATION.

The soundness of the principle of diversification in security holdings as a safeguard against undue loss of capital has been demonstrated so thoroly that no one would be willing to dispute it. Another advantage of diversification, not so readily apparent, is the probability that the investor who spreads his holdings over different companies and different industries will share more fully in market uptrends.

In 1942, for example, an average for 30 leading industrial stocks made a net gain of 7.7 per cent, while an average for 15 utility issues advanced only 2.3 per cent. The person holding only utility shares presumably would have fared less favorably than a holder of diversified industrial stocks.

The averages alone do not tell the full story, however, for individual issues may outrun the average or fall behind it. Last year more than 130 issues listed on the New York Stock exchange advanced to levels at least 100 per cent above their low points established shortly after the attack on Pearl Harbor, while some prominent issues showed little or no net gain for the period, or even declined.

During the great bull market of the 1920's, many stocks hit their peaks months and even years before the stock market as a whole reached the apex.

Market commentators frequently report that stocks of a certain group or industry have been laggards during a period of general advance. The inability of a particular group or issue to keep up with the general trend is not necessarily an unfavorable sign, altho it is always cause for careful analysis to determine whether some adverse development has occurred.

Aircraft, ship building and machine tool stocks, as a whole, made no particular net progress during 1942, but this was readily explainable by the fact these industries were the first to feel the effect of the war preparedness program, and discounted their war time income gains earlier than did other groups.

The nimble professional stock trader is in position to concentrate on a few issues or a few industries, but this is not true of the average stock purchaser who cannot afford much time for the study of trends. For the latter individual, diversification offers the best assurance that he will participate in the market's broad upward trends and not be too far out of line on the downturns.

Positions are permanent with starting salary of $172.50 per month. Continued expansion offers opportunities to increase earnings substantially in supervisory and management work. Advancement on both merit and length of service. All positions based on straight salary ONLY.

WOMAN'S GREAT OPPORTUNITY
During 1942 I successfully advised hundreds of men and women how and what to do to qualify for high paid jobs in war production work. I am happy to say there are many who have taken my advice and are now drawing big pay in defense plants.
In order to give more men and women in the Chicago area an opportunity to know their qualifications, where and how to apply for employment and where and how to learn the proper use of shop and hand tools, I will be at Hotel Morrison, Chicago, from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. today [Sunday] and I will gladly advise all who call how to secure training for big-pay war production jobs.
All should share in victory as high paid workers. If you are qualified, it is your duty to apply at the nearest war plant. If not, stop holding your hands and complaining that you don't know how or what to do. You can have advice without obligation—a key to higher wages, security and future career by calling or writing.

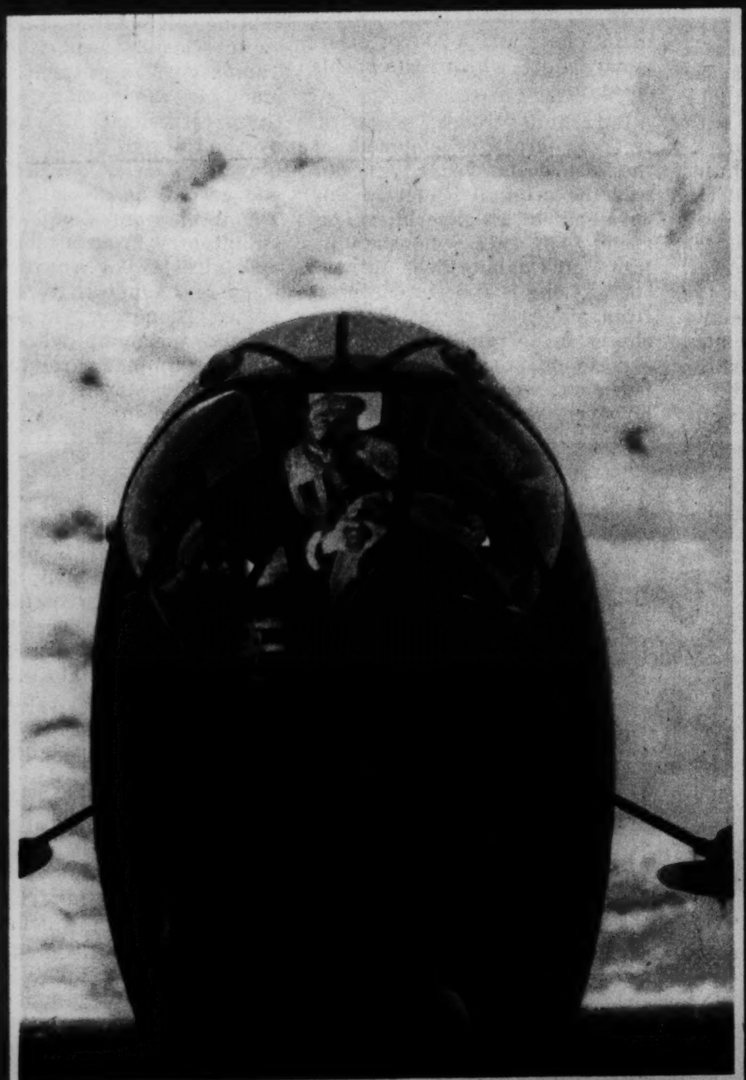
The FORTS FLY HIGH!



Champs of the Air

By FRANKLIN STURDY

HIGH IN THE SKY over Rouen, France, so high that they were little more than specks to ground observers, 12 heavy bombers appeared on Aug. 17. Despite the altitude of the planes, the bombs loosed by them found their targets—the docks and railroads the Nazis use. It was the first raid over Europe by a squadron of American planes manned entirely by American crews.

When the score was in, amazed British and disconcerted Germans were forced to admit that here was one American airplane that could do its job without apologies, and that job one that neither of the other two major combatants could do efficiently and retain their health—accurate high-altitude daylight demolition bombing.

The bombers were Flying Fortresses, the Boeing B17. Since that first raid Flying Fortresses have proved with other successes that the Rouen job was not a fluke. They have won the admiration of the British for their ability to defend themselves against attack by pursuiters and to get home even tho damaged to such an extent it seemed impossible they could stay in the air.

In this air war success has ridden the wings of the airplanes into which each country has poured its greatest resources in brains and technique. The British Spitfire is the military version of the Supermarine design with which the Supermarine company was winning international racing trophies in the late twenties and set a record with the time of 407.5 miles an hour in September, 1931. The Germans didn't create overnight the Me109 with which they met the Spitfire. It was flown in races in 1937, and battle-tested, as were other Nazi planes, and Russian, too, in the Spanish civil war. (Continued on page two)

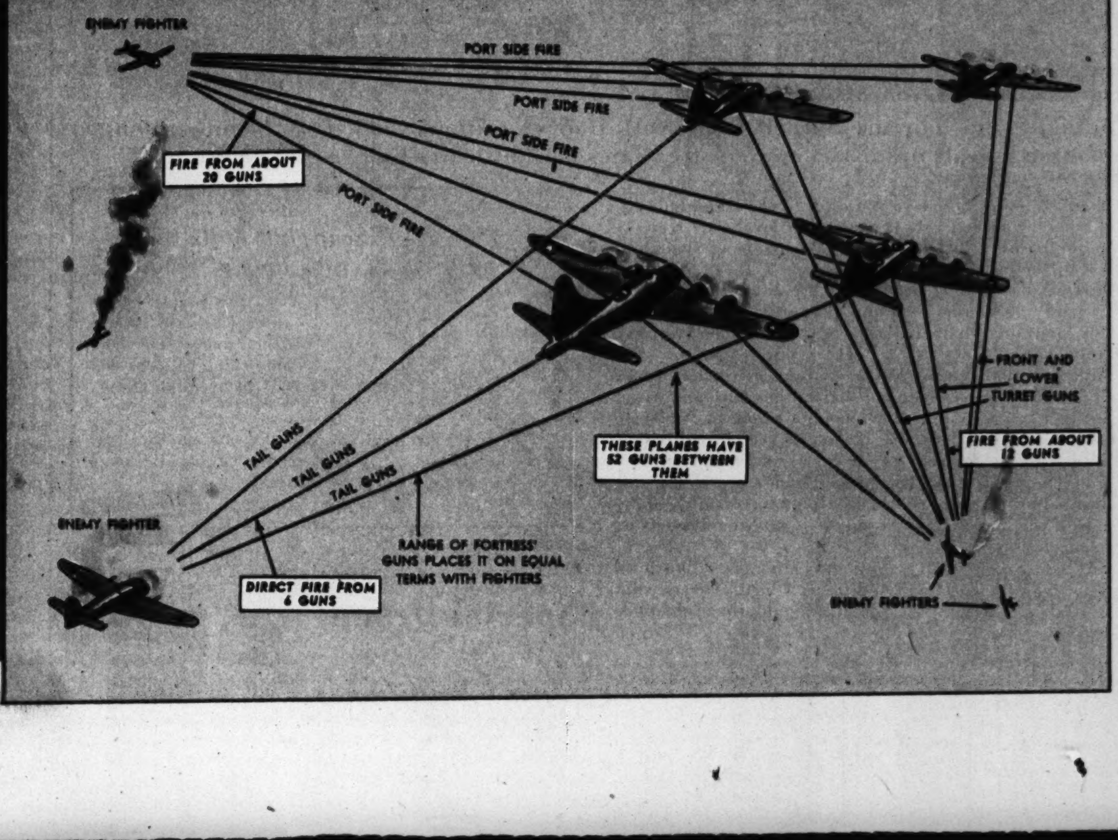
At left: Comparison of the important features of America's Flying Fortress and England's Avro Lancaster. The Fortress' .50-caliber guns have longer range and greater hitting power than the .303s of the Lancaster. Also the Fortress flies higher, giving it a further protection from enemy fighters.

At right: Diagrammatic explanation of the close formation flight that enables the Fortresses to protect themselves so successfully from enemy fighters, especially in daylight raids. The .50-caliber machine guns fire at a rate of 750 rounds a minute and can penetrate any plane armor.



PARACHUTE! HOW AN ANCIENT DEVICE CAME INTO ITS OWN IN WAR

● The accompanying article is the fourth of a series on the subject of "Fathers of Modern War." Previous articles discussed Gar Wood of speedboat fame; the recently deceased Col. Royal P. Davidson, who introduced the armed automobile; and the Wright brothers, whose airplane was the first actually to fly. Other articles of the series will be presented from time to time in this section.

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

Garnerin's parachute drop in London, 1802, from a contemporary print.

THE THRONG that had gathered at the park of Monceau in Paris on that October day 145 years ago was tense with the prospect of excitement. These people, among whom doubtless were many who not so long before had assembled to watch the guillotine chop off the heads of Terror victims, were attracted by what they believed might terminate in a sudden and awe-inspiring death. Men still were primitive. Altho the revolution already had burned itself out, they still were keyed up to its sanguinary scenes. The best of shows for them were the ones that offered the goriest spectacles.

If M. Garnerin—André Jacques Garnerin, official aeronaut of the French government—could descend without injury from a free balloon by means of a newfangled device called a parachute, well and good. It would be a remarkable exhibition. If, on the other hand, he were dashed to death, it would be something to tell their children and grandchildren about.

Garnerin's balloon was filled with hot air or gases generated by a flame. As it rose and swept over the Paris housetops the crowd cheered. When it reached a height of about 3,000 feet Garnerin, riding below in a basket attached to the parachute, yanked a cord. The parachute was disengaged. As it dropped like a streamer the crowd gasped. Here, the people thought, is the finish for another fool. But the next moment the parachute billowed out, filled with air, and slowly floated to the ground.

Garnerin alighted at some distance from the point of ascent, suffering only a minor bruise. He obtained a horse and rode back gayly to the growd gathered at the park of Monceau, which by this time had overcome its disappointment with the knowledge that it had witnessed a thrilling exploit entirely new to the world.

Among pioneers of parachuting Garnerin must be accepted as one of the foremost, from the fact that it was he who made the first successful descent from a vehicle of the air. Parachutes, long looked upon as mere safety devices, now have come to be used in war as the means of delivering an attack. Garnerin therefore deserves recognition as one of the fathers of modern war. A fair share of fame along this line, however, should be accorded other men as well.

About 2,200 years before the Christian era a Chinese emperor by the name of Shun made a successful leap from a tower with a parachute, according to the late Dr. Berthold Laufer, former curator of anthropology of the Field Museum of Natural History. The emperor's 'chute consisted of two large hats made of reeds.

In 1783 Sebastien Lenormand demonstrated the practicality of the parachute, descending by means of one from the top of the observatory tower of Montpellier, France. Three years later J. P. Blanchard proved that the parachute could be used as a safety device for escaping from a balloon. He did this by sending a dog up in a basket attached to a parachute, which was released from the balloon at a considerable altitude. It is stated also that Blanchard himself actually made a parachute descent from a balloon in 1793. In this instance, however, the 'chute descended so rapidly that the aeronaut crashed on the ground and suffered a broken leg. The demonstration cannot be rated as a successful one.

Andre Jacques Garnerin

All reliable records agree that Garnerin, by his exploit of Oct. 22, 1797, was the first to make a successful parachute descent from a balloon. His parachute, 23 feet in diameter and resembling greatly the type in use today, had hardly dropped clear of the balloon when the latter rose rapidly in the air and exploded. It appears that he cut loose just in time to avert disaster.

Garnerin repeated his parachute feat in England on Sept. 21, 1802. From the Volunteer ground, Grosvenor square, London, his balloon rose before a gathering of several hundred thousand people. It reached a height of about 8,000 feet (more than 1½ miles) before Garnerin cut loose. He slowly drifted back to earth. Landing near St. Pancras' church, he was embraced by the first man to reach him. Garnerin made other parachute descents in England later, and visited Prussia and Russia, where he was greeted with acclaim.

Six years after Garnerin's first parachute demonstration in England a Polish aeronaut, Jordaki Kuparento, actually saved his own life by means of a parachute. He had ascended at Warsaw with a fire balloon. The balloon burst into flames at a great altitude and Kuparento disengaged his 'chute and drifted to earth.

The parachutes of Garnerin and the other pioneers had a tendency to oscillate violently as they descended. This prompted an inventor by the name of Robert Cocking to devise a conical 'chute with the vertex pointing downward. This parachute had a diameter of about 34 feet. On July 24, 1837, Cocking rose with a balloon from Vauxhall gardens, London. At a height of 5,000 feet he severed his connection to the balloon and started his descent. Something went wrong. The parachute turned inside out and Cocking was plunged to his death.

The first American parachute experimenter was John Wise, who employed both the Garnerin and the Cocking types of 'chutes. The first named, judging from old prints, closely resembled the modern parachute. That is, it was umbrella shaped. The word parachute was coined in France, probably about the time of the first experiments there. It is from the Italian Parare (to ward off) and the French chute (a fall).

From the time of Wise, who died in 1879, until the introduction of the parachute to aviation 'chute descents were made chiefly for the purpose of entertaining crowds.

It was nine years after the first airplane flight in America that parachutes first were experimented with as safety devices for aviators. Some time in March, 1912, Capt. Albert Berry of the United States army made a successful parachute descent from an airplane. The feat was performed at St. Louis, Mo. Capt. Berry employed a medium sized parachute, folded and packed into a conical container attached under the front end of the plane's skid.

Altho the American army air corps was familiar with the use of the 'chute during the first World war, there was a strong tendency to play down its value. It was even suggested that the morale of the flyers would suffer if they carried parachutes; that they would be inclined to resort to their 'chutes in the face of danger, abandoning their planes when they otherwise might bring them safely to earth. As a result of this there is no record of American air pilots actually using parachutes in World War I., altho the Germans had taken to the idea in the later years of the war.

Immediately after the war America tackled the parachute problem in a scientific manner. Maj. E. L. Hoffman was placed in charge of the program, given an appropriation, and allowed to choose his own staff of aeronautical experts. His assignment was to perfect a fool proof parachute.

First this group of experts discarded the practice of the earlier parachute jumpers, who, after fastening parachutes to themselves, attached thin cords from the 'chutes to the airplanes. When they jumped the cords attached to the planes pulled open the parachutes—that is, when everything worked.

Maj. Hoffman and his assistants saw the faults of this practice. So they turned to the so called free type parachute, designed by Floyd Smith and others and first employed in a descent by Leslie Irvin at McCook field, Dayton, O., April 28, 1919, and in 1924 evolved a type which to all practical purposes is the same as that employed at the present time. The 'chute canopy was made of the finest silk with great tensile strength. Its diameter was 26 feet. Parachutes employed today are not all the same size. Some may be slightly smaller than the original 26-foot type, others slightly larger. The size used depends upon the burden it is to carry. A 24-foot 'chute is provided to service men up to 180 pounds, a 28-foot 'chute for men above that weight.

Cords of the parachute evolved by the experts were made of braided silk. Buckles and fittings were made of the finest tested steel. The webbing which was used in the body harness was made to withstand a pull of 3,000 pounds. Assembled under closest inspection, the canopy and cords were folded in a canvas pack. One of the early problems was to find a way of jerking the parachute out of the pack so that it would open quickly. The present type rip cord was used. A pull on a ring set in a pocket just over the jumper's heart released two pins which held the pack together.

When experiments showed that the parachute's opening action was delayed the experts hit upon the idea of using a pilot 'chute, a small parachute packed on top of the main parachute. When the pack was ripped the pilot parachute popped out, assisted by light steel springs, and immediately dragged the main 'chute out full length, permitting the canopy to take air at once.

The standard 24-foot parachute of today, which descends with a 175-pound man at the maximum rate of 21 feet a second, is a white silken canopy made up of 24 or more triangular panels. The whole 'chute has an area of 70 square yards and a diameter of 24 feet. From the edges of the panels 640 feet of woven silk shroud lines, with 250 to 300 pounds tensile strength, lead to the harness and canvas pack. This, as aforesaid, is a standard type. The paratrooper is provided with a standard issue 28-foot main 'chute and a 20-foot emergency 'chute, which rests on his chest.

Arthur H. Starnes

Parachute troops, or paratroopers, are a development of the last dozen years. America was the original leader in this development, its experiments beginning in 1921, when air infantry at Chanute field, Illinois, and on Long Island were dropped from planes by means of parachutes in carrying out practice attacks on objectives. The experiments were abandoned soon, however, when the army high command ruled that parachute troops would have no place in war as visualized at that time.

The paratroop idea as germinated in America captured the fancy of soviet Russia, which had sent a young air officer, Capt. Serge Mlenov, to this country to observe parachute practices here. Russia originated tactical use of parachute troops on a large scale.

How the Germans, copying the methods of the Russians, put paratroopers to work in actual warfare is familiar to most readers. Their success was sensational enough to revive in the United States the parachute troop idea that had been abandoned almost a decade earlier. On Nov. 1, 1940, the first American parachute troop battalion was organized at Fort Benning, Georgia. More battalions followed. United States paratroopers already have won undying glory in North Africa.

Among the recent notable exploits of parachuting are two that warrant mention in this article. The first was the sensational descent of Arthur H. Starnes on Oct. 24, 1941. This was an experiment in the interest of science. Weighted down with a number of delicate instruments designed to make continuous recordings during his descent, Starnes dropped from an airplane 30,800 feet above Rubinkam airport, near Chicago. He plummeted earthward 29,300 feet, or nearly 5½ miles, in the longest free fall ever recorded, and landed safely after releasing his first parachute at a height of 1,500 feet.

The other achievement, altho not so sensational, marked a milestone in the history of parachuting. It was the daring adventure last November of John Thompson, an exploit which made him the world's first paratroop correspondent. Assigned by The Chicago Tribune, his employer, to cover the American war front in North Africa, Thompson went along with the air infantry in an attack on an axis airfield. When the paratroopers jumped from their planes Thompson jumped, too. He did the jump without the usual preliminary training that is considered necessary for parachute men.

THE FORTS FLY HIGH!

The two-gun stinger in the tail of a Flying Fortress.

Designers in the United States in these years were making military airplanes, but military leaders didn't accord the air arm the importance it was given by Europeans, nor were the American manufacturers given the same breed of enthusiastic government help their competitors abroad had from their warbound political leaders.

Heavy airplanes, however, were another matter. American companies could produce commercial airplanes without requiring any subsidies or government favors, and did it so well that our transports became world-famous for their comfort, safety, load-carrying ability, and economy of operation. They were in use on many foreign air lines.

Thus while the OWI in its recent report officially admitted the accuracy of much of the criticism of United States army air force pursuit planes for their inability to compete with the best German and English types at altitude, our bombers were given generally good rating and first honors in some categories.

The Flying Fortress wasn't pulled out of a hat. The first one was flown in 1935 in competition with bombers made by other American companies to army specifications. The Fortress won, and has been in constant development since then by the Boeing company.

Boeing, before building the Fortress, had had years of experience in making transport ships for the commercial air lines. Its plane was in standard use prior to the adoption of the Douglas DC3, which is currently used by all domestic air lines.

The latest version of the Fortress is designated B17F by the army. It is the eighth in the Fortress series, each one an improvement on its predecessor in performance or self-defense.

Importance of trial by combat is nowhere better illustrated than in that same quality of self-defense in the Fortress, which despite its age—one of the oldest of the army designs—was untried when first sent to the British in 1941, and was promptly found sadly wanting.

The British had gone into the war with bombers that were no better, if as good, but soon discovered the need for heavy armament and particularly a tail gun turret.

They knew the Fortress, with its turrets above, below, and on the sides of the fuselage, would be an easy kill from the rear. The design was changed, and the Fortresses now in service have a "stinger" in the tail—a turret jutting from beneath the huge rudder, with two .50-caliber machine guns covering the once vulnerable spot.

The picture of the Fortress accompanying this article also show top and bottom turrets, the side windows thru which more fire power can be poured. The ship is defended by a total of 13 guns—12 .50-caliber and one .30-caliber.

Over the years the performance of the ship has been improved. Its top speed has been raised to over 300 miles an hour at its best altitude. Bomb load carrying ability has been increased. The best English heavy bombers will carry much greater loads of bombs—the new Lancaster nearly 10 tons—but cannot match the Fortress for range. The English bombers were designed for the shorter continental distances, the Fortress for transoceanic operation.

The Fortress weighs more than 55,000 pounds loaded. About 15,000 pounds of this weight is its fuel load of approximately 2,500 gallons. Four Wright Cyclone engines of 1,250 horsepower each take the Fortress to its ceiling, in the vicinity of 35,000 feet. The secret of its high climbing ability is in the engines' turbo-superchargers, exhaust driven, permitting the engines to deliver much greater horsepower in the thin air of the stratosphere than would be possible with the conventional two-speed engine-driven superchargers. Wing span is 104 feet and length 73 feet. Wing area is 1,486 square feet. Exact data on the plane's performance and equipment are military secrets, but it is reported that the late models have some form of sealed pilots' compartments. The entire crew when flying at high altitudes must be supplied with pure oxygen for breathing to keep them alive.

The B17 is by no means the ultimate in the heavy bombers the United States will turn against its enemies in this war. Time is telescoped by war and the quick and deadly experience it gives.

American bomber builders are already preparing for bigger planes carrying more destructive loads. Boeing is building one that is still a secret as to details, tho it will soon be of 400,000-pound dimensions Maj. Alexander P. Seversky believes can be built and flown.

Hollywood.

HAVE YOU ever gone out on a blind date? Well, I have, and met more than 20,000 men—but it could only happen when I was so old it couldn't do me any good! I'd heard so much about what Kay Kyser has been doing at various army camps that I decided to tag along with him and see for myself. Well, believe me, it opened my eyes.

First stop was in Pasadena, on the grounds of the beautiful McCormick estate. The mess hall was formerly the McCormick stable, revamped and redecorated. From there we went on to a new air center above San Bernardino. Ended up with a full moon shining down at Santa Anita, where I'd spent so many happy hours at the races.

I'll never again go to Santa Anita without remembering the eager faces of 10,000 lonely men, enjoying the entertainment given by Kay Kyser and his gang.

Men like Kay, Bob Hope, Jack Benny, Bing Crosby, Edgar Bergen, Red Skelton, and others who can really put on a show are doing the greatest morale-lifting job that's being done in this country. Not that our boys need it—they could give civilians cards and spades when it comes to morale. But they do need entertainment. When you're stuck down in the sands of the desert or in the rain and cold of the northern states for six or eight months without seeing anybody but other soldiers, life can get pretty monotonous.

Of course we have a lot of actors here who don't go out to entertain the soldiers. Some of their alibis are pretty feeble, and they'll have to do better than that when the men in our armed forces come back from war and begin to check up. But others, I understand, have had some unfortunate experiences with the victory committee, thru which all Hollywood entertainers have to be cleared for the camp shows.

Song and dance by Dinah Shore and Eddie Cantor is a highlight of a typical movie star show for servicemen.

The victory committee was formed to give the greatest amount of entertainment to the greatest number of people. It came into being quite naturally, and the reasons for its formation were and are good ones. If it were functioning as a clearing house, matching up requests for entertainment from camps with entertainers who are willing and anxious to go, I'm positive every actor would be giving his all.

But it seems to have become overorganized to the point of inefficiency. There are instances of gaps and overlapping in authority, with the result that one actress is sometimes booked for two camps at the same time (which results in ill will toward herself, entirely undeserved), while others, eager to serve, may be sitting home twiddling their thumbs. Instead of mapping out what can be done, the emphasis now seems to be on what can't be done—which so often happens when dat ole debbil Power gets into the picture.

Joan Fontaine, who would give her eye teeth to go but whose physical condition will not stand more than the demands of her daily work, is threatened with victory committee blacklist because on her physician's orders she had to decline a call. Yet I could name you 10 other girls who were just as eager to go, and were physically strong enough, but were not even asked—and would have been blacklisted if they had gone on their own hook. Now, I ask you, is that bungling on somebody's part, or is it bungling?

In fact, 'tis said that one who's incurred the displeasure of the victory committee is Bette Davis, who was farseeing enough to start a canteen in the heart of Hollywood which welcomes every man in uniform. It would take her or anybody else months of traveling to reach the number of people she reaches in one little room at the canteen. That's what I call efficiency, because Bette's a busy girl making pictures, and she has only so much time off—but she surely makes it count.

Then there's the VACS, the only organization to have canteens on an army reservation. They operate three. Claudette Colbert, Barbara Stanwyck, Anita Louise, Veree Teasdale, Mary Livingstone, and other stars are among the well organized and directed 300 women who maintain these canteens, taking care of the free hours of thousands of boys who don't have leave. And the Naval Aid Auxiliary does likewise for the navy at San Pedro. I've heard stars say they'd like to go and entertain at all these canteens, but they say the victory committee tells them, "No, you've got to save your strength for bigger and better things." What things can be bigger or better than making our men happy?

So I say it's too bad there aren't more of the Kay Kysers, Bob Hopes, Jack Bennys, Bing Crosbys, Red Skeltons, Edgar Bergens, etc., who have their own units and go constantly on their jaunts to entertain the men. Dinah Shore goes all the time; so do Linda Darnell, Georgia Carroll, Ann Miller, and Ginny Simms. But even so, a little coöperation from the victory committee in providing glamor girls for their shows would help. Yet it's like pulling teeth for Kay Kyser to get the committee to send young stars out on his junkets. Don't ask me why—I wouldn't be knowing. Maybe they're afraid Kay's becoming too popular.

I believe if those responsible for the shortcomings of the victory committee could read some of the letters written to Kyser, Hope, Crosby, etc., there'd be more coöperation and less jealousy.

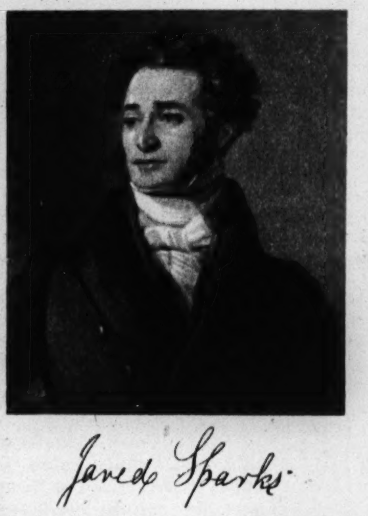
DISTINGUISHED AMERICANS

This is another in a series of biographical sketches of America's historical celebrities appearing every week in the Graphic Section. The illustrations are taken from a famous work, "The National Portrait Gallery of Distinguished Americans," published in 1865.

JARED SPARKS, celebrated historian and biographer, was born in Willington, Conn., May 10, 1789. While still a small boy he was taken into the household of a childless uncle and aunt, who moved with him to Camden, N. Y., in 1800. Returning to the home of his parents in 1805, he found little opportunity for early schooling and in this matter he was thrown largely upon his own resources. Nevertheless at the age of 18 he was well enough informed on basic subjects to be engaged as a school teacher.

So favorably did he impress a clergyman of his home town that a scholarship at Phillips Exeter academy was obtained for him. In 1811 Sparks entered Harvard, from which, despite the fact that he was compelled to earn his own way, he was graduated with highest honors in 1815. From 1817 to 1819 he served as a science tutor at Harvard while studying at the divinity school there.

After receiving his master's degree he accepted the pulpit of the First Independent church (Unitarian) of Baltimore, being installed in the pastorate May 5, 1819. During his services with the Baltimore church, which came to an end in April, 1823, when he resigned, he held the position of chaplain of the house of representatives in Washington for one year.



Jared Sparks

At the conclusion of his ministerial duties he turned to the field of literature. He purchased the North American Review of Boston on credit for about $10,000, edited it for six years, and resold it for nearly twice what he had paid for it. As a resident of Boston, Sparks became one of its leading social and literary figures. His "Life of John Ledyard," published in 1828, laid the foundation of his literary reputation.

At this time Sparks already had started his greatest life work, the editing for publication of "The Writings of George Washington." The first of the 12 volumes of this work appeared in 1834, and the last volume, which is number one and contains the biography of Washington, was published in 1837.

While he was engaged in editing the Washington manuscripts and writing the biography of the first President, Sparks managed to find time to write a three-volume life of Gouverneur Morris and to work on the 10-volume "Works of Benjamin Franklin" and the 10-volume "Library of American Biography."

Fame and fortune had come to Sparks thru his efforts with the pen. In 1839 he accepted a professorship of ancient and modern history at Harvard at a salary of $2,000 a year.

Chosen president of Harvard on Feb. 1, 1849, Sparks in his inaugural address attacked the elective system of studies in vogue there and proposed definite alternative programs for the indiscriminate groupings of course units. This created a wave of reaction which ultimately affected the methods of teaching history as introduced by Sparks.

As president of Harvard, Sparks was discontented. He delegated much of his disciplinary authority to a lower official in order to pursue his literary work. In this way he managed to complete his "Correspondence of the American Revolution" in 1853, at about the same time that he relinquished the university presidency.

From then on until his death he resided quietly at Cambridge except for a year spent in Europe. He died March 14, 1866.

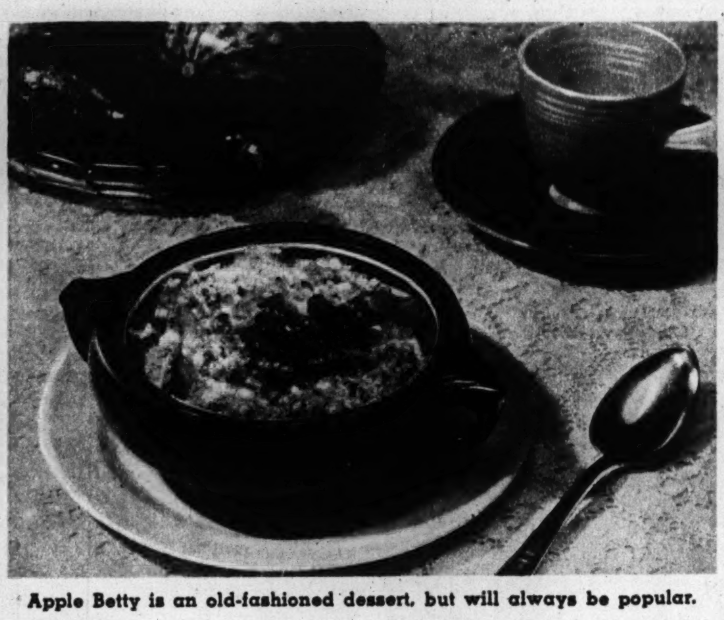
Fresh Fruits

A 1943 dessert—tapioca pudding with oranges and jelly for garnish.



Apple Betty is an old-fashioned dessert, but will always be popular.

By MARY MEADE

WHAT ARE we going to have for dessert in 1943, now that fat and sugar-rich pies, cakes, and puddings are out of the picture?

Fresh fruits, as often as we can get them, for one thing. Fresh fruits probably are the finest dessert of all from a nutritional standpoint. We won't be having all of our usual out-of-season fruits. Luxuries such as fresh pineapple, strawberries, watermelon, and mangoes aren't going to be easy to find. Our fruits will be home-grown for the most part, because of severe transportation difficulties.

There'll be simple fruit puddings for dessert, too, like Bettys and tapioca puddings.

This tapioca pudding, which will make dessert for two meals in a household of four persons, may be sweetened with honey, sugar, or jelly or preserves:

TAPIOCA PUDDING
(Serves eight)

2 eggs
4 cups milk (or milk and water)
1/3 cup quick-cooking tapioca
1/3 cup honey or sugar or 1/2 cup jelly or preserves
1/4 teaspoon salt

Beat egg yolks with 1/2 cup milk and add tapioca, honey or preserves, salt, and remaining milk. Bring quickly to a full boil over direct heat, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Mixture will be thin, but it thickens on cooling. Beat egg whites until stiff and glossy, not until dry. Fold hot tapioca gradually into egg whites and chill. Serve plain or with cream. The honey or sugar sweetened tapioca may be flavored with vanilla or grated orange or lemon rind. The pudding in the picture was made with honey, flavored with a teaspoon of grated orange rind.

APPLE-RAISIN BETTY

6 apples, sliced
1 cup raisins (or dates)
2 cups soft whole wheat or enriched bread crumbs
3/4 cup sugar
6 tablespoons margarine

Do not peel the apples unless the skin is tough. Put alternate layers of apples, raisins, crumbs, sugar, and bits of margarine into a greased casserole and add a small amount of water if apples seem dry. Bake at 325 degrees for 45 minutes. Serve with cream or milk.

The Betty may be made with honey in place of sugar if you like. And it's really wonderful if you can get maple sugar to use in it!

$5 PRIZE RECIPE

ALABAMA ICEBOX ROLLS
(Feather light—easy to make)

1/3 cup shortening
1/4 cup sugar
3/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup boiling water
1 egg, beaten
1 cake compressed yeast
1/2 cup cold water
3-3 1/2 cups flour (not sifted)

Place shortening, sugar, and salt in large bowl and pour over them the boiling water; stir until well mixed and let stand until cool. Add yeast to cold water and let stand until dissolved. Add egg and yeast to shortening mixture, blending well. Add flour and beat until well mixed. Turn into greased bowl, cover, and place in refrigerator for overnight or longer. The dough will be extremely soft but after rising will be more easy to handle. When ready to use shape into any desired rolls or tea rings. Have hands or board lightly floured to prevent sticking. Let rise in warm place until doubled in bulk. Place in hot (400 degrees) oven until golden, about 10 or 15 minutes for rolls, longer for coffee cakes. This recipe was obtained from a colored cook in Mobile, Ala., and the rolls always bring exclamations of delight.—MRS. JUNE C. COOPER, 7551 Kingston avenue, Chicago.

I can make YOU a Better Cook says Aunt Jenny just as I've done for thousands

"AN' FOLKS, I urge you to do 'em. For food shortages an' rationin' mean we just have to be better cooks so we can keep on givin' our families nourishin', appetizin' meals an' not waste one scrap of precious food through cookin' failures, either.

Everyone* can get in on this!

"Whether you've done a lot of cookin' or only a little, whether you're a good cook now or a poor one, I say you can be a better cook, an' so easy you'll be amazed. All you have to do is (1) get Spry; (2) use Spry receipts—try the one below.

"It's a dandy an' just made to order for these wartime days. It uses apples, which are plentiful. It's sweetened with part honey to save sugar. It's nutritious an' energy-buildin' an' so good-tastin' that it turns a plain meal into a feast.

"Now, maybe you've always had bother makin' pastry. Forget it! You can sail right ahead to success with this Spry receipt. Just follow directions exactly an' measure accurately. If you can measure you can bake! That's how easy it is to get tender, flaky crust the Spry way.

Spry's a money-saver, too

"Use it for your cakes an' see how light, tender an' full-flavored they are. Yet Spry costs less than half as much as expensive cake shortenin'! Spry's economical to fry with, too. There's no waste. You can save what's left an' use it over an' over.

"Watch for more Spry ads with helpful wartime receipts. But remember, always use Spry in 'em, an' in all your own receipts, too. Then you'll be sure of best results. Get Spry!"

HERE'S AN APPLE PIE THEY'LL LOVE

Rosy-Cheeked Apple Pie

1 recipe Spry Piecrust
6 large tart apples, unpeeled and sliced thin
1/2 cup sugar
1/4 cup honey
1/8 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 tablespoon butter

Roll 1/2 of dough and line a 9-inch pie plate. Combine apples, sugar, honey, salt, spices and lemon juice. Fill pie shell with apples. Dot with butter. Moisten edge of pie with water. Roll remaining dough for top crust and cut a few slits to permit steam to escape. Fit top crust over fruit and seal edge of pie. Bake in hot oven (425°F.) 50 to 60 minutes.

Spry Piecrust

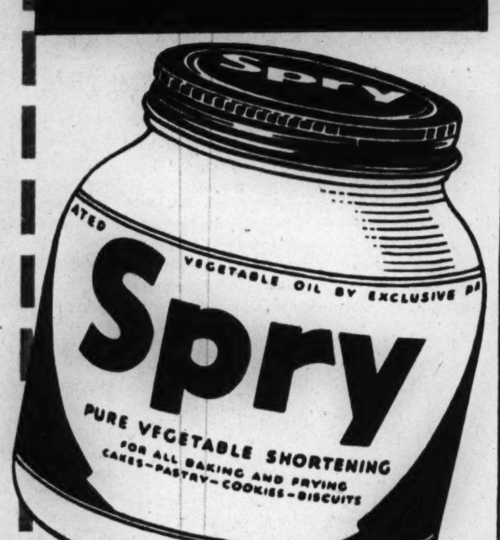
Mix 2 1/4 cups sifted ALL-PURPOSE FLOUR and 1 teaspoon SALT. Measure out 3/4 cup SPRY and divide into two equal parts.

STEP 1 for Tenderness—cut in first half of Spry until as fine as meal.

STEP 2 for Flakiness—cut in remaining Spry until particles are size of large peas.

Add 5 tablespoons cold WATER (no more, no less), mixing thoroughly into a dough. Makes enough pastry for one 9-inch 2-crust pie.

Save this recipe. Make all your piecrust Spry's easy 2-step way. Hear the compliments on your tender, flaky crust. You'll find Spry cuts into the flour so easily. That's because it's triple-creamed for easier mixing. And you don't have to keep Spry in the refrigerator so it never gets stiff and hard.



New! Spry now comes in useful glass jars. So handy for preserving and storing food. 3-lb. and 1-lb. sizes.

What I Saw on Guadalcanal!

This is the second of a series of eyewitness accounts of the dramatic events in the Solomons. The first article told about the landing on the strategic islands.

By ROBERT CROMIE

Guadalcanal.

THE SWIFT American seizure of the southeastern Solomons and the prized air field on Guadalcanal was not only the first serious interruption of honorable Japanese advance since it began; it was also an insolent blow to Jap prestige which could not be overlooked.

The Japs rallied quickly after the initial shock and threw against the marines swarms of surface ships and clouds of planes and began pouring into Guadalcanal their crack troops —the same little men who took Malaya and Java, Singapore and the Philippines. While they were building up their land forces for a return engagement, Jap planes made daily bombing raids, and shelling by submarines or surface ships became a commonplace.

The marines were nearly defenseless against this type of attack, since the air field was not ready for use. But on Aug. 17 a hastily summoned Flying Fortress, sent out from another base with only half a bombload to save time, scored a direct hit on a cruiser shelling American positions, and daylight attacks from the sea suddenly lost their appeal for the Japs. Marines on the beach watched the wounded cruiser steam in aimless circles.

While the marines were busy digging into their new home, adapting Jap dugouts and buildings to their own use, drinking Jap beer and smoking Jap cigarets, they also worked hard to complete the air field. From Aug. 11 to 18 there was only a single anti-aircraft battery on the whole island, but its accurate fire kept driving Jap bombers so high that the field was completed without delay. The first American plane roared in for a landing Aug. 21 while thousands of marines went noisily mad.

On that same red letter day the marines further celebrated by wiping out all but 74 of 1,000 Japs who landed near the Tenaru river and fought with unlucky gallantry against American tanks, artillery, and men. One group of marines engaged the Japs' attention while a second slipped around for a flank attack.

Two days later the newly arrived flyers served notice that Guadalcanal was out of bounds for Rising Sun planes by blowing from the sky 21 Jap planes and losing only three of ours. The next day a Jap task force was driven off by air attack.

Then came a long succession of Jap attempts to land reënforcements, shelling and bombing of Henderson field, and retaliatory attacks by American planes on Jap bases at Rekata bay, Buka, Bougainville, and other points. A fair idea of the Jap determination to rewin Guadalcanal may be had from the fact that during the first month and a half after the marine landing Jap warships approached the island on at least 18 occasions, often putting ashore men and supplies before being harried out to sea once more by our planes.

The author (right) with another war correspondent on Guadalcanal.

Altho many Jap ships were sunk or damaged, the enemy still persisted in returning almost nightly, and at last had enough men and materials ashore for an attack in force on the air field. This was launched from the east the night of Sept. 13.

The Jap objective—the field and its planes—was tantalizingly close, and the marines who slammed the door in the attackers' face time and time again said afterward that it was "the busiest night of our lives." The major attack began at midnight when the Japs threw acrid smoke grenades, sent up star shells, and shouted, "Gas! Gas!" "Surrender, marine, you die!" and "Withdraw, marine!"

The jungle-wise Jap warriors took advantage of the darkness to slip quietly thru our lines in some places, and, once to the rear, fired their rifles, set off firecrackers, and shouted, "Surrender! Surrender!" to add to the confusion. Hour after hour wave after wave of yelling Japs charged up the 50-foot hill on which the marines were hastily dug in, firing as they came, while mortar fire and machine guns sprayed the American positions. Three or four officers in a single small area were casualties almost at the start.

During the nocturnal struggle the Japs tried to spread terror by yelling false orders in English and shouting the names of American officers which they had overheard. But all efforts to panic the marines failed, and efforts to dent their lines also failed. Battle-happy marines mowed them down as they came, shouting epithet for epithet, rolling grenades down the hill as the Japs started up, or sat behind free-swinging machine guns pouring flame into the night and exulting, as did one young gunner, "This is the way to fight a war!"

The Japs kept coming until 4:30 a. m., and when daylight came and they had faded back into the jungle 150 Jap corpses were piled at the foot of the hill and a trail of dead led almost to the top. During the afternoon of that day the headquarters command post was raided by a "suicide" squad of three Japs armed only with swords who killed a marine before two of them were killed and the other fled.

The next day, and some hundred or so miles away, another phase of the struggle for the Solomons took place. On Sept. 15, while patroling sub-infested waters with other units of a task force to protect supplies being rushed to the marines, the American aircraft carrier Wasp was torpedoed and sunk.

The raider struck without warning at midafternoon while I was playing cards below deck with some officers. We were in the middle of a hand when a warrant officer came into the wardroom and said quietly:

"The Wasp just caught a fish!"

We raced topside and found our heavy cruiser zigzagging from the scene at high speed. Far to the rear we could see the stricken carrier. She was belching smoke, with an occasional burst of flame, and soon dropped so far behind that only a tiny blossom of smoke showed where she still lay helpless in the water. A junior officer, watching when the torpedoes—probably three—went home, said there was a puff of gray and black smoke, and then:

"The Wasp started down by the bow like an elephant going down on its knees. She started listing and made a turn, bringing her other side into view. There was a small fire visible, which quickly spread, and the whole midsection became incandescent. Then as soon as the center section was redhot there seemed to be a 'swish' and the ship was completely enveloped in yellow smoke and bright red flames and I saw debris flying thru the air."

So the Wasp went to keep her rendezvous with the Lexington and the Yorktown in whatever Valhalla there is for gallant ships of the line. But she had played her part well in the battle for Guadalcanal—she had guarded the life line while supplies steamed thru.

Meanwhile on Guadalcanal itself giant Flying Fortresses were landing on the runway and taking off again to shatter Jap bases and shipping within range of their far-flying wings. By this time snipers who had formerly taken pot shots at pilots and mechanics strolling across the field were all cleaned out. The marines held a beachhead about four miles long and two miles wide, and held it securely. At least for the time being.

Marine patrols were cautiously exploring the jungles beyond our lines, sometimes stumbling on Jap patrols and fighting it out in brief, bitter encounters. One large marine patrol was wiped out almost to the last man one night, and another large one was trapped by daylight but saved by the heroism of Sergt. Robert David Raysbrook of Philadelphia, who stood on a hilltop exposed to heavy Jap fire and signaled an American destroyer where to send her shells so that the marines would be covered as they fought back to the beach.

The marines also learned the cunning ways of the Japs and their frequent determination to die rather than surrender. As a result few prisoners were taken, and those were usually weakened by hunger or wounds or were Jap workers (which the marines promptly labeled "termites"). The marines also learned the necessity for a painstaking search before Jap snipers could be located, often dressed in coconut husk coats to blend with the leafy background, or concealed in treetop nests of woven grass and bamboo. They learned to identify the jungle night time noises, to the great relief of innocent pigs and cattle and to the greater safety of lizards and rats. They also learned to leave unanswered night time calls in English unless absolutely certain who was calling.

The souvenir market was a lively one, what with the wealth of articles found on Guadalcanal and Tulagi and on the dead. Fortress pilots bringing candy and bottled goods got bargain rates for Jap weapons, money, flags, or beautifully wrought samurai swords. The saying soon arose that "The Japs fight for their emperor, the marines fight for souvenirs." From the comparison of the fighting qualities the latter are more highly valued.

Still confident, apparently, that it was possible to knock out the air field with bombs, the Jap planes came with monotonous regularity to send Guadalcanal dwellers scurrying to their dugouts. Sometimes Zeros came first, hoping to trick the fighters into using up gas and permitting free passage to the following bombers. But the strategy was too apparent and Yank pilots refused to fall for it. The Japs took a terrific lacing Sept. 28 when American flyers had a field day and shot down a Zero and 23 of 25 bombers.

Then Maj. Gen. A. A. Vandegrift decided it would be wise to push the Japs back across the Mataniaku, a few miles west of the air field. This was done after four days of sporadic fighting Oct. 7 to 10, and the marines then dug in along the river and awaited the next Jap move. It was obvious there was something brewing, since during the first 11 days of October Jap war vessels paid almost nightly visits to the Guadalcanal area.

It was soon apparent that the something was the beginning of the most strenuous Jap attempt to date to overrun the marines, seize the air field once more, and save their rapidly slipping "face."

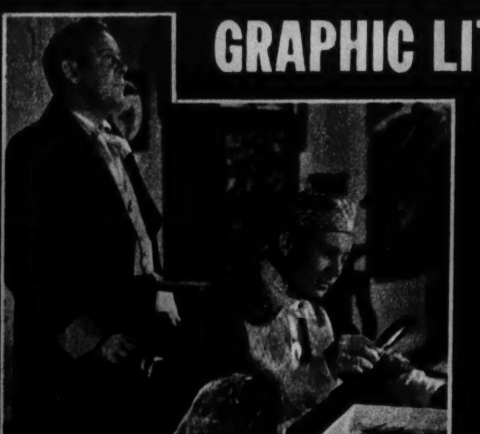
Presents an All-Star Cast in "FOREVER AND A DAY"

1 This is the story of an English house built in 1804. A year has passed and, on the eve of Trafalgar, Admiral and Mrs. Trimble (C. Aubrey Smith and Dame May Whitty) toast their son Bill (Ray Milland) and his bride (Anna Neagle).



2 Following Admiral Trimble's death "there were enemies at the gates and friends at the fireside; weddings and funerals and children on the stairs." One of the lords of the manor was Dexter (Ian Hunter). His man servant was Henry (Charles Laughton).

3 Back from India comes Mildred Trimble (Jessie Matthews), great-granddaughter of the admiral. As the first Mrs. Trimble-Pomfret she has two workmen (Cedric Hardwicke and Buster Keaton) install an iron bath. A social revolutionary, her ideas were to affect the nation's habits of hygiene.

5 In 1314 an American soldier (Robert Cummings), descended from an emigrant branch of the Trimble family, visits the old mansion, which has become a second rate boarding house. There he meets and eventually marries the pretty receptionist (Merle Oberon).

6 1941. Now an air raid shelter, the old house harbors Gates Pomfret (Kent Smith), American newspaper man, and Leslie Trimble (Ruth Warrick). When a bomb destroys the house only one thing remains, the portrait of the admiral. And two descendants decide to rebuild the house around the picture—together. (THE END)

An Igloo Is Born

1 Up in Baffin Land, Keenoogark, 12-year-old Eskimo girl, starts construction of a play igloo in the traditional manner—cutting three trenches into the packed snow, then marking off the size of the first block with a knife.

2 Jabbing the knife into the slot, she produces a block. Others follow in like manner. In 15 minutes she has carved all these, and incidentally excavated the floor of her igloo.

3 Beveling the blocks to fit snugly, she sets them up.

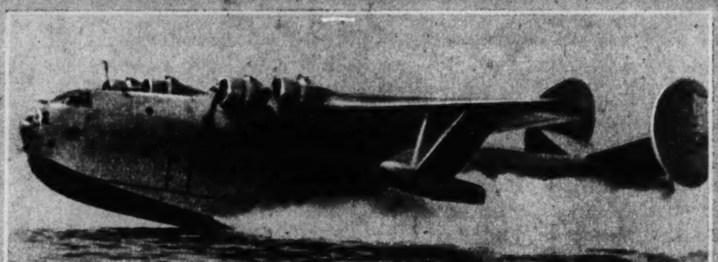
4 At right: Starting the second row, curving the blocks inward.

5 The heavy blocks are harder to handle near the top and must be balanced without too great a gap between them.

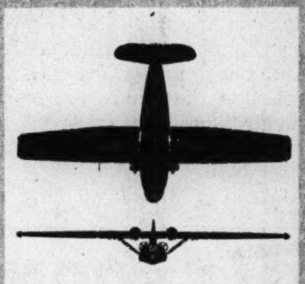
6 Complete, with door! Keenoogark learned from her father, who builds them as large as 30 feet across.

These igloo pictures were taken by the Venerable Donald B. Marsh, archdeacon of Baffin Land, one of Canada's Arctic islands. The temperature was —38 degrees, and the archdeacon froze both hands while handling the camera.

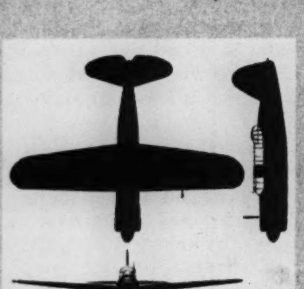
Fighting Planes of the Army and Navy



MARTIN PB2M—The MARS. This long-range flying boat, designed primarily as a troop transport, could carry 150 men with full equipment. Powered by four 2,000-horsepower Wright duplex Cyclones, it could also be used as a patrol bomber of wide striking power.



CONSOLIDATED PBY—The CATALINA. Long the navy's chief patrol bomber, the Catalina has done heroic service in this war. Slow, with a top speed of only 198 miles an hour, it is vulnerable to fighter attack. A new version, PBY5A, is an amphibian.



BREWSTER SB2A—The BUCCANEER. Built originally for the British and Dutch, this scout and dive bomber has a top speed of more than 285 miles an hour, a single 1,600-horsepower Wright Cyclone, carries 1,000-pound bomb load. Aircraft based. Land version is the BERMUDA.

Lenore discovered early in their marriage that this husband of hers was a mere man rather than the exalted god she had conjured up.

THE TYPICAL American woman today, according to a recent survey, ranks kindness, good temper, and consideration in a husband above ambition, good looks, ability to provide—and faithfulness.

Altho the philandering male can cause his mate many moments of hell on earth, the chances are that a modern wife will keep her eyes closed to many of her husband's little indiscretions if he continues to show a loving and thoughtful attitude toward her.

"Logically speaking, sexual unfaithfulness provides less cause for jealousy than spiritual unfaithfulness, because passion is transient, while real love endures a lifetime," is the dictum of a noted psychiatrist.

"My husband is what the world would call a philanderer, but I've stuck by him because I love and understand him and know that fundamentally he is devoted to me," confesses Lenore Braydon, an attractive wife of 36 whose husband periodically gets himself involved in what he considers "harmless flirtations."

Larry Braydon isn't a bad sort by any means. He holds a responsible position as publicity director of a large metropolitan hotel. He is enthusiastic, reliable, and hard-working in his job. His wife and two children are his chief incentives in life and he is inordinately proud of them. Yet every now and then he goes on a romantic spree just to make things more exciting.

Lenore discovered early in their marriage that this husband of hers was a mere man rather than the exalted god which she had conjured up and placed on a pedestal of chastity. It was a black and bitter disillusionment to face at first. Her whole world seemed to come to an end, and she instinctively prepared to take flight from Larry forever. But, because hope springs eternal where a husband is concerned, she believed him implicitly when he so stanchly declared that he loved no one but her and that he would never cause her any trouble on that score again.

He sincerely meant it at the time, Lenore was convinced, but later when similar experiences came to light (as they most often do) she realized within herself that she was of a nature that would always be subject to sudden attractions and that it was impossible for him to continue marriage at an even tenor year in and year out.

She came to recognize the fact that a man can desire another woman, first, without the necessity of being in love with her, and, second, without losing his affection for his wife. She has accepted a masculine attitude on this sorry situation of sex and happily sees to it that the tides of their marital life together flow quietly along with as little ripple as possible over the hidden rocks and shoals.

The hunger-for-pleasure period in matrimonial relationships often rears its head after marriage has settled down into a routine and has become as habitual as a morning's cup of coffee. Statistics show that adultery is the ground for a great percentage of the smashups which occur after 10 years or more of marriage.

Invariably it is the climax which follows loss of companionship and bickering between couples and results in a breach wide enough for "the other woman" or "the other man" to step into.

One very wise and clever wife who has held her man (a very handsome one) for 35 years confesses that she takes a personal pride in seeing other women "make over" her husband.

"I get a tremendous kick out of knowing that 'Pop' can still attract the young gals," she says, and she really means it. By giving this husband of hers complete freedom of rein she unconsciously has bound him to her with fetters of faith and understanding. In spite of her graying hair and plumpish figure he pays her great tribute when he says, "I began by loving Mary for her beauty and have ended in loving her for herself as well."

A man likes to feel that he is being "modern" in his adept handling of extramarital affairs. And altho he may profess to believe in a single standard, just let his wife put him to the test and he reverts to Victorian standards so quickly you can almost see the growth of sideburns.

Mr. and Mrs. X. had been moderately happy together for 16 years. Mr. X. had charmed a series of beautiful and willing secretaries in his day, but Mrs. X. had always forgiven and in time forgotten. Their two teenaged children were away at boarding school winter before last, and Mrs. X. began to look around for outside interests.

Mr. X. seldom showed signs of needing her except as a hostess or companion for perfunctory dinners and formal receptions. He was more or less oblivious to the pains she had taken with the upbringing of their children and rarely even noticed her changes of costume.

Mrs. X. was still comparatively young and attractive. Altho she always had been interested in art and painting, she had laid her brush aside years ago when the children were small and had scarcely touched her oils and water colors since then. It was only natural that in casting about for an avocation (before Parl Harbor days) that she decided to take up painting again.

She sought out her old teacher, Mr. W., with whom she had studied as a girl. He had progressed far in the world of art since those days when he was a struggling young student artist with a few aspiring pupils to help pay his board bill. Now he was the master in his own school, and she knew from his reputation that he was considered one of the best.

She found him a most gracious and charming chap with graying temples and an air of suavity. He professed great delight in seeing her again and insisted that she start her studies again at once. Under his tutelage as the weeks went by she began to come to life and to make unbelievable strides with her impressions on canvas.

There was an intimacy in their work together which she found most exhilarating—and a little frightening. She looked forward expectantly to each lesson and was very much gratified and flattered when Mr. W. suggested that she stay on for cozy little dinners in his studio so that they might discuss her work at their leisure.

Mrs. X.'s husband was too preoccupied to notice what was going on, and because of her sheltered life Mrs. X. herself was more or less innocent of any wrongdoing until her emotions were awakened so decidedly that she found herself on the threshold of attempting to live a double life.

It was thrilling and wonderful to have a man look deep into her eyes and say, "You're sweet and lovely, my dear." It rejuvenated her and made life completely worth while—for the moment. But afterward, when she was at home, Mrs. X. died ten thousand deaths in self-abnegation. In the hope of appeasing her own conscience she began to shower her husband with tender devotion and extra special kindnesses which suddenly made Mr. X. seem dearer to her than ever before.

After weeks of torture trying to persuade herself to do what she considered the right thing, she confessed the whole short-lived affair to Mr. X. Of course he would understand, she told herself. Hadn't he been guilty of just such infatuations, and hadn't she forgiven him?

But Mrs. X. overestimated her man and the breadth of his unselfish understanding. Altho Mr. X. took the confession calmly enough at the time and did his best to understand and be tolerant, his honor and self-respect were injured beyond repair. He felt nothing but disillusionment in a wife who could make such a fool of him and of herself—and the result was inevitable.

After a few wretched months Mr. X. bowed out of the picture and began to seek erotic pleasures in an attempt to ease his embittered mind. Mrs. X. is genuinly heartbroken in her rôle of divorced wife and disgraced mother, and it's a foregone conclusion that neither she nor her husband are likely to find abiding happiness again in their lives.

But not all marital crackups which occur after a half score of years or more are the outgrowth of philandering and immorality. There are other weeds in the garden of marriage to fight against.

Money—the lack of it—is the reason June Denton gave when she stepped from under the matrimonial yoke and left a husband for whom she had lost her taste. Until defense factories opened their doors to women she had no skill with which she could support herself and her children. So she had remained a martyr under the roof of a husband who was always good and kind but who had no capacity for making big money.

June was married at 18 to her childhood sweetheart and had started out with great ambitions for becoming Mrs. Rich some day. She was a spoiled only child, and money was her god. It galled her almost beyond endurance to find as the years moved along that the man she had picked was the dreamer type to whom money meant little.

Barth McKay had always managed to pay their doctor and hospital bills as the babies came along, but there was rarely anything left over for the frills of living—which in June's conception of things were the real necessities. She had been forced to stick to her marriage while her children were small and her husband could provide them with bed and board. But when the war came along everything was changed.

She saw an opportunity to break away from the responsibilities of children who wore her to a frazzle and housework which she abhorred. She welcomed the chance of wearing a trim-fitting uniform and being whistled at by a production line of men in a plant for defense. So she became a maker of precision parts with a fat salary and left her family to shift for themselves.

She realized within herself that he was of a nature that would always be subject to sudden attractions.

Now that she can spend her money freely on clothes and beauty shops and entertainment, her shallow little soul is feeding on this new-found independence and she's under the false impression that there is a sort of money-back guarantee on marriage that will erase the ties that bind.

Mr. and Mrs. J. hit on a plan for settling their marital difficulties when a parting of the ways seemed inevitable.

"We are starting our marriage all over again after 15 years," Mrs. J. announced joyously as she produced a list of "ten commandments" which she and Mr. J. had drawn up together as a sort of self-imposed contract in marriage rights.

"We didn't really want to break up," she explained, "but we were both lonely and miserable and had grown as far apart as the poles. It wasn't until we stopped to analyze the causes of our unhappiness that we made any strides toward unity."

At the suggestion of a kindly judge who had been a friend of long standing Mr. and Mrs. J. began to look upon this marriage of theirs as a separate living thing and to study the faults and virtues of each other in an impersonal way.

Mr. J. admitted to the judge that he regarded his wife as an admirable woman who got along splendidly with every one but him. She, too, had great respect for her husband as a man, but as a husband she felt that he had failed her.

When urged to write down in black and white the complaints which each had to make against the other it came out that:

(a) Mr. J. thought his wife belonged to too many clubs; spent too much money on clothes and folderols; was careless in her household accounts; was seldom at home when he arrived in the evening—and had very little regard for him or his interests.

(b) Mrs. J. objected to the time her husband spent "fiddling around" with his photographic hobby (about which she knew nothing) when he might be taking her to concerts or the theater. She considered his habit of stopping at a cocktail bar every evening before he came home as one of the main sources of their trouble; and her greatest grievance was that her husband had moved into an adjoining bedroom and rarely came to her room to seek her love and companionship.

After they had listed their causes of friction Mr. and Mrs. J. felt a little foolish about the whole thing and wondered if things really were as bad as they seemed.

In a conference with their friend, the judge, they became quite interested in drawing up a conciliation plan as an experiment for revamping their relationship. At the judge's instance they drafted the following compromises:

1. Mr. J. consents to take his wife to the theater, a concert, or somewhere outside their home for entertainment one night a week.

2. Mr. J. will issue a special invitation to his wife to take a tour of the amateur photographic studio which he has set up in the basement. He will explain to her the various functions of the equipment he has there. He will show her his favorite color photos, he will illustrate his methods of operating his camera to produce certain photographic effects, and will do everything in his power to interest her in his hobby.

3. On their nights at home they will arrange to spend at least some part of the evening together, even tho each wishes to pursue his own devices for a few hours. They will listen to radio news broadcasts together, read aloud to each other, and "visit."

4. Mr. X. will not bring his newspaper to the dinner table, as he did formerly, but will talk to his wife about his day's activities and will listen and share her interests.

5. Mrs. J. will resign from two of her bridge clubs and will give more time to the running of the household.

6. She will arrange to be at home when her husband gets there in the evening.

7. Together the J.'s will settle on a financial arrangement, with set sums for individual and household expenses. Mr. J. will establish joint accounts for their money and securities.

8. Mrs. J. will close her charge accounts at the stores and will try to develop a stronger resistance toward buying extravagant clothes when they are unnecessary.

9. Mrs. J. will join her husband in a cocktail before dinner at home when he wishes, and he will discontinue stopping in at a bar every evening before dinner if his wife is waiting for him.

10. The J.'s will dispense with the twin beds which have caused such a chasm between them for the last few years. Mr. J. will move back into Mrs. J.'s bedroom, and they will share a double bed.

(Already the J.'s have found a common bond of interest in their very enthusiasm for executing these ten commandments!)

PRIVATE FAY ON PARADE!

This is another report from Pvt. William C. Fay, on leave from the Tribune sports department, about his life in the army.

I MEANT well. My intentions were of the best. I was trying to help the fellows, and if my plans miscarried—well, you can't shoot a guy for trying.

It was partly the captain's fault, anyway. There were about 40 of us in the dayroom when the captain looked in. Somebody asked him a question. Pretty soon we were all shooting the breeze and beating our gums, or, to return briefly to the king's English, having a bull session.

The captain finally got down to man-to-man talk. "How about it?" he asked. "Some of you guys have been griping about the food. Now, let's get specific. What's wrong?"

"Well," I said, "there's the bacon."

"What's wrong with the bacon?"

"It's too limp. They were cooking it crisp once—but no more."

The mess sergeant interposed that there were more vitamins in limp bacon. The captain nodded, but said he was a crisp bacon man himself. "From now on," he said to the mess sergeant, "suppose you cook half the bacon crisp and half limp—that should please everybody."

That disposed of one gripe, and everybody was happy except the mess sergeant, who was faced with a daily morning problem in bacon long division.

"And then," I said, "there's the eggs."

The captain winced. "What's wrong with the eggs?"

"They're cold—cooked too soon."

• • •

The captain agreed the eggs were served cold, but pointed out the difficulties of cooking eggs simultaneously for almost 200 men. "However, I've been thinking of starting a breakfast line," he added. "I think we could start the men in the side door cafeteria style and cook the eggs fast enough to serve in about 15 minutes. We'll give it a trial, anyway."

"And then," I said, "there's the——"

"Well, I guess I'll have to be going," the captain interrupted, glancing at his watch and retreating to the doorway. "Got an appointment."

The next morning we had hot eggs. I was a popular guy—the prime mover in the hot eggs-for-breakfast movement.

The following morning, with two-thirds of the egg line still outside the messhall, the capricious Tennessee elements swirled a near-cloudburst down our company street. The egg line was inundated—madder, and wetter, than a wet hen.

"Who's idea was this, anyway?" boomed a malcontent.

Forty or fifty voices told him, loudly and in many instances profanely. Now, it is bad enough to come upon a group suddenly and experience that uncomfortable silence which signifies you were the subject of an uncomplimentary conversation. But that is nothing compared with being the subject of uncomplimentary conversation in the midst of a group which knows you're there and doesn't give a cold fried egg.

Even my best friends told me.

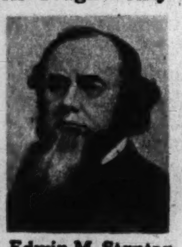
LINCOLN'S INTEREST IN ARMAMENTS

REPRODUCED upon this page is an original letter written by Abraham Lincoln on Feb. 16, 1863 (almost 80 years ago) to the secretaries of his war and navy departments, which discloses the Civil war President's interest in incendiary shells and fluid as possible weapons for use against the Confederates.

The original letter is in possession of the Chicago Historical society, but no information concerning it is available in the archives of the society, nor were Chicago authorities on Lincolniana, who were consulted, able to throw any light upon the letter, which so far as can be found out has not been printed in collections of Lincoln's writings.

The letter, however, stands for itself, since its message is perfectly plain to any one. President Lincoln merely desired that his secretary of war, Edwin M. Stanton, and his secretary of the navy, Gideon Welles, each appoint an officer of his respective department to test the incendiary shell and fluid to determine whether they should be adopted in some other form, one or both, into the military and naval services of the United States.

Well informed on military history, Lincoln obviously was aware that incendiary weapons had been used in earlier wars with some success, and it was his intention to put them to use again if tests should show that they might be the means of hastening victory for the Union forces. The battle of Fredericksburg, a great Confederate victory, had been fought only about two months before Lincoln wrote this letter. The fortunes of the north were at a low ebb, and the President, it is plain, was seeking every means possible to halt the successes of the south.

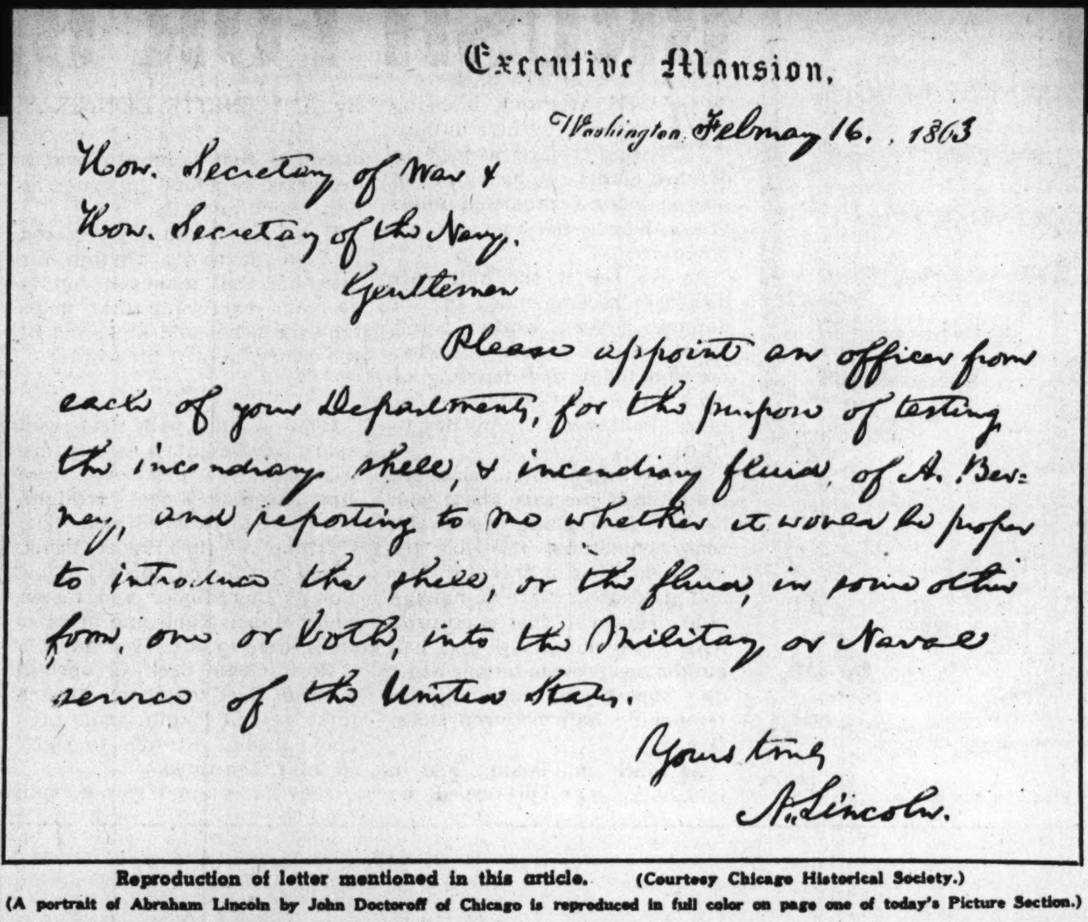


Edwin M. Stanton

He knew from his readings about the use in war of incendiary liquids by the ancients, liquids that were termed Greek fire. These, modern military experts have concluded, were mixtures composed of such materials as sulphur, naphtha, and quicklime, which took fire spontaneously when coming in contact with water. A revival of the Greek fire idea has been noted in modern warfare, particularly in the use of the flame thrower, which was devised by the Germans in 1914 and 1915 in World War I. The incendiary shell which President Lincoln ordered tested may have been a forerunner of incendiary shells, bullets, and bombs that are used in the present war, many of which depend upon the burning of thermite and magnesium to produce a flame that is difficult to extinguish.

• • •

Altho records of the war department in Washington may contain information on the subject, the writer has been unable to ascertain from material readily available whether or not the two cabinet members ordered the tests desired by the President. If tests actually were made of the incendiary materials it does not appear that the matter was followed up by any greatly successful developments. This statement is based upon the fact that our military and naval forces in the Spanish-American war—30 years later—employed no shells definitely of the incendiary type or any device that might be called a flame thrower. It remained for World War I. to reintroduce military incendiarism.



Executive Mansion,
Washington, Feby 16. 1863
Hon. Secretary of War &
Hon. Secretary of the Navy.
Gentlemen
Please appoint an officer from each of your Departments, for the purpose of testing the incendiary shell, & incendiary fluid, of A. Berney, and reporting to me whether it would be proper to introduce the shell, or the fluid, in some other form, one or both, into the Military or Naval service of the United States.
Yours truly
A. Lincoln.

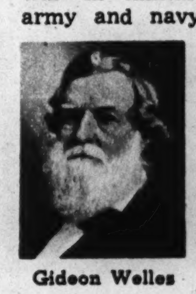
Lincoln, whose 134th birthday will be celebrated next Friday, was a man of wide interests. These interests during the Civil war embraced a deep curiosity in all things pertaining to the war—in military strategy, in army and navy personnel, in transportation, in supplies, and especially in weapons.



Gideon Welles

It is said of him that he personally tested a number of small arms submitted by various inventors. In his youth he had known how to handle a rifle, and he still considered himself somewhat of an expert on rifles and muskets.

• • •

He took a profound interest in the building of the Monitor, Capt. John Ericsson's turreted ironclad which fought the historic battle with the Merrimac. On the occasion of President Lincoln's inspection of the Monitor a few days after the fight Assistant Secretary of the Navy Fox made a short speech in which he said that altho he did not wish to withhold any credit from Captain Ericsson, "the country was principally indebted for the construction of the vessel to President Lincoln."

John A. Dahlgren, whose two 11-inch Dahlgren guns were the armament of the Monitor, was held in high esteem as a weapons expert by Lincoln. Head of the Washington navy yard with the rank of captain in 1861 and 1862, and elevated to rear admiral in 1863, Dahlgren had a great deal to say about the guns used by the Union forces. Whenever any one approached Lincoln with a weapon that seemed to have merit he would refer the matter to Dahlgren. The following note, written June 10, 1861, is typical of the President's communications to his trusted adviser:

"Captain Dahlgren,
"My dear Sir,
"You have seen Mr. Blunt's new gun—what think you of it? Would the government do well to purchase some of them? Should they be of the size of the one exhibited or of different sizes?
"Yours truly,
"A. LINCOLN."

It is said that in seizing upon every opportunity to find improved arms for the army and the navy Lincoln frequently sent dreamers and crackpots to the department heads. An inventor himself (he had obtained a patent in 1849 on a device for lifting boats over shoals), Lincoln desired that every one with an idea should have a fair hearing.

KNOW YOUR CAMERA

By ANDREW B. HECHT, Ph.D.
Managing Editor, Popular Photography Magazine

Exposure for background 15 sec., for foreground 4 sec. at f:30.
The background for this elaborate table-top picture was projected on a screen. Many amateurs like this type of photography because it gives them complete control over their subjects as well as over the lighting.

YOU DON'T have to plan a photographic excursion or depend upon the willingness of your models to coöperate when you make table-tops.

There are two main types of table-tops, realistic and humorous ones. The realistic ones are far more difficult to make successfully, as they require building a miniature set that would pass for the real thing.

For the photographer who likes to arrange and light his subject matter without going to the bother of making it himself there are countless picture props that you can purchase at low cost. Probably you have many of them in the house right now. China, glassware, eggs, silver, ash trays, used flash bulbs, pipe cleaners—these are but a few of the odds and ends that have been used to make successful table-tops.

To make realistic table-tops all objects appearing within the scene should be in correct proportion. This sometimes makes it hard to assemble enough props of the right size.

There is no rule that says a table-top must be set up on a table, and exceptionally good ones can be made outdoors. A stream of water from a garden hose, directed across a few feet of earth in the garden, can be made to look like a rushing river.

Many cameras can be focused close enough to make table-tops without extra equipment. If the image of your set doesn't fill the film at your camera's closest working distance you can always enlarge the portion of the negative you want. By using an inexpensive portrait attachment, and focusing with a tape measure, you can get close enough for good results with any camera.

The lighting should be arranged in such a way that it will help to make the picture more realistic, if that is the effect you want. For outdoor scenes the main source should be located at an angle that approximates the position of the sun. Fill-in lights should be used sparingly, or they will give an artificial appearance to the scene.

For humorous table-tops making use of different gadgets and ready-made figures the lighting should be planned to bring out the point of the picture. Small spotlights can be made by placing a sheet of cardboard with a hole in it in front of the flood lamp or an ordinary light bulb. There really is no need for using flood lamps in table-top photography, as your subjects will remain still enough for the longest time exposure.

Never use United States coins, currency, bonds, or defense stamps as a part of your picture setups. It is against the law to photograph them in any way.

MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS

By BOB BECKER

IF THERE is any dog ailment that is apt to be a puzzler to a dog owner it's some form of skin trouble. This is especially true of a skin irritation which is not due to a tiny living parasite which burrows into the skin and causes true mange. The nonparasitic type of skin trouble, sometimes called eczema or dermatitis, often is so hard to get under control and frequently is so baffling (so far as the cause is concerned) that the dog owner may become discouraged.

Our Labrador apparently is one of those dogs that blossom out each summer with a couple of "hot spots" from which the hair goes very quickly, so we know something about the job of curing a case of nonparasitic skin trouble. It takes a little time and patience to get this dog's coat and skin in correct condition again (last summer about two weeks).

All of us who own dogs should remember some of the causes of eczema or any of these noncontagious skin troubles. The list is so long that it's obvious mighty few of us amateurs are qualified to diagnose the cause or causes and doctor our pets without the counsel of a graduate veterinarian. At least that is the policy we pursue when one of our dogs develops some skin trouble.

Here are a few of the most common causes of those moist, inflamed areas that may develop on the skin of a dog:

Nutritional upsets due to allergies or a faulty, hodge-podge diet, or to an abrupt change of diet, may cause skin trouble. Sometimes (in summer) a dog may eat a lot of grass which does not pass thru the intestines. Result—skin trouble.

Many owners attributed their pets' skin troubles to use of prepared foods in their diet, but our dogs subsist largely on several kinds of these foods, including both the dry and dehydrated types. They thrive on them and have no skin irritations due to their diet.

Some dogs seem to have skin trouble only in summer. (We have one like that.) Lack of exercise may be the indirect cause of skin trouble, because this lack of exercise may result in a general sluggishness of the dog's body processes.

Lack of grooming, or fleas, ticks, and other parasite, may cause trouble for a dog's skin and coat. We believe that a good many owners overlook the possibility of a skin irritation due to very harsh disinfectants.

If an amateur will keep his dog clean, watch his diet, and give him plenty of exercise he can do much to prevent skin troubles. When an eczema does come, better let the veterinarian take a look at the dog, and follow his advice. He'll advise a soothing lotion for the skin and other remedies.

The Doberman pinscher, a very agile, fast-working breed that assimilates training quickly, now is being widely used for guard work in this country and has been chosen by the U. S. marine corps as its official guard or sentry dog. (Posed by Rita Hayworth and pet.)

BRUSH FOR BEAUTY!

By ANTOINETTE DONNELLY
(Copyright: 1943: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.)

MUCH attention is being directed by hair authorities toward women in defense plants. A heavy toll of hair and skin is predicted unless precautionary measures are taken.

As we see it the hair care measures recommended for the defense plant worker apply equally to the majority of women who today are doubling on work and in that doubling doing more housework than heretofore.

You're urged not to shampoo too often if you care about your hair. In certain undesirable scalp conditions the too frequent shampoo aggravates them and makes hair more unmanageable. However, that is no problem, since our scalp and hair authorities provide lotions which do a superb job of cleaning and freshening hair between shampoos.

So much hair beauty, and its longevity, are preserved by brushing that defense workers are urged to adopt the brush as best friend and ally.

Hair experts already referred to have devised a rhythm for brushing that makes it fun to do. It's exercising that helps take the aches and kinks out of the weary body of the worker.

• • •

Bend—Stand with feet well apart, so weight is evenly distributed. Now bend over from hips, keeping knees straight. Throw head forward and relax. Go limp all thru upper trunk, arms, head, and throat. Now slowly, then faster and faster, swing upper trunk and arms to right, then to left. Ten times.

Rest—Come back to upright position, feet together. Stretch torso to full length, arms high above head. Stretch to right, to left. Ten times.

Brush—Having limbered torso and having aroused a freer circulation in the scalp, grasp your long-bristled brush firmly. Be completely relaxed as you brush from back of the neck forward. Brush upward and outward in long, sweeping strokes. Bend to right as you brush your first 25 strokes. Then twist torso to left as you brush your second 25. Return to position, rest, relax, and repeat.

After a short rest resume your bend-and-brush stance with feet apart and weight evenly placed, bending as before. Slowly twist torso to right as far as you can. Slowly return to center. Next slowly twist torso to left as far as you can. Return to center and upright position.

Now bend from waist, knees straight, hands dangling loosely. Try to touch floor. Stretch as you make every effort to reach that goal. Resume upright position. Then bend to brush.

Brushing and exercise can be combined in this energizing routine.

YOUTH ON THE CAMPUS

A picture story of life on the Drake university campus at Des Moines appears in today's Picture Section.

By ELEANOR NANGLE

TRADITION has it that in 1881 four representatives of the Christian churches of Iowa, in search of a site for a school they were in the process of founding, came upon a huge wooded tract two miles northwest of the city limits of Des Moines. One of the group, George Thomas Carpenter, later first president of Drake, is supposed to have climbed a tree, been smitten with the view, and decided then that on that spot they would build their university.

The elm still stands, but the view has certainly changed. Des Moines, the state capital, now surrounds the university. Drake's central campus is a mélange of old and new buildings crowded into three city blocks. Drake's boys and its exceptionally pretty and well groomed girls have no spacious stretches of greensward on which to romp, and since the WAAC took over three of the college buildings —Cole hall, the women's gym, and the combined men's dormitory and student union—space is more than ever at a premium.

It may be because it is a city campus that familiar collegiate sloppiness of dress and manner is rather conspicuous by its absence at Drake. The Drake students are unique in that they are inclined to allow their elders to pass first thru a door, say "Pardon me" when it might reasonably be expected, and seem to have made the charming choice of affecting friendliness rather than the studied bored or offhand air that is the fashion on the average campus.

And one of the traditional events for Drake girls with Y. W. C. A. affiliations is its "charm school," really a series of programs designed to help them improve their taste and maintain attractively high standards of grooming and manner. There are clinics on hair styling and makeup, shows of fashions that are either purchased or self-made, and lectures on social amenities.

Whether or not this series is responsible we don't know, but the Drake co-ed is inclined to be as crisp in her grooming, from the top of her well brushed head to the tip of her clean walking shoes, as she is pleasant in manner. It's quite noticeable—and quite impressive.

THE LEGEND OF FAUST

The opera "Faust" will be presented on the Chicago Theater of the Air from 8 to 9 p. m. (C. W. T.) on Saturday, Feb. 13, on W-G-N and the Mutual network, starring Marion Claire, soprano prima donna of the series, and Eugene Conley.

THE LEGEND of Faust goes back before the rise of Christianity. When the legend first began the name of Faust was unknown to those who believed or told of man's transaction with the devil whereby he exchanged his soul for supernatural power or knowledge.

It was not until the 16th century that the name of Faust was first used in connection with this idea, for at that time there lived a notorious charlatan by that name who claimed for himself unusual powers. Popular belief was that he had gained these powers thru a trade with the prince of darkness.

Since then the story of Faust and his trade with the devil has been told in story, in poetry, and in music. It has been argued by philosophers, preached by theologians, and elaborated upon by many a writer. In literature the major works on this theme are two plays, Christopher Marlowe's "Doctor Faustus" and Goethe's "Faust." Contemporary efforts using the same theme have also been written. The best known of these is Stephen Vincent's Benet's short story, "The Devil and Daniel Webster," which was filmed under the title "All That Money Can Buy."

Goethe's drama has inspired many musical compositions. Berlioz's "The Damnation of Faust" and Schumann's "Scenes from Faust," both written for solo voices, chorus, and orchestra, were designed for the concert stage. But the majority of the musical works were designed as operas. When John Towers in his "Dictionary of Operas and Operettas" listed the settings of Faust which had been presented at least once on the stage he published a total of 25. This was in 1907; since then, perhaps, another 15 could be added to the list, but the best from the point of view of modern operatic répertoire are Boito's "Mefistofele," Busoni's "Doktor Faust," and Gounod's "Faust."

It is from the last of these that W-G-N and the Mutual network will adapt their streamlined radio version of the legend of Faust to be presented on the Chicago Theater of the Air.

Gounod's opera omits most of the philosophical considerations which made the Goethe work so great and concerns itself chiefly with the relatively unimportant romance between Faust and Marguerite. The music of the opera, however, far surpassed that of any other treatment of Faust, and for this reason the Gounod work has become the best known. In preparing the radio version of the program for Saturday, Kenneth MacGregor, W-G-N chief of production, plans to keep much of the music of Gounod and combine some of the story of Goethe.

Gounod saw his lyric drama first produced in 1859 at the Lyrique theater in Paris. It was not a success at the start and aroused only moderate interest until it was included in the répertoire of the Paris opera in 1869. Then it became an immediate success. It has been performed by the Paris opera more than any other work. In 1934 it was presented for the 2,000th time.

The opera was first presented in the United States in 1863 when it was performed on Nov. 18 in German at Philadelphia's American Academy of Music with Mlle. Frederici as Marguerite. A week later it was presented in New York with Clara Louise Kellogg as the heroine. She sang the rôle in Italian. Italian was also used when the opera was first performed at McVicker's theater in Chicago on May 11, 1864, with Sophie Vera Lorini as Marguerite.

The real measure of economy is not how much you pay, but how much you get for what you pay. Just how much further a can of Old Dutch will go than a can of any other leading cleanser has been measured in both authoritative laboratories and in certified demonstrations under actual living conditions.

Here is how Old Dutch Cleanser does this: First, one element in Old Dutch quickly dissolves the grease that holds the dirt tightly to the surface. Then, with grease gone, comes Seismotite, the basic ingredient that makes Old Dutch do more cleaning. Its soft, flaky particles remove the dirt easily, quickly, thoroughly . . . without scratching the glossy porcelain surface.

That is why hard scrubbing is not necessary when you use Old Dutch Cleanser. That is why you clean more bathtubs, so quickly, so beautifully with Old Dutch Cleanser. No doubt that is why more housewives use Old Dutch than any other cleanser.

RESULTS OF SCIENTIFICALLY CHECKED TESTS

The cleansers identified above by letters, along with Old Dutch Cleanser, account for over 90% of all the cleansers sold in the United States.

1900—a Soldier baits a trap ...with his blood!

And a mystery killer of millions is caught in the act... by a band of army doctors!

The War of '98 was really over. For even the peace terms were signed. But a bloodthirsty foe, which had terrorized men through the ages, and massacred whole populations, stole out of the darkness—and our troops still encamped in Cuba were slaughtered without mercy. Yellow Fever on the loose!

A little group of army doctors was entrusted with the task of trapping this mass murderer. Not an easy task when no living soul knew the cause of the disease. But every suggestion—every clew—they tracked to the bitter end. Even when the time arrived to check the theory of a brilliant Cuban doctor who blamed a type of mosquito for spreading the fever, army doctors, soldiers and civilians readily volunteered to risk their lives in testing out the theory.

Late in 1900, these courageous volunteers deliberately invited the suspected mosquito, tainted with the blood of yellow fever victims, to alight on them—and bite. In a few days several of these heroes were down with chills. The trap had been sprung, Yellow Fever was caught!

Countless tests thereafter verified the truth. The guilty mosquito was controlled. And today—thanks to recent medical triumphs—our fighting forces are fortified with a yellow fever vaccine.

1898—Another medical triumph over suffering and pain!

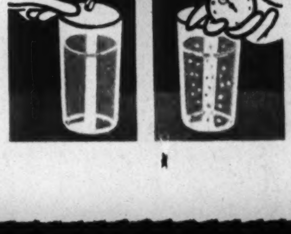
1898—two years before the trapping of yellow fever mosquitoes—is another famous date in the pages of medical history—in the battle against pain. For a group of brilliant scientists discovered a relief from headaches, painful discomforts of colds, and muscular aches and pain . . . maladies which cause even more suffering and loss of time than do all the serious diseases combined. They discovered Aspirin.

Whenever men of medicine fight suffering and pain, Bayer Aspirin is trusted not just for dependability, but for the rapid relief it brings. So for relief that's reliable and also swift, ask for Bayer Aspirin by its full name. And be sure the tablets you buy are stamped "BAYER"—the famous name in Aspirin.

BAYER

COLDS—To relieve headaches, pains and aches from colds, take 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets with a glass of water. Repeat in 2 hours. For a sore throat from a cold, dissolve 3 tablets in ⅓ of a glass of water and gargle.

HEADACHE—Next time a headache comes, take 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets with a little water. Relief follows quickly. Economical to use. Try it, too, for fast relief of neuralgic pain.



WHY BAYER ASPIRIN WORKS SO FAST

In 2 to 3 seconds after a Bayer Aspirin Tablet touches water, it is disintegrated and ready to start work. That's what happens in your stomach when you take Bayer Aspirin.

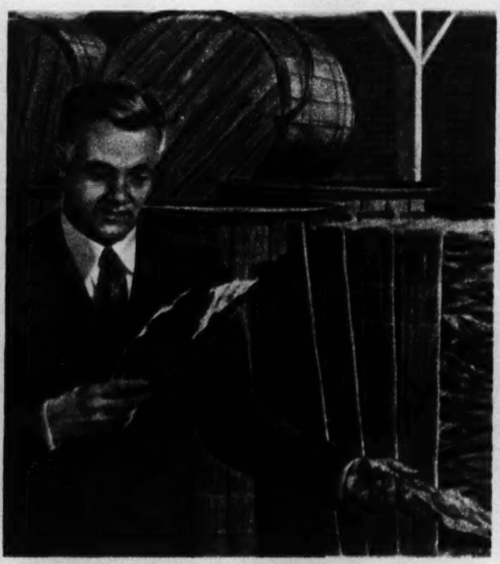
From Dr. Bert O. Myre, Fort Bayard, N. M.

ALL BOY.

The simple facts about a cleaner, finer smoke!



1. THE TOBACCOS. We resolved to develop the finest cigarette that experience, science and art could produce. As the first step, Mr. Theodore Kirk, pictured above, who has purchased more quality leaf tobacco than any other living person, combed the stocks of all sizeable dealers and bought only the best—millions of dollars worth of fine, sun-ripened and aged-in-wood vintage Turkish and domestic tobaccos.

2. THE BLENDING. Given these fine vintage tobaccos, the skill with which they are blended is paramount. So, creation of the Fleetwood blend was entrusted to a master of the art, Mr. W. Curtis Bethea, shown above, who has blended more brands of cigarettes, successful on a large scale, than any other known tobacconist.

3. THE FLAVOR. A professional jury of tasters guided in the blending until a blend both milder and better tasting than any of the six largest selling brands was achieved. These (above) were tea tasters Mr. E. Edwards and Mr. C. W. Felton; coffee tasters Mr. F. M. Reuss and Mr. A. J. O'Laughlin; and wine tasters Mrs. Jeanne Owen and Mr. Harold J. Grossman.

4. THE MOISTURE-RETAINING AGENT. On the advice of physicians and chemists, we rejected the moisture-retaining agent used in most cigarettes, and adopted a modern hygroscopic agent which does not produce acrolein, an irritating gas usually present in cigarette smoke.

5. THE SMOKE CLEANSING. Fleetwood's Imperial size gives extra filtration of the smoke, reducing throat irritants, nicotine, and tars that stain fingers and teeth. The smoke is filtered through more tobacco—20% more for the first puff and 50% more for the last—provided you do not smoke Fleetwoods farther than you would old-size cigarettes.

6. THE PACKAGE. Fleetwoods are packed in better quality, stronger material, to protect the cigarette against being crumpled in the purse or pocket. As a pleasing final touch for what we believe to be the first completely modern cigarette, the eminent art director, Mr. Leland Stanford Briggs, was commissioned to develop a package of artistic merit.

FLEETWOOD

7. RESULTS OF TESTS of the smoke of Fleetwood and four of the large-selling brands which were also included in the famous Reader's Digest test last summer. As tested here all cigarettes were machine-smoked to an average distance of 40 millimeters to simulate natural smoking.

Brand	Milligrams of Tar in the smoke	Milligrams of Nicotine in the smoke
A	8.2	1.8
B	8.3	1.8
C	9.0	2.1
D	10.4	2.4

For Health—

AVOID HARSH LAXATIVES

LEMON and WATER IS GOOD FOR YOU! Taken first thing on arising, it has a mild laxative effect sufficient for most people. And it's healthful—aids digestion, supplies needed vitamins, builds resistance.

Why not take this simple, natural health drink—lemon and water—in place of the usual laxatives?

Most people find that the juice of 1 lemon in a glass of water, taken first thing on arising, is all they need to insure prompt, normal elimination—gently.

Lemons Build Health!

And lemon and water is good for you. Lemons are among the richest sources of vitamin C, which restores energy, helps you resist colds and infection. They're the only known source of vitamin P (citrin) and supply valuable amounts of B_1. They alkalinize—aid digestion. Millions take lemon and water just as a health builder.

Why not keep regular with this refreshing morning drink that builds health too? Drink the juice of 1 lemon in a glass of water first thing on arising. Try it 10 days—see if you don't benefit!

P. S.—LEMON & SODA • Some prefer juice of 1 lemon in half glass water with ¼ to ½ teaspoon baking soda (bicarbonate) added. Drink as foaming quiets.

★ ALBUM OF THE AIR ★

This page continues the presentation, begun last Sunday, of stars, supporting players, and craftsmen of popular radio programs. Portraits of other personalities of the ether waves will be reproduced in this section next week.

Marion Claire, soprano star of the "Chicago Theater of the Air" operettas (8 p. m. CWT Saturdays on W-G-N and the Mutual network), was born at the north shore suburb of Lake Bluff; her father, the late Horace Wright Cook, was an attorney. When she was 10 years old she made her debut as a violinist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra at Ravinia park. She studied voice at National Park college, near Washington; at Venice, and at Berlin. She made her debut in Italian opera at Rovigo, near Venice; in German opera at Berlin's Staatsoper; in American opera with the Chicago Civic Opera; in films in "Make a Wish," with Bobby Breen and Basil Rathbone. In addition to many operatic successes, Miss Claire has scored notable hits in operettas, including "The Great Waltz" and "Bittersweet." In 1929 she was married to Henry Weber, whose likeness appears at right above.

Henry Weber, conductor of the W-G-N concert orchestra in the "Chicago Theater of the Air" and also in "Music That Endures" (Mondays), is musical director of W-G-N. Born in Berlin of American parents, he was brought to the United States when he was three months old. He studied for 14 years in Vienna; when 20 years old, made his debut conducting "Mignon" with the Chicago Civic Opera, became the world's youngest director for a major opera company; in 1929, at Florence, became the first American to conduct opera in Italy. He has conducted for 24 years; has streamlined opera and operetta for W-G-N during the last four years.

Attilio Baggiore, most frequently heard in the "Chicago Theater of the Air" and in "Music That Endures," was born of Italian parents in a Michigan mining town; began studying violin when 13 and was playing in a movie theater nine months later; was graduated from Moorhead college; studied voice in Chicago and later in Italy; made his operatic debut in Rome. He made his Chicago Civic Opera debut in 1931, became a W-G-N and Mutual artist in 1934.

Thomas L. Thomas, frequently a guest artist in the "Chicago Theater of the Air," is the son of an English musician who settled at Scranton, Pa. Thomas junior studied voice three years; made his concert debut at New York in 1937; was signed as the youngest baritone of the Metropolitan opera. He has sung with the New York Philharmonic, Indianapolis symphony, and Detroit symphony orchestras.

Bud Abbott, who began life as William, was born in 1895. His father was advance man for a circus, his mother a bareback rider. His first job was selling peanuts; he was manager of a theater when, on a night momentous for him, Comedian Lou Costello's straight man became sick and Bud was drafted to take his place . . . Costello was born Lou Francis Critello at Paterson, N. J., in 1908. He came to light professionally in Hollywood as a stunt man, and after that stint joined a vaudeville troupe. And eventually came the night when his path and that of Abbott crossed. . . . Abbott and Costello toured the whistle stops and the Grand Hotel belt for eight years before they broke into big time. They went into radio in 1938, erupted into pictures more recently. They have spent much of the last year entertaining soldiers and sailors at camps and training stations.

Freddie Rich, Abbott and Costello band leader, was born in Warsaw, Poland, in 1898. The family came to the United States and Freddie grew up on New York's east side. He began playing the piano when he was 6 years old (first job, playing nine hours a day at a New York movie theater); went into vaudeville; turned from that to the dance band field; finally invaded radio. He now shares his time between movies and microphone.

Ken Niles, Abbott and Costello announcer, was born at Livingston, Mont., on Dec. 9, 1906. He was educated at the University of Montana; worked as boilermaker's helper and as a bellboy; became amateur lightweight boxing champion of Montana; played in amateur theatricals and professional stock; drifted to Hollywood and into announcing ten years ago; expanded into the movie field as narrator for screen trailers and shorts.

Martin Gosch, writer-producer of the Abbott and Costello series, was born in Philadelphia. He began writing stories, articles, and plays at a tender age, continued thru college at the University of Pennsylvania; worked on Philadelphia newspapers; broke into radio in 1928 as half of a comedy team; managed a radio station; became public relations man and later, radio director for a movie studio; returned to radio in 1937 as network producer and director.

Connie Haines, cinema actress and vocalist of the Abbott and Costello series, was born Yvonne Marie Ja Mais at Savannah, Ga., on Jan. 20, 1922. She made her stage debut in a vaudeville sketch when 4 years old; won a children's audition at Jacksonville, Fla., in 1932, became known as Little Princess of the Air; four years later was signed to sing at Roxy's theater, New York; from that went to night clubs and name bands (Harry James, Tommy Dorsey); began broadcasting for NBC; thence came to her present job.

Photos by Nelidoff, Abresch, NBC

Kenneth MacGregor, who supervises the "Chicago Theater of the Air" operetta broadcasts, is W-G-N chief of production. He was born at Brockton, Mass.; was graduated from the University of Maine; was radio editor of the Brockton Enterprise; became an announcer and later a program director; served on the production staff of NBC; in 1934 became senior producer in the radio department of an advertising agency, and in 1941 became production chief at W-G-N.

YOU CAN'T BE "all out" for success when you wake up feeling "all in". So never let your stomach go sour during the night because you overindulged in food, drink or tobacco. Take Phillips' Milk of Magnesia at bedtime. It does more than merely neutralize excess stomach acidity—it finishes the job by acting as a very gentle laxative. ICE SKATING

"WE'RE going to have a cold snap," said the Old Soldier with the wooden leg while the Teenie Weenies were waiting for the Dunce and the Sailor to clear off the Teenie Weenie dinner dishes for the Teenie Weenie dessert.

"It's pretty cold right this minute," said the Cook, who came in at that moment carrying a dried service berry pudding. "The thimble of water under the kitchen spout is frozen solid."

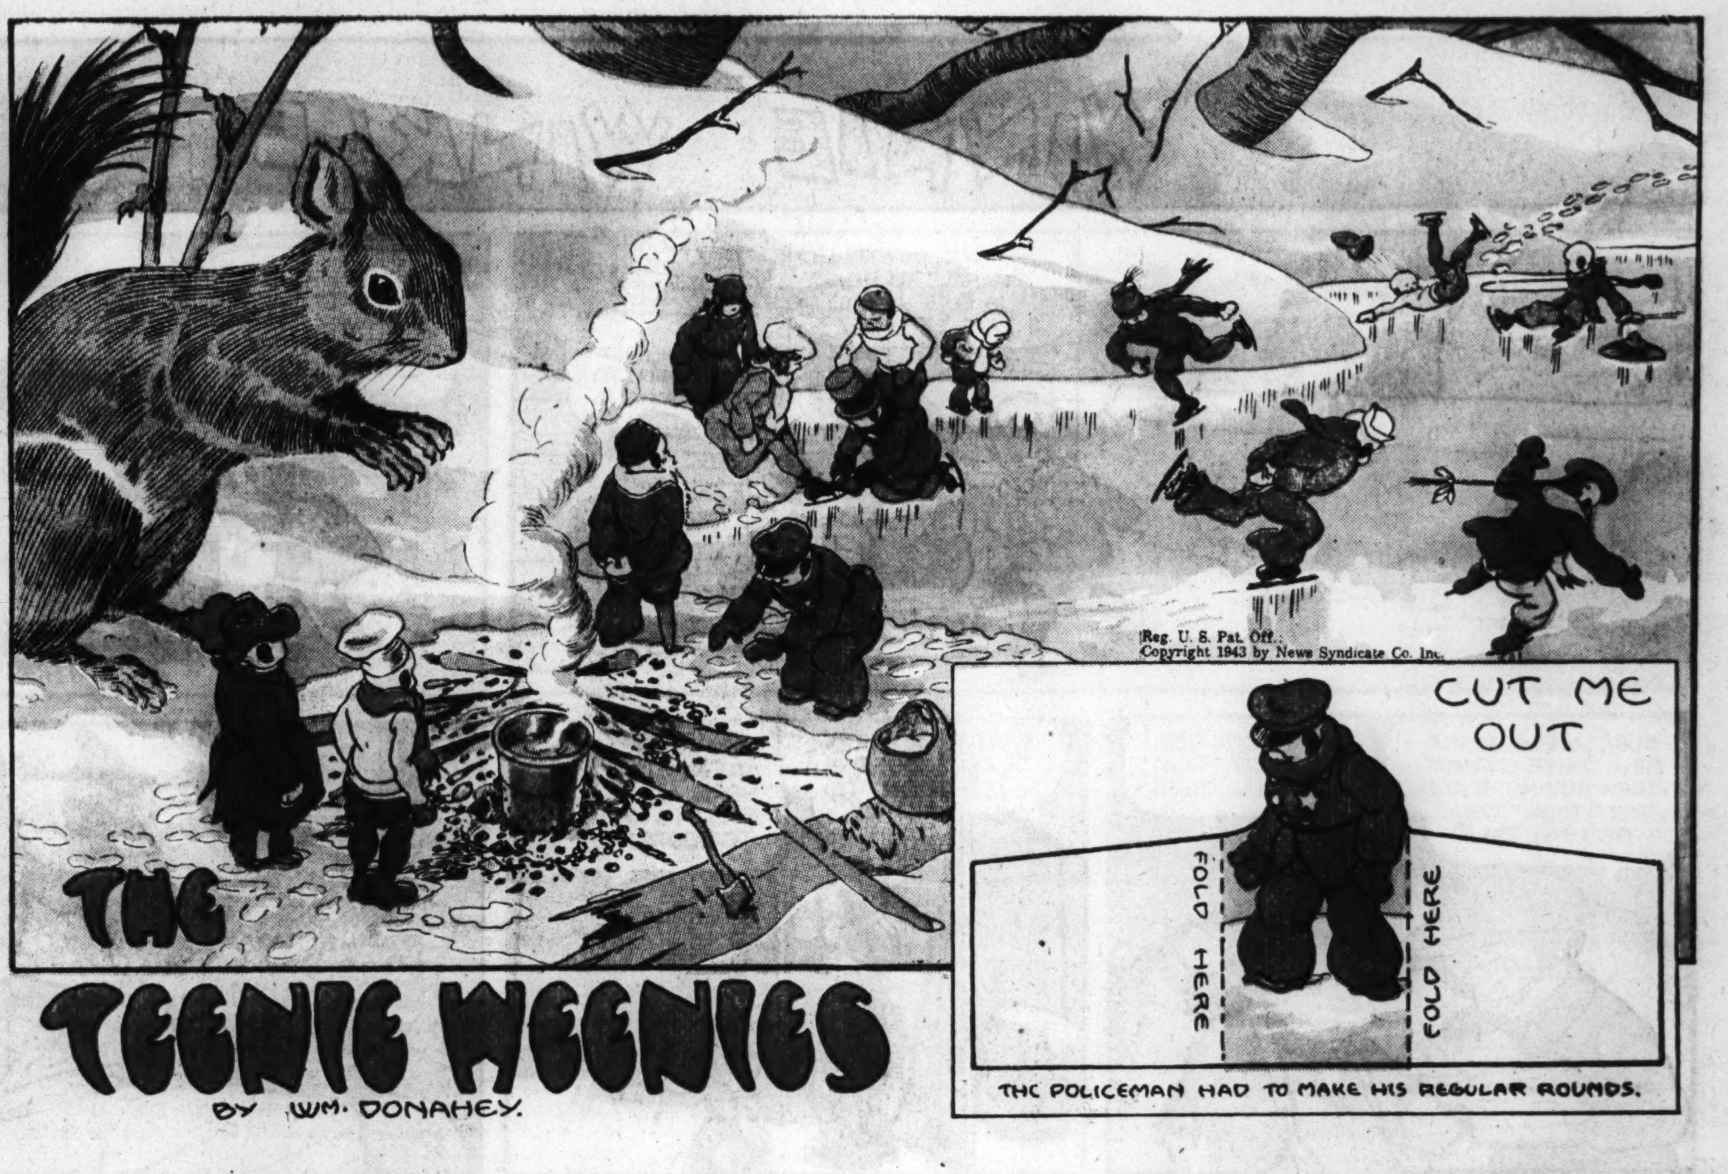
"I knew it!" exclaimed the Old Soldier. "My big toe has been aching all day long, and that is always a sure sign of a cold snap."

"There's another sign," said the Doctor, pointing toward the tiny dining room window, which was covered with thick white frost.

The Lady of Fashion brought out extra Teenie Weenie blankets and comforters, and it was a lucky thing she did, for it was well below zero when the Teenie Weenies awoke next morning.

The Old Soldier was always the first Teenie Weenie out of bed in the morning. It was his duty to build the fires in the sitting room and in the kitchen cookstove. The Teenie Weenies were especially thankful that morning, for it was bitter cold. All the Teenie Weenie men grabbed their clothes and ran for the kitchen, where they dressed by the cookstove. The Teenie Weenie women put on their tiny dresses in front of the roaring fire in the sitting room.

The Cook beat up half an acorn mixing bowl of pancake batter, and after a hearty breakfast of hot cakes and fried frog ham the little folks felt quite comfortable.



Most of the Teenie Weenies were quite contented to spend their time in front of the warm fires, but the Policeman had to make his regular rounds in order to be sure everything was in order about the Teenie Weenie village. He put on an extra heavy suit of spider web underwear, warm mittens, and a scarf made of molehair before he ventured out. In spite of his warm clothing, he was back in a short time to announce that it was terribly cold outside.

"I saw Nick the Squirrel," he told the Teenie Weenies, "and Nick says the creek has frozen solid and it is as smooth as glass."

"Let's go skating!" cried the Lady of Fashion.

Her suggestion met with immediate approval. The little folk began hunting skates and warm clothes. Soon they hurried down to the creek and there they found the ice fine for skating. They enjoyed the skating for a short time and then Teenie Weenie fingers and toes began to ache with the cold.

"We ought to build a fire and get warm," said the Policeman.

"And make some tea," added the Lady of Fashion. "That will keep us good and warm."

The Cook and Gogo ran to the shoe house and soon returned with a thimble and a Teenie Weenie ax. In a short time they had a roaring fire going and the Cook melted enough snow to make sassafras tea. He had brought along an acorn basket filled with tiny cups and some bread and butter sandwiches. Teenie Weenie fingers, toes, and tummies were soon warmed and the little people returned to their skating.

They had a wonderful time gliding over the smooth ice. Occasionally, a Teenie Weenie slipped on the ice and took a tumble, but since no one was hurt the little people laughed when any one fell. Even Nick the Squirrel enjoyed the sport as he squated by the warm fire and watched the fun.

"You ought to put on a pair of skates and try your skill," said the General.

"You mean I ought to put on two pairs of skates," Nick joked, as he stretched his paws out to warm over the fire. "I'd need 'em fore and aft if I tried to skate."

Red Cross Points Out Crying Need of Volunteers for Nurses Aid Corps

By Irene Steyskal

War service, social conscience, community responsibility, holding the home front—these are familiar terms today. So frequently are they used by every officer and committee chairman in women's organizations that they flow easily off the tongue, too often conveying, it is generally admitted, little more than sounding brass and tinkling cymbal significance.

If the thousands of Chicago and suburban women who hear them over and over, day after day, were to translate them, with sincerity and complete honesty, into action, every worry etching lines across Mrs. Arthur H. Spiegel's forehead as she studies her charts, allocation tables, and Chicago area map at Red Cross headquarters would be dissipated.

Mrs. Spiegel is chairman of the Volunteer Nurses Aid corps of the Chicago Red Cross chapter. With scores of registered nurses leaving Chicago area hospitals each month for military service, it is Mrs. Spiegel's job to supply nurse's aids in order that professional nursing be spread as far as possible in the local hospitals that are suffering rapid depletion of their staffs.

The urgent need in Chicago area hospitals and thruout the country is for nurse's aids whose services are available in the day hours.

This means, Mrs. Spiegel emphasizes, that it is the housewife—the woman who so can arrange her schedule as to have leisure day time hours to give—whom the Red Cross calls upon to make good in a time of emergency on her claim to responsible citizenship. And this, Mrs. Spiegel points out, is a contribution the poorest as well as the wealthy can make to the common good.

The nurse's aid is exactly what the name implies. She is the third, fourth, and fifth extra hand every overworked graduate nurse is praying for today. Hers are the many hospital routine jobs that do not require professional knowledge of nursing to perform.

It is one of those unexplainable facts borne out by harsh figures that the woman who has the time to give is lagging far behind the far busier employed woman in volunteering for this essential war service on the home front. In December the ratio was running about three to one. January saw an improvement. The rate now is approximately two employed women volunteers to one unemployed volunteer.

In calling the need for volunteers to the nurse's aid corps to the attention of women's clubs, Mrs. Spiegel urges them to study their schedules and reëvaluate them carefully, and then, whatever the wrench to the comfortable and pleasing old routines, disband every nonessential committee and activity, thus making way for an effective drive to recruit nurse's aids from their memberships and thruout their respective communities.

The office of civilian defense has set six aids to every 1,000 of the population as the standard. At the end of 1942 there were 69,103 aids enrolled in 958 Red Cross chapters in the entire country. In active service were 46,000. Chicago chapter, servicing 41 hospitals in Chicago and surrounding towns, had only 1,384 aids who had completed their training. One aid to every 15 beds in the hospitals serviced is the present goal Mrs. Spiegel is striving to attain for Chicago chapter.

The duties of the nurse's aid are specifically defined. Upon completing her training, the aid is expected to give 12 hours of service each week. The training requires 85 hours; 40 for preliminary classwork, and 45 in acquiring practical exeprience in hospital wards.

North Side Aldermanic Candidates Tell Their Aims Before the Lake Shore Women's Voters League

By Cousin Eve

Mimosa in the florist's window is about as good for the morale as anything I know. It seems to say, "Somewhere the sun is shining and trees are covered with furry yellow blossoms like mine." Early primroses, jonquils, and bright purple violas are out, and even luxurious camellias from the deep south. A fortnight ago in Washington it was over 70 degrees and people sat out in the parks. From our town there is a gentle trek to Mexico. Last week Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Sudler entrained for Cuernavaca where they own a house and are having a guest, Mrs. Cyrus Bentley, whose Astor street house is closed in her absence.

The Sudlers left their car on the frontier last year, shipshape for the return journey to Mexico City and Cuernavaca, an artist village lying in the mountains southwest of the capital. Their Mexican house has a swimming pool, flower gardens, and is spacious and attractive. Living is cheap here—an artist bought a shack for $25, I have heard tell.

Meanwhile we are tending our muttons here at home, where the political situation is warming up. Inasmuch as aldermen are supposed to be nonpartisan, the Lake Shore League of Woman Voters (also nonpartisan) staged a rally Monday evening in the gymnasium of the Girls' Latin school in Scott street. The meeting was for aldermanic candidates north of the river, and Mrs. John Collier, president of the league, was bounded on the east and west by would-be city fathers who sat in semi-circle on the stage. Each man had seven minutes in which to tell the story of his life. Summed up, all six had been born, had attended school, married, had a family, and now stood before us, aiming to please.

Their short sagas reminded one of the ancient Roman tombstone of the dancing boy on the Riviera at Juan-les-Pins: "I was born, I danced, I pleased, I died."

The two candidates who captured our imagination were Edward Rogers of the 44th, who has a certain way with him that delighted his hearers, and Samuel A. Culbertson of the 43d ward, who made a good speech, giving his background and aims.

"Sammy" is a grandson of two rugged individualists, the late Dr. Hugh McFatrich of the 43d ward and Samuel Culbertson of Louisville. We have seen Sam go to school, to Yale university, to law school, to special study of political science and public relations, and now we see him after the real thing, the people's vote. If good looks alone could win, Culbertson with his tall, lean, well set figure, clear cut features, and sleek, dark hair, could be our next shepherd in the 43d. He is an able and independent young man, only son of the late Mrs. Stanley Mitchell of Chicago and of Craig Culbertson of Louisville, one of the greatest pranksters Kentucky has ever produced.

Years ago before people ran around the country in all kinds of negligee and undress bathing beach costumes, Craig Culbertson motored into Indiana one summer day strangely arrayed. He wore long trousers, figured silk pajama tunic, and sandals. Leaping from his roadster in a small village, he was observed by the local policeman, who noted his costume and hailed him: "Hi, you—you're under arrest—you can't travel in Indiana in that indecent outfit." "Very well," said Mr. Culbertson, "arrest me if you will, but I shall lodge a formal protest with the Chinese ambassador at Washington." A great light dawned on the policeman—this was undoubtedly a Chinese high mandarin — and with many bows and apologies he speeded him on his way.

Frederick Whyte was featured last week by the English Speaking Union which staged a luncheon meeting in the club room of the Art Institute. It made a welcome diversion, this change of place and menu, and as for Mr.

Party Dresses for the Teen Aged Girl Are Frothy and Gay

By Rea Seeger.

Honest-to-goodness party frocks, anything but hand-me-downs from big sister; confections of frothy tulle net and swishy taffeta transform little girls into visions of sugar and spice. Dazed staglines of young escorts stand bug-eyed over the magic party clothes work on the pigtailed companions of daytime frolics and fun. If that doesn't make the party a big success, what does?

Out in plenty of time for Valentine dances scheduled during the coming week are this year's contributions for making a heart breaker of any incipient tomboy. Available in sizes 10 to 16, with emphasis on the magic of wide, long skirts, tiny bodices, puffed sleeves, and enchanting frost ing white nets and valentine red tones, these party clothes are indubitably the ones which will be remembered long after imports or far more expensive models are forgotten.

They are, and have been, cleverly designed for difficult growing figures of palpitating little girls who wear them for the first time. For, no matter how gauche your moppets seem in sweaters, jackets, and skirts, they'll trail in rosy clouds of rapture down the steps thru the door to conquest, with color and with decorative charm. These are the confections with billowing skirts to accent slender, handspan waists, in addition to the dainty, frilled bodices, and the tiny, alluring, puffed sleeves, to complete a picture book dress. Yards of net, taffeta underskirts, ruchings, sophisticated crimson sequins, velvet bow knots, and ruffles are some of the fascinating extras which make them the essence of a youngster's wildest dreams.

And found in the same stronghold of youthful fashions are party capes of quilted, padded velvet in white or scarlet; the coolie coats of the same warm, padded material, and tops in wishful grandeur, snowy white bunny jackets. They are the Valentine possibilities hereby listed for doting fathers or any other sympathizing, understanding grownup relations, for they will make an impression on more or less susceptible future belles.

Some of these models feature miniature basque tops of sooty black velvet attached to a foaming, pink net, full gathered skirt. Others are pastel creations of blue, yellow, pink, red, and white taffetas with crinoline stiffened skirts and a grownup looking décolletage, shaped like the curved top of a Valentine heart. Crinkled silk in peach, azure, white, and yellow make some devastatingly demure finds.

These have little, round, turnover collars and short sleeves, definite accents for the full, gathered skirts. While the pastels always are irresistible finds, this year the frosty white affairs are top favorites among the teensters for popularity.

Some of the tempting finds are illustrated today. Others as alluring and picturesque are star attractions in one of the most exciting party dress showings in town. All may be found in a Chicago shop. For further information, call Superior 0200.

Thru the Looking Glass..... By Eleanor Nangle

Exit glamor as an end in itself!

Enter efficiency, with improved health and grooming as its hand maidens!

The most exciting news in beauty circles at the moment concerns the individualized efficiency plans which have been worked out by one of the great beauty specialists, who has thrown all the resources of her large organization into programs for body, beauty and health building, offered to women at prices they can afford.

The program breaks down into three general plans, or courses, which women may follow. In one, women may take an amazingly complete course, a combination of class instruction and individualized treatment in weight control, architectural exercise, complexion care, and hair care at the salon. This is vastly exciting for the women who want to improve their appearance generally or concentrate, perhaps, on one major defect.

The third plan is all class instruction at the salon, a top to toe course including body proportioning, skin care, and personal grooming. There are leaflets galore concerning all sorts of individual problems which help your home program to supplement your class work.

The second plan is a business woman's dream, and one we want particularly to call to her attention today. She's obliged to maintain efficiency and a good appearance. Her personal happiness, to say nothing of her value as a worker, is vastly increased when she follows a streamlined plan of self-care that fits her budget and her time schedule.

Within a month or six weeks she has, at a flat price, a series of salon day time appointments, a series of well planned, wonderfully efficient face and body treatments, plus the necessary shampoos, manicures, and hairdos. This is accomplished in the minimum of time, and at what is certainly the minimum of cost.

In this way, she can keep her complexion beautifully groomed, her hair exquisitely conditioned and dressed, and her vitality at high pitch by the body treatments.

In all these courses, which are individualized and therefore difficult to generalize about, the motif is efficiency. The woman who wants to be slimmer; the one who wants to step up vitality; the one whose hair is a problem, or whose complexion is a main concern, every one of these can find corrective steps to suit her needs. There are efficiency diets, architectural body building exercises, and complexion care routines that fit every need. There is no fluff about these; they are for women who want to plan for better health, better beauty, and better grooming in the future that stretches ahead, and wants to execute the plans with the minimum of expense and time.

With the plan selected that best suits her needs and time schedule the woman who enters her preferred course will find that she has invested her money in something that will bring her immediate benefits as well as a fine guide for the future. She will know how to maintain the new beauty and efficiency that are hers and how to avoid backsliding into the pitfalls that might undo the good work she has accomplished.

For the business woman who cannot afford to be or to look tired, a series of salon treatments, especially planned for her efficiency and the modesty of her budget, will accomplish miracles. At a flat fee she can arrange for hair, face and body treatments that save her time and improve her vitality and appearance.

Post-Operative Fears of Child Require Special Attention

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

[Copyright: 1943: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

Here is part of a letter which will interest many mothers who have young children, perhaps some who have older children, too.

"I am going to take this opportunity to ask for some advice to help me with my present problem. I will be patient for your reply.

"My son was 4 years old last January. He is a blessing to our home, an only child—but not spoiled. Six weeks ago, my little boy was rushed to the hospital for an appendectomy and rallied thru to health and strength nicely.

"However, once he came home he would not let me out of his sight for even a few minutes without going into hysterics. At first I thought it was due to his being at the hospital, and that he was afraid to have me go anywhere for fear I wouldn't return. But even when I go shopping for food and wish to leave him sitting in the stroller outside so that he may get the sunshine and fresh air, he bursts into frightened crying.

"I have mentioned all this behavior to the doctor in charge of my son, and I was advised that I must break him of this annoying habit or it will be difficult later. She suggests I let him cry even to the point of exhaustion, until he himself realizes that it will have no effect if he continues to weep. So far this treatment has not helped. Can you help me, please? I will try anything you suggest."

It seems cruel to allow a child in this post-operative, psychological condition to cry to the point of exhaustion during this kind of fear. This is not a case for discipline, but for love and understanding and intelligent handling.

Obviously, all children do not react in the same way to the same circumstances. But the experience this child had of being rushed to the hospital into strange and [under the conditions] terrifying surroundings, being given an anaesthetic with all the attendant sensations, then coming out of it in a strange place with unfamiliar faces, was attended by both surgical and psychological [some call it "psychic"] shock. This shock could be there despite the fact that he acted bravely and was called a model patient thruout his hospital stay.

• • •

Shock is frequently not visible to the naked eye, and doctors often do not explain this aftermath of an operation, either to adults who have been thru one, or to the parents of young patients. With this little boy the shock is showing itself in the fear his mother describes. He is really in the grip of a nervous reaction when she leaves him. This is not just "attention-getting" behavior. Neither is it naughtiness or a tantrum, so does not merit discipline. The spartan measures suggested by the doctor do not seem to fit. Instead, time and a sense of love and security will heal this little boy, for both his personality and his body need healing or a period of convalescence. He may suddenly snap out of this, or it may take weeks or months, but recover he will. However, as I said, love and the sense of security will be the fundamental factors needed in cases like this.

Women Voters Hear Aspirants for Alderman

Whyte, it was not so much what he said, but the attractive way he said it that mattered. He has served in China, in India, and as an M. P., and so England sent him forth to dilate on "Our Post-War Opportunities." Years ago he married a Chicago beauty, Geraldine Vaux, only daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Vaux of Astor street. She was a dazzling, poetical brunette, who never, after her marriage, came back to Chicago. Mr. Whyte has had a highly romantic life—if only he could have told us his story! Our "post-war opportunities" seems a large subject for a Britisher. But he did tell of British magnanimity in India; putting tarifs on British goods, wool, and steel, so that India built her own wool and steel mills thereafter.

Passing thru Bombay awhile ago, a friend tells me of finding a wonderful portrait of the late Rue Winterbotham Carpenter hanging in the Bombay museum of Fine Arts. It is a full length, vivid likeness by Glenn Philpotts and was presented to the museum by Ratan Tata, head of the leading Parsee family of India. His iron and steel mills were designed and built by an Aemican, the late Charles Pope Perin whose widow was the former Mrs. Colgate Hoyt and visits here often.

The Art institute is again the arena for public lectures by University of Chicago professors. They sound marvelous, and several friends are forgoing dinner and racing down to acquire knowledge at 6:45 p. m. Wellington Jones, the university's geographer, has a course of five illustrated talks, beginning Tuesday evening. One subject is "Japan — Britain of the East." Another is "India, Britain's Problem." And yet another—"The Pacific—Does It Unify or Divide?" Mr. Jones is a stickler for flawless English as well as geographical lore. There are four talks on "Race in the Modern World" and a series of 10 lectures by Milton Singer on the "Theory and Practice of Liberty." One might have an English high-tea on Feb. 9th and hear Dr. Singer on "The Nurse of All Great Wits—Freedom of the Press and Speech."

Apropos of untoward hours, two of my friends and neighbors have been rising before the crack of dawn and betaking themselves by foot and bus to the west side campus of Illinois Institute of Technology. This may sound simple in mere language, but just try it. At 6 a. m. of a January morning Chicago is black as Egypt, and Mrs. Ballard Moore and Mrs. John V. Farwell III., leave their homes in pursuit of an engineering course and travel for an hour to their classrooms out on the west side. Classes begin at 8 a. m. and at the end of a long and hectic day they leave school and return home, their arms full of "homework" which keeps them fully occupied until midnight. What these two smart young matrons mean to do when they have mastered logarithms, geometry, and other things is another story.

Mrs. Moore—the versatile Olive—is on the verge of quitting and taking a nurse's aide course at St. Luke's. But Mrs. Farwell, encouraged by her husband to keep on the thorny path of knowledge—he says "A Farwell never quits"—will undoubtedly bloom out in April with a degree and be eligible as a bridge builder or something.

January brought a flock of birds of passage to town. Leander McCormick-Goodhart was one of them, staying uptown with his cousins, the Chauncey McCormicks. Very mundane and gay was Leander, and for the time being a bachelor again [as his wife and children are spending the winter in Boston and single men in Washington are scarce as hen's teeth].

Staying on in Chicago is our old friend Maestro Giorgio Polacco, former director in chief of the Chicago Opera, an amusing and interesting man. Polacco has been living in New York since his retirement from opera and enjoying music from the side lines, kibitzing, as it were. The maestro has been having a flock of parties in his honor and he was the center of a scene at Mrs. Jacob Baur's last Sunday luncheon, and throwing the spotlight on a few dark operatic mysteries. Polacco is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Giacomo Rimini in their Michigan avenue apartment. Mrs. Rimini is no other than the great dramatic soprano of other days, handsome Rosa Raisa, who was always a regal vision in beautiful jewels.

Fashions as I See Them

By Judith Cass

New fashions in eating habits these days when red meat is getting scarcer and new fashions for dining out shared honors at a recent party at the Key club. Members gathered to sample special dishes of seven amateur cooks and to display their own latest after-dark clothes. Mrs. Alfred D. Plamondon Jr., voting dutifully for her husband's frog legs sauté [lemon and butter added to the flavor] was all in black. A wisp of a little black hat perched atop her upswept dark hair, and a hint of jet beading ornamented her gown. Her wrap was a stunning one of silver fox. Mrs. Francis R. Blossom, voting for her husband's potted ox-joints in wine [onions, carrots, celery, garlic, salt, pepper, water and a quart of sour red wine provided the distinctive taste] brightened an all-black ensemble with turquoise feathers on her hat to match an insert in the bodice of her dress. The ever popular black,, combined this time with red, was worn by Mrs. John J. Goodwillie to the cooking contest which was won by Mr. Goodwillie's breast of chicken [mushrooms, bread crumbs, and butter figured here]. Mrs. Andrew Berkey entertained at cocktails before the contest in the Berkeys unusual apartment that consists of two huge rooms, two baths and a kitchenette. She, too, wore black. Mrs. Berkey wears her blond curls cut short and turned up all about her head, and does not wear make-up, even lipstick. Her dress, made with a deep peplum, gave her the look of a little girl suddenly grown up. Both rooms in the apartment are treated as living rooms. The north room, looking out over a summertime sundeck, is papered in two different, but harmonizing, patterns and the room is "brought together" by the use of plain, reddish brown slip coverings that disguise three-quarter beds against opposite walls as enormous couches.

Beige and crimson was the unusual color motif that Miss Olivia Little used for her recent marriage to Oden Meeker. The bride's sister and matron of honor, Mrs. Briggs Gettys, and the six bridesmaids wore beige jersey gowns which appeared from the front to be of the monotone shade, but which revealed crimson panels extending from shoulder to hem and dramatic crimson cowls which hung down monk-fashion when viewed from behind. Red velveteen skull caps and bouquets of red carnations completed their costumes. The bride, who is tall and slender with honey-colored hair, wore a handsome gown made from heavy satin which had lined the bridal dress of her aunt, the late Mrs. Francis Wigmore. Encircling her waist was a girdle of pearls from the wedding dress of her mother, Mrs. Charles George Little, and her veil was held by a cap made from heirloom lace belonging to another aunt, Mrs. Morris K. Wilson. In place of the conventional bride's bouquet she carried a prayer book tied with white hyacinth blossoms.

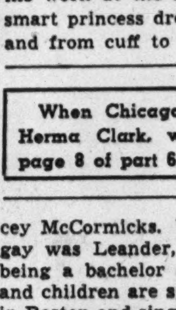
A harbinger of spring was the refreshing bonnet that Mrs. Howard Linn wore to a recent luncheon meeting of the American Friends of Poland. The hat itself was of a soft pink felt, a color that contrasted beautifully with Mrs. Linn's silvery curls. Bunched at the front were pink and violet flowers and green leaves, and the veil covering her face was the shade of wood violets. Mrs. Linn's doeskin gloves repeated the soft pink tone. Her dress was a classic black crêpe one, unadorned save for handsome clips. Mrs. Alexander H. Revell Jr., presiding recently at the Woman's Athletic club, enlivened a tailored dress of chocolate brown crêpe with a gay little feather hat in a glowing tangerine shade. Mrs. Peter C. Krupp also wears a becoming hat that uses a feather trimming, a black felt topper crowned with hyacinth blue ostrich plumes. The black dress with which she sometimes wears it has loops of black crêpe fringe caught up around the short sleeves. Mrs. Alexander Spoehr, whose husband has left his work at the Field museum for a navy post in Rhode Island, wears a smart princess dress of sheer navy wool, fastened all the way up the front and from cuff to elbow with buttonholes whipped in gold wool.



Mrs. Alexander Spoehr.

Old Pueblo to Celebrate 'Go Western' Week

TUCSON, ARIZ.

Next week citizens of the Old Pueblo go western or else. Rolling the hoosegow on wheels onto Congress street, the vigilantes will start rounding up passers-by who refuse to wear some item of western garb. The victims will be thrown behind the bars and released only after paying a dollar fine, receipt for which will be a dollar defense stamp.

"Go western" week will continue until the 22d, on which day Tucson's famous Fiesta de los Vaqueros parade will be held. The fiesta itself will not be held because the Vaqueros have gone to war and the Vacs have gone to the stockyards. Alternately, a roping rodeo has been planned, and a series of western events will be held in downtown Tucson. The southern Arizona Dude Ranchers' association is active in the sponsorship of western week and has recently released its specifications for "strictly G. I." western dress.

Guests at the Desert Willow, out on Tanque Verde road, are so renowned sartorially and pictorially that a number of them were chosen to play bit parts in the million dollar movie recently shot here by a Hollywood company. Desert Willows' immediate environs are cacti—studded and rugged; yet within it boast the comforts of home plus permission to park your boots on the Monterey furniture. With an excellent string of cow ponies, the ranch is headquarters for ardent horsemen and women who daily take long treks aboard their cayuses across the desert and into the Santa Catalina mountains. Mrs. R. T. Matthiessen of Winnetka recently left the ranch after a brief vacation. Others currently there are the K. K. Kindwalls, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Kenney, and Mr. and Mrs. George Clayton.

Desert Willow is on the north side of Tanque Verde road. Not too far away, in western parlance, is the Diamond W, whose stately hacienda is on the south side of the road to Tanque Verde.

Guests at the Diamond W are reputedly among the happiest in the environs of the Old Pueblo. No exception are the crop of Chicagoans currently putting their boots beneath the board, among them Edward D. Loring and his daughter, China Robbins Ibsen; the Donald Louries and their daughter, Annie, formerly a student at the Little Outfit in Patagonia; William G. Mason, Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Rubicam, Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Buffington, Mr. and Mrs. James Ramsey and their son, Jimmy, of Wilmette; Mrs. Paul H. Beuttas and her sons, Paul and Joe, of Winnetka, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter W. Kolbee and their son, Walter Jr., of Chicago. A number of this group were seen at the horse races at Moltacqua track last Sunday.

Some Chicagoans who have recently arrived at the El Conquistador hotel include Mrs. Harry J. Bosworth, Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Andersen, Mr. and Mrs. Louis S. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Pearson, Mr. and Mrs. Albert L. Fell, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Schmidt, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Dennis. Mrs. Orrin T. Allen of Chicago, mother of Mrs. Bradly W. Davies of the Northgate Inn, has arrived at the Northgate for a two weeks' visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Eidmann and their daughter, Jean, of Chicago, are currently stopping at the Pepper Tree Inn, near the University of Arizona campus. The Eidmanns spent a day this week out at the Arrow H ranch near the Saquaro national monument. The monument is a 60,000 acre government reserve in which several hundred varieties of cacti are found, and is said to be the most extensive cactus forest in the world. The Arrow H, run by Lois Henry and Dorothy Arnold, is one of the most interesting and "remote from civilization" ranches in this area.

Adolescence Theme of Discussion by Family Study Club

"Adolescents in Review" will be the general theme of an all-day discussion to be presented by the Association for Family Living on Tuesday in room 1426, 209 South State street. Since the present war conditions serve only to aggravate the already existing delinquency and personality disintegration problems, the need for understanding the young person and his responsibilities becomes increasingly important.

Prof. George V. Sheviskov, director of guidance at the laboratory school of the University of Chicago, is principal speaker at the morning session at 10 o'clock. He says, "Work on youngsters' morale begins at home with honest, self-disciplinary attitudes on the part of adults. If the latter will stand the crisis in a stable way, youth will stand it, too, and come out mature and integrated."

Rosary College Auxiliary Plans Quarterly Meeting

The quarterly meeting of the Rosary college auxiliary will bring members together on Thursday afternoon in the social hall of the college for a program prepared by students of the music, drama, and language departments. The musical portion of the entertainment will feature Ann Marie Hacker, Cleo Giannopoulos, Virginia Ward, and Irma Ann Lannert. Mary McDermott, chairman of the speakers' bureau of the war activities committee, will discuss the work of her group and introduce Margaret Mahony, a senior language student. Miss Mahony will speak on "Pan-Americanism and the War."

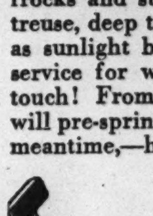
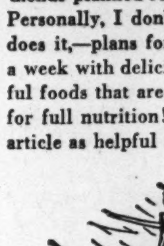
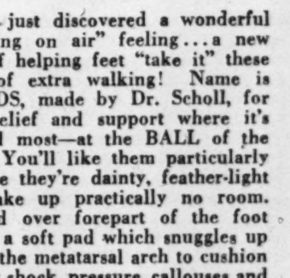
BUY-LINES • by Nancy Sasser
A Weekly Sponsored Column of Things Advertised and Interesting



New York, Feb. 6th. No Spring Crocus popping up from Manhattan pavements . . . but already I'm daft with Spring Fever! Reason is the fashion shows seen 'round town . . . previews of what YOUR stores will be showing soon! Here are a few of the most exciting fashion notes seen. Navy, inevitable every Spring, will become beloved as never before in the new slim-lined frocks and suits for wartime,—"shock colors", bud-green chartreuse, deep tiger lily red, sweet lavenders and yellows as golden as sunlight bring excitement—a revival of "Buttondom" gives service for war-working slide fasteners and adds a decorative touch! From now on charming prints, suits, coats and dresses will pre-spring the Spring in your stores,—watch for them! In the meantime,—here are BUY-LINES that are MUSTS for you now!

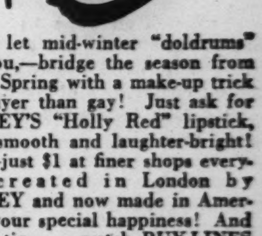


Novels come and novels go,—but it's a long time since I've enjoyed one as much as "Mother's Had a Hard Life" by Micheline Keating. It's a honey of a story . . . how a gal meets the mother-complex problem when it's already broken up one marriage and hovers dangerously 'round the second. You'll find it in the February McCALL'S,—complete novel in this issue. And don't overlook that remarkable set of menus planned for four people each day for one whole week . . . on page 46. Personally, I don't see how McCALL'S Food Staff does it,—plans for feeding a family of 4 on $14.10 a week with delicious menus prepared from plentiful foods that are in accord with U. S. Food Rules for full nutrition! Hope you find this McCALL'S article as helpful as I did!



I've just discovered a wonderful "walking on air" feeling . . . a new way of helping feet "take it" these days of extra walking! Name is LuPADS, made by Dr. Scholl, for foot relief and support where it's needed most—at the BALL of the foot. You'll like them particularly because they're dainty, feather-light and take up practically no room. Slipped over forepart of the foot means a soft pad which snuggles up under the metatarsal arch to cushion against shock, pressure, callouses and pain. LuPADS give real walking comfort—are invisible even in dress shoes! Ask Drug, Department and Shoe Stores for them, or send $1 to Nancy Sasser, 420 Lexington Avenue, New York. (Give shoe size and width.)

Why SHOULD babies hail SWAN soap-champ? Just try it on your own skin . . . and you'll have the answer. Purity does it,—mild baby-gentleness from a floating soap that's purer than finest castiles. The bubbly lather it raises quickly even in hard water will delight you as much as it does the wee set. And you'll appreciate the care with which it washes your fine lingerie just as much as baby appreciates the fresh, sweet-smelling nursery clothes which mother SWAN-sudsed! So why not join the Baby Brigade—make SWAN your soap-champ, too!



Don't let mid-winter "doldrums" catch you,—bridge the season from now 'til Spring with a make-up trick that's gayer than gay! Just ask for YARDLEY'S "Holly Red" lipstick, cream—smooth and laughter-bright! Try it,—just $1 at finer shops everywhere—created in London by YARDLEY and now made in America for your special happiness! And here's a tip . . . watch BUY-LINES for a new contribution YARDLEY is making to American charm . . . coming SOON!

Clip this "Facial Chart" to learn a new way to give face and throat a thrilling "beauty lift"! Then follow it with EDNA WALLACE HOPPER'S Homogenized Facial Cream faithfully EVERY night according to these simple directions. Pat cream briskly over face and throat . . . always UPWARD with OUTWARD strokes. Press an extra amount of cream over any lines and leave on 8 minutes. Wipe off and see how marble-smooth your skin appears,—for the HOPPER facial has lubricated dry, rough and faded skin better and more evenly because it's homogenized for special ACTIVENESS! Ask your Cosmetic Counter for EDNA WALLACE HOPPER'S Homogenized Facial Cream—see how quickly your skin is helped to a new firmness, freshness and youthful beauty!

Prize Winners of U. S. Art a Great Show

By Eleanor Jewett.

The Arts club opened a highly original exhibit last Wednesday. It consists of American prize winners of last season, and now that the show is on the walls it seems odd that no one had thought to have such an exhibition before. The current show, we are told, is the fruit of a suggestion made by Charles P. Killgore, Chicago painter, a suggestion which has bloomed into a diverting, diversified, and imposing summing up of the sort of thing prize juries are looking for.

There are oils, water colors, and sculpture. The large gallery is hung with oils, as is the second one, and in the round room are the sculpture and the water colors, which spill over into the hall. Outstanding among the oil paintings are "Green Mountains," by William Dean Fausett, a beautiful landscape with a rainbow and a birch; "Brown and Wet," by William Hollingsworth Jr., three little colored children coming home from church, two on a mule [the child in front carries an umbrella] and a little girl walking in mighty important rubber boots, and another stunning landscape, "Out West of Denver," by Vance Kirkland.

Among the water colors are many which are delightful. A quick selection might put at the top of the list "Two Girls," by Isabel Bishop; "Yacht Club, Coronado," by Joseph Knowles; "Snow in Athens, Ga.," by James Couper Wright, and "Sunday Afternoon," by Francis Todhunter.

There are two entrancing pieces of sculpture, "The Secret," by C. Paul Jennewein, which presents a tiny child standing on tiptoe to whisper to a solemn stork that bends its head, and "Fan Tail Pigeon," by Walter Rotan, a superb bird.

The exhibition will continue to Feb. 25 and no one should miss it. All sections of the country are represented. There are pieces from Maine and California, Chicago, Philadelphia, the southwest and the south.

The Chicago Galleries association, 215 North Michigan avenue, opened an attractive exhibition yesterday to continue to Feb. 27. It will come as a shock to many visitors to find the word "Memorial" used before Karl Ouren's exhibit. Mr. Ouren appeared in excellent health, but died sudenly one evening last month. Mr. Ouren had been a member of the Palette and Chisel club for many years and his fine paintings of Norway and the other Scandinavian countries have endeared him to a large public. He was one of Chicago's outstanding painters. This exhibit of his work renews our appreciation of the strength and honesty of his craftsmanship.

The Chicago Galleries also is showing a stunning group of portraits by Claude Buck and a beautiful group of exquisite still life paintings by Leslie B. Buck. Recent paintings by Merlin Enabnit are a fourth attraction at the Chicago Galleries. Edward T. Grigware wrote the little introduction to Mr. Enabnit's catalog and it is worth quoting: "Great art just like great music has the faculty of creating new and sublime worlds for all to enjoy. . . . Merlin Enabnit's adventures in color have the melodic swing of a Viennese waltz—always beautiful, always in harmony." Mr. Grigware's comment is not exaggerated; Merlin Enabnit does new things in paint—and does them with intelligence, imagination, and skill.

The Chicago Galleries has the finest of the February exhibitions; do not fail to see it.

A gay and clever group of paintings by May H. Gilruth, who can do an immense amount with a stroke of her brush and a swish of color, is on view at the Cordon club, Fine Arts building, to March 1. Miss Gilruth is a master of insinuation; from her hints one catches a view of a vast vista or a small, tight, perfect enclosure. She deals in dots rather than periods and adores exclamation points, but her pictures are none the worse for her sparing hand; they are animated, amusing, and alive.

Women in War Work . . . By Kate Massee

From now on soldiers or sailors who for one reason or another don't write home very often, will have the assistance of the U. S. O. in sending news to their home towns. A week ago the Chicago alumnae chapter of Theta Sigma Phi, national professional society for women in journalism, inaugurated a unique service.

Any member of the services, stationed here or merely passing thru, may stop at a special news service desk in the U. S. O. center at 131 South Wabash avenue, and have a news item about himself written and mailed free to his local newspaper. For the present the service will be maintained—at the one center only—from 3 until 7 p. m., but as the demand increases, news bureaus will be established in other clubs in the loop and along the north shore.

When news stories are written for the larger metropolitan papers, action photographs, taken by professional camera men who work as volunteers in the U. S. O. camera club, will be attached.

Approval by the army, navy, and marine public relations departments has been obtained for this project, and members of Theta Sigma Phi have been instructed as to correct wordage and the exclusion of any item that might give information to the enemy.

The newly organized Wives of World War I. Naval Aviators will hold their second meeting at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the Chicago Athletic association. The new group, organized to recruit WAVES and SPARs, is headed by Mrs. Richard P. Hummer of Evanston, wife of a lieutenant commander on duty out of the country. The new unit was formed, Mrs. Hummer said, at the suggestion of Lt. Comm. Carl Olson of the flight selection board, and Warren Woody, chairman of World War I. Naval Aviators, which recruited several squadrons of young naval aviators at the start of World war II.

Working with Mrs. Hummer in the new group are Mrs. Warren Woody, Mrs. Carl Olson, Mrs. Arthur Gallagher, who has a son in naval aviation, and Mrs. Otis Beeman. Wednesday's meeting will be an open session, and women interested in furthering the recruitment of WAVES and SPARs are welcome to attend, Mrs. Hummer said. She added that they do not necessarily have to be the wives of naval aviators of World War I. Their activities will consist of promotional work, contacting schools and women's clubs and serving as distributors of information about the corps.

Mrs. Jennie M. Purvin, director of the club woman's bureau at Mandel Brothers, has sent out letters asking the women's clubs of the city to gather blotters and picture postcards for the service men's center, 176 West Washington street. Mrs. Purvin, who has long been active in club circles, in a letter to club presidents, asked them to urge members to bring these items either to the next club meeting or to the woman's bureau. She asked that women do not place stamps on the postcards because of service men's franking privileges. The clubwoman's bureau, Mrs. Purvin said, will see that the blotters and cards reach the service men's center. She said the need for these articles was told by Daniel L. Flaherty, administrative director of the center.

The Evanston army unit of Bundles for America has solved the gasoline and transportation problem. Mrs. J. T. Montgomery, chairman of the unit, has organized neighborhood groups who will work under the following chairmen: Mrs. Fred G. Gurley, Mrs. R. F. Kelker Jr., Mrs. A. McLeod Jackson, Mrs. L. R. Mapes, and Mrs. John H. Morse of Evanston, and Mrs. Wallace Miller and Mrs. W. J. O'Brien of Wilmette. Once each month the chairman will meet with Mrs. Montgomery at which time the finished work will be brought in, plans made, and new material issued to the chairman, who will pass it along to the women in their communities.

Mrs. Lefens Porter, 60 Scott Street, is a Red Cross First Aid instructor, and an ardent worker for Bundles for America, but first place in her war interests belongs to her husband, Lieutenant (j. g.) Lefens Porter. For her portrait by Dora, Mrs. Porter posed in our Service Men's Shopping Base, where she was employed during the holidays. She wears a Sunningdale gabardine suit. This is the ninth in a series of portraits of Chicago women in the war, drawn for us by Dora.*

SO PROUDLY WE HAIL... the War Wife

You're making homes in all manner of strange places—furnished rooms, trailer camp cabins—setting up living quarters wherever your husband may be stationed in this country, no matter how temporarily. And when he goes off, as he must, you return to your old life and take it up without really becoming a part of it. You live always with a suitcase mentally packed, ready to take the first train to him when you receive word that he's back.

Mrs. Lefens Porter is one of you. Her husband is a lieutenant junior grade, U.S.N.R., and goes to sea. When he is ashore, Mrs. Porter joins him. When he is away she returns to Chicago with their two-and-a-half-year-old daughter and makes her home with her mother-in-law. But in-between packing and repacking she's managed to pass her First Aid course and her First Aid instructor's course. She served as captain in the war fund relief drive last fall. And understandably her first love, and the group she is always working for, is Bundles for Bluejackets. Even though it is now Bundles for America, Mrs. Porter still thinks of it as bundles for sailors.

Because of your courage, your resourcefulness, because you are proving the truth of the old adage "Home is where the heart is," Marshall Field & Company salutes you. We wish each of you might have the medal you earn daily—engraved simply, "for distinguished service."

THE TRIBUNE TRAVELERS' GUIDE

Suchiate River Bridge Opens New Horizons

By Dorothy Johnson.

Going to Mexico? Why not see more of Central America while you're south of the border? The new bridge over the Suchiate river, boundary line between Mexico and Guatemala, has facilitated international commerce but, more than that, it promises further to cement hemispheric solidarity by encouraging travelers to exploit the wider frontiers thus opened.

The National railways of Mexico intend to inaugurate a thru sleeper service to Suchiate, via Cordoba, which will enable travelers to enjoy the scenery of southern Mexico and make direct connections for Guatemala City, made possible by the bridge. Such a trip, it is said, will be moderately priced.

According to the contemplated schedule, the train will leave Mexico City one morning and arrive at Suchiate the morning of the third day; leave Ayutla, Guatemala, that same morning and arrive in Guatemala City that evening. Two hours will be allowed for crossing the bridge and customs formalities at the border. In regard to their crossing of the Guatemalan border, travelers are reminded of the United States regulation about passports. Whereas a visit to Mexico involves only a tourist card obtained from a Mexican consul; other Latin-American countries require passports.

Before the Suchiate bridge was inaugurated, it frequently was necessary for travelers to spend the night before they ferried across the river to the Guatemalan side to take the train from Ayutla. The new span and train connections will eliminate this feature, but any one caring to stop in either town will find hotel quarters at modest rates.

From the river to Guatemala City the railway ascends thru exotic vegetation, passing enchanting villages, the natives of which have preserved ancient Mayan civilization. Customs and dress have a quaint and colorful simplicity. In the capital, altho the vegetation is tropical, the evening temperatures are refreshing. The mountain city offers excellent hotel facilities. The unit of currency in Guatemala is the quetzal, approximately equivalent to the American dollar.

From Guatemala City tours may be made to Lake Atitlan, shining like a deep blue jewel in a mountain setting, to Mayan ruins rich in archaeological lore, to Chichicastenango, one of the most colorful of Guatemalan towns, and for years the mecca of travelers, to ancient Antigua and to villages where markets and local sights and sounds fascinate.

Branching out from Guatemala, the traveler may seek other travel thrills. He can go by train to Puerto Barrios on the Caribbean, or visit El Salvador, only a few hours away. The capital of that progressive sister republic of Central America, San Salvador, is a modern city suggestive of Honolulu. Sports and gayety are natural to the coffee planters who compose the major portion of the population, and journey from their fincas to the casinos, restaurants, and golf courses. In El Salvador the traveler becomes acquainted with a monetary unit new to him, the colon, the value of which is about 40 cents in American money.

There are no regular tour services in San Salvador as yet, but excursions are arranged by the hotels.

St. Joseph, Mich., Spa Is Host to War Workers

Officials of the sulphur springs at St. Joseph, Mich., popular with health seekers the year around, are reporting a steady, midwinter influx of war workers and other busy civilians who are taking vacations now. The city's proximity to large midwestern metropolitan areas, more than adequate interstate transportation, and the spa's well known springs and recreational facilities are three factors accounting for the resort's winter time patronage.

Please describe Sea Island, Ga.

The coastal Georgia resorts of the Sea Islands are popular this winter with civilian vacationists and service men alike. In a subtropical setting there are six resort islands, each with individual charm and historic background: St. Catherine's, Sapelo, Cumberland, Blackbeard, Jekyll, and St. Simon's. All share in the historical period of the first Spanish coastal settlement of missions and garrisons, made in 1568. Cascoigne bluff was headquarters for the British warships in 1736, and from there were shipped the live oak timbers used in building the Constitution.

On St. Simon's Island is Fort Frederica national monument [project], commemorating the largest British fortification ever built in America. In 1742 the battle of Bloody Marsh was fought on the island. St. Simon's was the island on which Aaron Burr sought refuge after his duel with Alexander Hamilton. In the old towh of Frederica, of plantation life and antebellum homes, are the ancient oaks under which John and Charles Wesley preached to the settlers.

Blackbeard Island is where the notorious pirate is said to have hidden his loot. Jekyll Island is on the grounds where the last slave cargo was unloaded. The Jekyll Boat club is open to winter visitors and the visitors' club is listing all vacation and recreation opportunities for wartime visitors. Near by is the Georgia Santo Domingo state park, a recreational preserve, open to the public.

I am going to visit a relative stationed with the army in California and wonder if it's possible to go skiing in Yosemite park this winter.
G. W. S.

Take your skis with you! Yosemite national park is open this winter and accommodations are available at two lodges. The skating rink is open and at Badger pass the ski house is welcoming visitors and the ski school and upski are operating. Transportation is provided by main line rail and bus services and the Yosemite transportation system.

New Snowfall at Lake Placid Is Ski-Perfect

Snow news is good news from the Adirondacks this week. Lake Placid, N. Y., had a new four inch fall of powder snow over a packed base of 14 to 16 inches and the winter sports conditions in the community are said to be the best in many years.

A railroad and three bus lines are coöperating to transport gasless and carless skiers and skaters to the sports center. The Scott's Cobble, Fawn Ridge, and Mount Whitney ski tows are in daily operation, the ski trails and downhill runs are in excellent condition, and there is skating indoors in the Olympic arena and outdoors on the Mirror Lake rink. Tobogganists are scooting down the municipal slide. The horse and sleigh combination is doing double duty, as a means of transportation and as sheer fun.

War Activities Occupy Society of Palm Beach

PALM BEACH, FLA.

Palm Beach continues in its pleasant grooves, the only disturbing element being the gentle wind that ruffles the palm fronds and tumbles the short hair of feminine shoppers on Worth avenue. The social groundhog certainly saw its shadow last Tuesday, for it was a perfect sparkling jewel of a day, but that doesn't mean the season will turn drear. There's no dancing in the streets, it is true, but this flower-gemmed resort is the setting for numerous luncheon, dinner, and cocktail parties every day of the week. Golf is also popular. Daylight hours are increasingly popular for entertaining, as night driving here is not only hazardous but extremely spooky.

Resorters are doing more plain and fancy reading than in many a season, and various games are enjoying a vogue. Even flinch and rook.

War work is uppermost in the minds and endeavors of most social leaders. This week a committee from Volunteers for Victory took the mobile canteen for the third time to Camp Higgins and served refreshments to the men stationed there. Afterward singing was enjoyed in the little recreation hall largely built thru the generosity of Palm Beach residents.

• • •

John Doctoroff, Chicago painter, has arrived in Palm Beach. At present he is staging a one-man show in the lounge of the Palm Beach hotel on Sunrise avenue, where he is staying. This show includes 16 of his best known canvases. Lt. Warren Pershing was seen the other afternoon viewing the portrait of his father, Gen. John Pershing, which Mr. Doctoroff painted in Washington at the Walter Reed hospital. The eloquent likeness of the late Edwin Markham [Man with the Hoe] was in direct contrast to a portrait of a pretty young girl in a white dress, with ruffles edged in blue. The artist's uncanny ability to depict character without the neglect of a single detail in the picture is evident in each canvas.

Mr. Doctoroff has been catching up on his golf, playing with John and William Thatcher of Chicago.

Mrs. William Alexander Yager entertained with a dinner at the Everglades club Tuesday evening preceding the backgammon tournament. Among her guests were Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Pardridge, Mr. and Mrs. LeRay Berdeau, Mrs. Frank Vernon Skiff, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Harper, Mrs. Frank Osgood Butler, Mrs. R. H. Ritchie, Mrs. Paul Healy, and Mrs. Edward J. White.

Mr. and Mrs. O. Nelson Tevander gave a luncheon at the Bath and Tennis club, having a number of Chicagoans in the party. They included Mr. and Mrs. Charles Strout Davis, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Vogelback, Mr. and Mrs. Harry N. Gifford, Ensign and Mrs. Harry N. Gifford Jr., Mrs. Ross J. Beatty, Mrs. William F. Bode, and Mrs. Samuel Taylor Jr.

Lady of the House

Loafer's Lore.

Several inquiries about meat loaf tricks [rashly mentioned Jan. 10] have come in, so I'll let a few of them out of the bag. In our hot pursuit of vitamins, calories, ergs, and what not, we have to sort of dramatize this cookery business—use our imaginations—to get any fun out of it.

First there's the meatless meat loaf [lots of them are]. Throw in an egg, if it's the day for the egg.

Navy loaf. That's beans. But maybe you knew that.

Ring-around-a-rosy has a little rosy hamburger in the center of a big noodle ring. Whoever is IT for the day gets the hamburger.

Puss-in-a-corner is built on the square meat pie style, with a meat ball in one corner. It's great fun to chose corners and see who gets the ball.

Polka dotted loaf has hard-cooked eggs, potatoes, sausage, anything that's round [no baloney], baked in it. When it is sliced the dots look real cute.

Whirligig is done pinwheel fashion. It is pretty when cut and really has ham in it—sometimes.

Three-decker is a three-in-one dinner. I'm turning this one over to the frozen cooked meal industry, so you can have it "hot off the ice" a few minutes after you get home from the factory.

Stuffed loaf. You'll be surprised how many stuffers you can find. So will the folks you have for dinner.

Topsy-turvey, inside-out, outside-in . . . but it's a free for all; so let loose your imagination. Camouflage! Its wonderful!

But maybe you'd rather cook carp. That's another thing we "imported." I've some 30-odd recipes, including one for cooking the roe and trying to make you think it's caviar, but the net result is still CARP.

• • •

How goes the bread slicing? Does the loaf get a list to port or starboard after the first two or three slices? Mine either has an overhang, or an undershot like a bulldog's jaw. I've decided to go back to mother's way: Holding the big crusty loaf against her and slicing horizontally. Big slices to be spread thick with butter and jam, or brown sugar, and devoured before the after-school frolic in the snow.

Week's Events of Chicagoland Women's Clubs

Many and precious are Illinois' memories of the tall, gaunt prairie lawyer, Lincoln, with his homely wisdom and great heart, and this week finds the Chicago Woman's club and other groups recalling them in Lincoln birthday anniversary programs.

"Victory for Brotherhood" is the slogan chosen this year for the annual Lincoln brotherhood breakfast at the woman's club. The meeting is to be held at 11:45 o'clock Friday in Zeisler hall. A panel of three distinguished speakers will be presented: Rabbi Louis L. Mann of Sinai congregation, the Rev. Edward V. Cardinal of Loyola university, and Dr. James M. Yard, director of the Chicago Round Table of Christians and Jews. Setting the key for the day, Dr. Arturo Fallico will speak at 10:45 o'clock, on "Laws of the Spirit."

Other starred programs posted at the club for the week are a lecture on "Guidance of Youth in War Time," by Miss Ethel Kawin, lecturer at the University of Chicago and guidance director for the Glencoe schools, at 11 o'clock Wednesday, and an 11 o'clock meeting tomorrow at which Isobel Gates of Oregon, director of the Christian Friendliness commission, will speak on "The Japanese Evacuation and Its Results" and May Estelle Cooke will give "An Analysis of the Tolan Report on the Evacuation."

At the Chicago Woman's aid a special Lincoln day program will be given at noon Friday, with Otto Eisenschiml as the guest speaker. Mr. Eisenschiml is the author of several books on Lincoln. His talk at the Aid will be on "The War and Racial Problems." Because of the social significance of his subject, the meeting is to be opened to interested groups. Egon Wiener, the sculptor, is to give a talk and demonstration on "Modern Art as Reflected in Sculpture," at a noon breakfast Tuesday.

• • •

The Colonial Coverlet Guild of America is meeting for lunch at noon Wednesday in the Wedgewood room at Marshall Field's. R. E. Pattison Kline is to be the speaker and his subject will be "The Eternal Lincoln." Miss Lomira Perry has charge of the program, and Mrs. A. C. Dallach will preside.

• • •

Friday is the day upon which Chicago section of the National Council of Jewish Women will close its 1942 earning fund drive. A gala musical and tea will be given at 1:45 o'clock in the Gold Coast room at the Drake hotel, with Mrs. William H. Sahud, president, and Mrs. Arthur Buchband, chairman of the drive, heading the receiving line. The artists to be heard are the famous baritone, Giacomo Rimini, Lorraine Tommerson, lyric soprano, and Thomas Brennan, tenor.

Tomorrow at Chicago section headquarters, the public affairs department will present a symposium on "Racial Discrimination and the Winning of the War" at a general meeting at 1:45 o'clock. The speakers will be Dr. James M. Yard; Dr. W. Gunther Plaut of Washington Boulevard temple; the Rev. Father Harold Kenny, program director of the Catholic Youth organization, and Dr. Archibald Carey of the Woodlawn Methodist church.

Three important committee meetings are posted at the Woman's City club, the first of which will be a foods and merchandise session at 10:30 o'clock Wednesday, with Mrs. Wilbur E. Fribley presiding. Food rationing problems and the setting and maintaining of ceiling prices will be studied. Continuing its survey of governmental administration in Chicago, Miss Mary Louise Ramsey's municipal citizenship committee will meet at 7:30 o'clock Thursday evening. The public education committee, headed by Mrs. H. C. Dormitzer, will report on aspects of the election campaign affecting the public schools at 1:30 o'clock Friday.

• • •

The 1st district of the Illinois State Nurses' association has a recruitment program planned for its meeting Tuesday at the John B. Murphy Memorial building, 50 East Erie street. Two motion pictures on nursing education, "R. N." and "No Greater Glory" will be shown. Miss Dorothea Thompson is the district president.

Dr. Chang Lok-chen, the Chinese consul in Chicago, will speak before the Social Economics club and its guests at a luncheon meeting at 12:30 o'clock Tuesday in the assembly room of the Republic building, 209 South State street. Mrs. Lillian Brodahl Smith will give a program of character interpretations.

• • •

A Pan-American day meeting is scheduled by the "I Will" club for 11:30 o'clock Tuesday at the Chicago galleries, 215 North Michigan avenue. Mrs. Luther C. Snyder, president, and Mrs. Fred Bracken, education chairman, are in charge. They have arranged for a buffet luncheon.

At the top of the sketch is a white piqué overblouse of the weskit variety. It has a three button front fastening, meeting a deep V neckline.

The plaid cotton shirt, of the carelessly casual type, combines comfort and smartness. The short, notched lapel blends into a graceful collar. The only concession to trimming is the double flap pocket accented with a single button matching the blue, green, or brown check of the blouse. A soft, brown, box plaited skirt made from 100% virgin Shetland wool forms a perfect companion piece.

• • •

The white organdy blouse is a thoroly delectable confection at any time, but this one is further enhanced by ruffled eyelet embroidery, slightly shirred around the lapel collar, down the front, and atop the cuffs of the short sleeves.

Striped chambray is the medium used for the fourth blouse of this group, a cool and ingenious one. The ingenuity is marked by the double fold set across the material to form a double yoke. Buttons placed in the center of the fold form a striking decorative effect.

The white batiste blouse with the short puffed sleeves is a gaily youthful version every one likes to wear. There are three rows of narrow, ruffled lace to form a vestee effect around the front closing and the bound neckline. The sleeves are edged with three rows of lace. This is an ideal blouse to wear with a separate skirt, such as the umbrella type illustrated.

It is every mother's duty to tell her daughter physical facts. How much better that she learn them from you, rather than from girls her own age. In feminine hygiene, facts may be distorted, or wholly untrue. As a result, many brides use over-strong solutions of acids for the douche which can actually burn, scar and even desensitize delicate tissue.

Today such risks are needless. Science has given womankind a safe—yet amazingly powerful—liquid for the douche, Zonite. So powerful is Zonite, it kills instantly all germs and bacteria with which it comes in contact. Deodorizes—by actually destroying odors, leaving no telltale odor of its own. Protects personal daintiness. Yet! Zonite is non-caustic, non-poisonous, safe for delicate tissues. Over 20,000,000 bottles already bought. The Stamp Collector

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, but not value. The column in this page contains offers to buy and sell. Include a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

A discussion of the terms used to describe stamps without perforations was started in a recent issue of THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE. In that article the writer tried to show the lack of a word to describe stamps as they were originally issued from 1840 to 1854. The only words used to describe such stamps today are negative forms of the word "perforate" which itself did not come into use in connection with stamps until the last mentioned date. If we assume that nothing can be done about this matter at this late date we are practically forced to call the stamps "imperforate," or "unperforated."

Many collectors consider these words as synonymous while others insist that there is a world of difference. John H. Latta, writing in the Bureau Specialist, gives an interesting study of the words and their derivation and comes to the conclusion that imperforate is the word to use except in those cases where the stamps actually have been de-perforated, in which case the word unperforated more nearly explains their status.

This writer fully agrees with the authority cited above and thinks that the hobby will be improved if the word imperforate is used to describe stamps which are without perforations. However the English language is so complex that it is hard to find an example of a word using the prefix "un-," in the sense of indicating a reversal of action, as "coil—uncoil," without finding several examples close by which should be similar but which are exactly the opposite. Thus "unpacked" follows the reversal form if it is a suitcase, but is the opposite if it relates to unpacked earth. "Unplaited" indicates that the plaits have been removed; "unpuckered," that the puckers have been smoothed out, but "unpainted," "unpriced," and "unpaved" do not have anything to do with a reversal of action but relate to an original state or condition. One peculiar example is found in the word "unplant" which expresses a reversal of action when used in that form but relates to an original state when use in the form "unplanted."

Perhaps the best way to obtain the desired result is to see that standard publications edit out the word "unperforated" wherever it occurs. Editing would prevent the use of such atrocities as "imperforated" and "unperforated," both of which have appeared in recent months.

Five cent pieces of the old alloy were coined at Philadelphia and at Denver from January until May, 1942. None were coined at San Francisco. The coinage of 5 cent pieces was discontinued during the months of June, July, August, and September, while trials were being made to provide an alloy containing no nickel, and resumed in October after the adoption of the copper-silver-manganese alloy. During the last three months of the year the new alloy was in use at Philadelphia and at San Francisco but not at Denver. From this it will be seen that there are four varieties of 1942 5 cent pieces for the collector—nickel from Philadelphia [no mint mark], and from Denver [mint mark "D" at end of the building on the reverse of the coin], and silver from Philadelphia and San Francisco, with the large "P" or "S," as the case may be, above the dome of the building.

Expert Tells Dietary Value of Vitamin A

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1943: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Many persons do a good deal of talking and thinking about vitamins without possessing a clear knowledge of these food essentials, their functions, and best sources. Most of us realize there's a new importance attached to vitamin knowledge now that the prospect of limited food supplies and sharply limited variety of edibles looms.

Believing a summary of the latest and best available information on vitamins will be helpful to most homemakers, I plan to devote this column and the next few Sunday articles to the subject. Beginning at the beginning, let's consider vitamin A.

What is vitamin A?

Vitamin A is that food essential which aids the body in normal growth and development, promotes the health of the respiratory system, the eyes and skin. It is essential to good muscle development, and important in reproduction and lactation.

Is vitamin A difficult to provide in the diet?

This is the easiest of all vitamins to provide in ample supply, for vitamin A occurs in many common foods. There's really little excuse for deficiency in vitamin A, and there is no severe deficiency of it in this country, altho there are many cases of mild deficiency, due to carelessness in diet.

Foods Which Contain Vitamin A.

Here are some of the foods which contain rich supplies of vitamin A: Milk, eggs [yolk], livers, kidneys, butter [some margarines are fortified with A], green and yellow vegetables and fruits, such as watercress, spinach, green beans, chard, beet tops, parsley, dandelion and mustard greens, green cabbage, lettuce, carrots, sweet potatoes [the yellower, the better], oranges, peaches, yellow cheese. Fish liver oils are excellent sources of vitamin A, which is why these oils are given to babies and young children who aren't able to eat enough of grownup foods containing this vitamin.

Severe deficiency of vitamin A is occurring now among the peoples of occupied countries where the best foods are snatched for the enemy forces. Severe deficiencies lead to diseases of the eye which eventually result in blindness, if unchecked. Lack of vitamin A also exposes the respiratory system to the ravages of infection, including pneumonia. It results in stunted growth among children. Skin diseases are another result of severe deficiency in vitamin A. Sterility or inability to carry thru a successful pregnancy may be caused by lack of vitamin A, too.

We are more familiar with mild deficiencies, altho there is no reason why these should be tolerated. Mild deficiency in vitamin A reduces our resistance to colds and infections, may cause "night blindness" and minor eye disturbances, may impair the health of the teeth and bones of children.

• • •

Just how much vitamin A is necessary in the diet to maintain normal health? Scientists discuss vitamins in terms of international units, and recommend 1,500 units for children under 1 year, 2,000 to 4,500 for children from 1 to 12, and 5,000 to 6,000 for young people and normal adults. Pregnant and nursing women may need as many as 8,000 units of vitamin A in order to provide themselves and their babies with adequate amounts.

But how are we to know whether or not we are getting enough vitamin A in our diets without referring to complex tables understood only by persons trained in nutrition?

Here's how to tell: Do you eat an egg a day, or at least three or four a week?

Do you eat a leafy green vegetable in salad every day?

Do you drink orange juice every morning, or at least several times a week? [This gives you your daily supply of vitamin C, too.]

Do you eat liver or kidneys, carefully prepared, once a week?

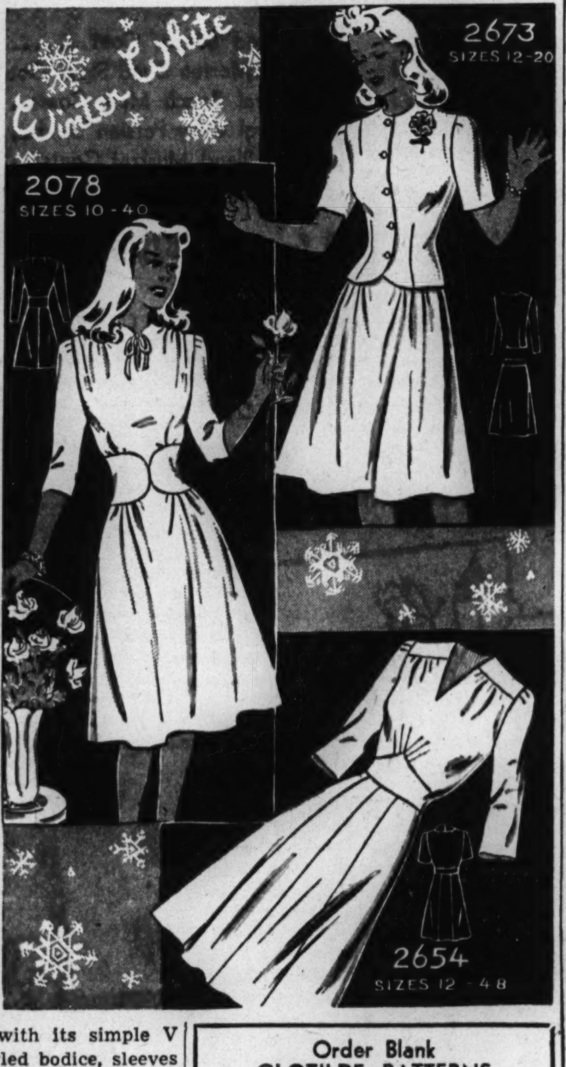
Patterns by Clotilde



"Winter White is one of the loveliest of the current fashions. There's something about a snowy wool or wool jersey, or even a rayon jersey, which makes one feel festive at little teas, matinées, and informal evening dates. These three models are especially beautiful.

Style No. 2078 is a "midriff dress" with molded waistline, simple bodice, casual sleeves, and moderately full skirt. There's a choice of necklines: As shown, or turned back in little revers.

Style No. 2673 is a two piecer consisting of fitted jacket top and skirt with unpressed fullness in the front, plain in back. There's an alternative: Make the skirt in soft plaits for a flat front. The sketch shows what a bit of costume jewelry can do for the bodice.

Style No. 2654, with its simple V neckline, softly styled bodice, sleeves either short or in bracelet length, and gored skirt is one which may be worn by many figures. The pattern includes provisions for two collars, not sketched, a shawl collar and a scarf neckline.

Style No. 2078 is designed for sizes 10, 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20 and 36, 38, and 40 inch bust measurements. Size 16 requires 3¼ yards of 39 inch fabric.

Style No. 2673 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20. Size 16 requires 3⅛ yards of 39 inch material.

Style No. 2654 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20 and 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, and 48 inch bust measurements. Size 36 requires 3⅛ yards of 39 inch fabric.

Each pattern costs 10 cents, plus 2 cents to cover mailing cost.

According to Culbertson

[Copyright: 1943: By Ely Culbertson.]

The question of when and when not to sacrifice against an adverse slam is perhaps the most "ticklish" one in duplicate bridge. In rubber bridge when the opponents bid a slam and you realize that to save against it would cost you at least 900 points, there is little "percentage" in outbidding them—the comparatively few points that may be saved are inconsequential, and there is always the chance that the slam contract may be defeated. In duplicate, however, any saving is worth while; for example, you may get a much better match-point score from going down seven tricks [1,300 points, not vulnerable] than from allowing the opponents to make about 1,400 points for a small slam.

The danger is, of course, that you may go down the contemplated number of tricks, but that it may develop that the opponents never could have made their contract! The "sacrificing" North-South team in the following hand was not only a bit disgusted, but extremely sheepish when the true facts became known.

East dealer.
East-West vulnerable.
Match-point duplicate.

♥ 9 5
♦ Q J 7 6 5 2
♣ 9 6

WEST
♠ J 10 7 3
♥ Q J 10 6
♦ A 8
♣ K 8 5

EAST
♠ K 6 4 2
♥ A K 8 4 3 2

♥ 7
♦ K 10 9 4 3
♣ Q J 10 3 2

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 heart	2 diamonds	2 hearts	3 diamonds
3 spades	4 clubs	4 spades	Pass
6 hearts	Pass	Pass	7 diamonds
Double	Pass	Pass	Pass

The first round of bidding requires no comment. On the second round, East made a rather peculiar bid in showing his miserable four card spade suit before rebidding his good six card heart suit—but it cannot be denied that his action turned out beautifully. South, not vulnerable against vulnerable opponents, had been building up a sacrificing position from the start and now when East bid spades, showed his other suit, clubs, so as to give North all the information possible and let him eventually decide whether a sacrifice was in order.

West's bidding was perfect thruout.

North, after having supported diamonds on the first round, properly retired over West's four spades. North was not averse to letting the opponents play at a mere game, and hoped that they would go no further. At the same time he resolved to save against a slam, if necessary.

East's optimistic jump to six hearts put South somewhat on the spot, but he solved this to his own satisfaction, if not to the best advantage, by passing and putting the final decision to his partner. North, unfortunately, made a bad guess. He figured that the six heart bid, if allowed to play, would make and return the vulnerable opponents' 1,430 points. As against this a seven diamond sacrifice contract, even if it went down seven tricks, would give the opponents only 1,300 points. His mathematics were unimpeachable, but his judgment proved disastrous. His actual seven diamond bid was defeated only 900 points, but this was terrific considering that the six heart contract could not possibly have been fulfilled. The combination of the Q-9-5 of spades in the North hand and the A-8 in the South would have made it impossible for East to hold his spade losers to one trick.

And this leads us to an important observation: Sometimes defensive potentialities hang on cards as low as nine spots! If North's spade holding had been Q-7-5 instead of Q-9-5, the six heart contract would have been iron clad and North's decision to sacrifice would have turned out beautifully. I do not mean to imply that as a general rule decisions can be made on such hair-splitting considerations as the difference between a nine and a seven. But I do say that would-be sacrificers should give the most careful thought to all possibilities, however imponderable. In this case, with West supporting spades, it was not out of the question for North to attach added value to his Q-9 combination, and had he done so, the result on this particular board would have been reversed—East-West's top would have gone to North-South.

THE Strange Woman

Retail Price of Both Books, $3.75 in the Publisher's Edition

BEN AMES WILLIAMS' 700-PAGE, $2.75 Best-Selling Novel of a "Maine Cleopatra" as evil as she was beautiful!

JENNY HAGER was so fascinating to all men that when she was only four years old she caused dashing, gay-Lothario Lt. Carruthers to elope with her mother! She drove her father, Big Tim Hager, to drown himself in rum, in fear of his own unholy desire for her! But as a child-bride, she brought banker Isaiah Poster a new zest for living—for all his seventy years!

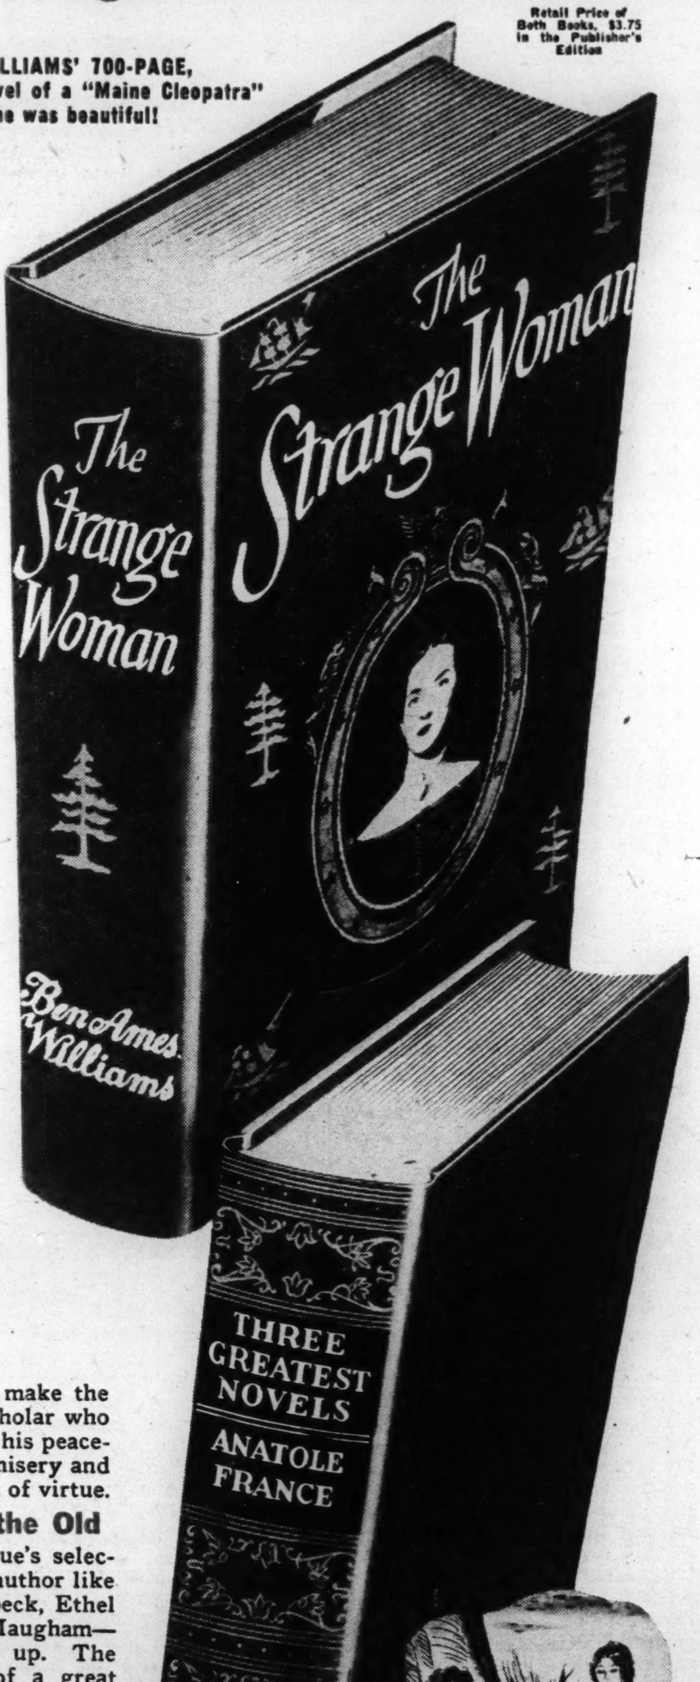
A strange excitement shone in Jenny's eyes whenever she saw pain inflicted—a passion which drove her to do strange things under its impulse. To Ephraim Poster, Isaiah's son, she showed her true nature more naked and shameless and merciless than death itself! For why would she taunt Eph to kill his father—then jeer at him for a coward when he accidentally caused the old man's death?

"Every Woman Is a Wanton!"

Yes, she was more than a match for Ephraim, who had once boasted to his friend John Evered that "he saw a wanton in every pretty woman he met, and usually found it, too!" Eph tried to tell John the truth about Jenny. But the truth was beyond belief—and John, too, fell under her witch-like spell. Who wouldn't—after he had spent a winter's night under a Cape Cod haystack with her?

But John was different. Jenny loved him and their four sons—until she deceived even him with pious Elder Pittridge, to whom she whispered, "You're really good, aren't you? I like making you do things you think are wicked. It torments you so."

In The Strange Woman you'll meet an amazing human character at the heart of a rich, gaudy, full-bodied novel—and a character you'll long remember!



505 PAGES OF WITTY, WICKEDLY SATIRICAL GENIUS:

and 3 GREATEST NOVELS OF ANATOLE FRANCE

IN addition to receiving free THE STRANGE WOMAN you ALSO get this handsomely-bound book containing not one, but THREE daringly frank and hilarious novels by a French writer completely unique in literature—ANATOLE FRANCE! All three novels are absolutely unabridged and unexpurgated and translated by leading authorities from the original French. And there are many illustrations and page decorations by foremost artists.

Here are pages to shock your sensibilities, to make you laugh aloud, to make you contemplate mankind's strange behavior. Read Penguin Island—the story of how an overzealous but near-sighted monk baptized a colony of penguins, mistaking them for human beings—and how the penguins then proceeded to become civilized in what were sometimes all-too-human ways! Similarly, in Revolt of the Angels, you will find that when angels descend too near the company of men, their behavior is often scandalously far from angelic!

And in The Crime of Sylvestre Bonnard, probably France's best-known novel, you will make the acquaintance of a charming, lovable old scholar who by strange circumstance was forced to leave his peaceful, sheltered life and enter the world of misery and evil—and become a monster, not of vice, but of virtue.

The Best of the New—AND of the Old

Musical Shows Predominant on Chicago Stages

'Student Prince' Opens Tonight for 4 Weeks

By Cecil Smith.

The downtown theaters are full of musical entertainment these days. If you like music with your drama, you will do well to take advantage of current opportunities, for all present auguries indicate that the months of March and April will bring nothing for devotees of the lyric stage.

Ann Pennington.

This week, however, the choice is varied. "The Student Prince," which stays one of the best romantic operettas no matter how many times you may see it, begins an engagement of four weeks at the Selwyn theater tonight, with Everett Marshall in the rôle of Dr. Engel. The Gilbert and Sullivan troupe at the Studebaker, in its last week, adds "Patience" and "Ruddigore" to a repertory already rich in Savoy classics. And "Lady in the Dark," the queen of contemporary musical plays, has two weeks left in its record smashing stand at the Civic Opera house.

The continuing popular love for "The Student Prince" proves that Hitlerism has not been able to crush out the romantic illusion traditionally associated with Old Heidelberg, its roistering students and its pretty barmaids. Far from undermining interest in this pre-Nazi musical tale, the war seems to have enhanced its appeal. Originally the Messrs. Shubert intended to split the allotted four weeks at the Selwyn equally between "The Student Prince" and "Blossom Time." But when nearly all the advance ticket orders and inquiries were focused upon "The Student Prince," the Shuberts decided to devote all their reserved time at the Selwyn to that operetta.

INGENUE

Most of the ingenue leads in the Gilbert and Sullivan repertory at the Studebaker theater are sung by June Winters. The coming week is the last one of the engagement.

[Bruno of Hollywood Photo.]

The fact that "Blossom Time" evokes far less widespread interest than "The Student Prince" rates as wonderful news to this department. "Blossom Time" is a sticky ooze of sentimentality, with Franz Schubert's simple tunes forced into a dramatic context to which they are ill suited; and the annual duty of reviewing a "Blossom Time" revival has always been one of the least attractive chores of a drama critic.

• • •

"The Student Prince," on the other hand, is something else again. It has life and spirit and color; its jubilant joie de vivre protects it against any overdose of sentimentality. While its characters and scene are undoubtedly highly fictionalized, they are much more believable than the maudlin and false portrait of Schubert presented in "Blossom Time." And Sigmund Romberg, left to his own devices, composed considerably more stageworthy music than Schubert, whose inability to write effectively for the theater is agreed upon by all musical historians and scholars.

The cast of "The Student Prince" contains many singers, actors, and comics who have appeared here in various operettas before. Mr. Marshall shares the chief singing assignments with Frank Hornaday as Karl Franz and Barbara Scully as Kathie. The male chorus also contributes lustily to such excellent pieces of musical extroversion as the famous drinking song and "To the Inn We're Marching." Other featured members of the cast are Detmar Poppen, Nina Verala, Harry K. Morton, Zella Russell, Victor Morley, Lorraine Bridges, and—returning from a brief spell of obscurity—Ann Pennington, whose dimpled knees made history in the "Ziegfeld Follies" of other years.

Gilbert and Sullivan's "Patience" will be staged Thursday night at the Studebaker theater by the members of the Boston Comic Opera company. On April 23, 1881, "Patience, or Bun-does she look like? Yes, yes, we'll come."

UNIDENTIFIED WOMAN

Agnew crumpled down on the stairway and began to cry. Thalia said so softly her voice was like a chill little wind: "Is she dead?"

Hollis, staring at Bessie, didn't seem to hear. Michael put his arm around Victoria.

Bessie turned from the telephone. "O, yes," she said, huskily. "She's dead. She was murdered. But it can't be Clistie. They say it's a young woman, in her 20's. An unidentified woman. Only—only they say she's wearing Clistie's dress."

Agnew put his head up, choked back a sob and said: "But where is Clistie?"

Nobody could reply to that. Bessie looked all around the hall slowly, at each face, as if seeking the answer. When she reached Victoria her dark eyes changed.

She said in an appalled way: "Good heavens. And your wedding day tomorrow!"

They all had to go to Ponte Verde to the police station. Hollis, looking ill and pale, explained it briefly.

The unidentified woman had floated downstream toward Ponte Verde where an early fisherman had seen the body, had rowed near enough to see that it wasn't just a brown log, curiously limp, floating along there, turning and twisting sluggishly with the current. He had towed the body to shore and called the police. This had happened while the men were searching the pine woods only a mile or two upstream for Clistie.

There hadn't been time for an autopsy but the police were convinced that it was murder. "They—they said she was strangled," said Hollis. "They don't know who she is, and as soon as they heard about Clistie—that is, that a woman was missing here, they said we'd have to see the body they'd found."

"It can't be Clistie's dress," said Bessie as if debating it with herself. "It's brown lace with a blue ribbon—but how on earth—No! It simply can't be Clistie's dress!"

"Clistie made it herself," said Thalia softly. "There isn't likely to be another dress like it."

"She was wearing a dressing gown when she went downstairs," said Victoria. "An old green dressing gown. And turquoise satin evening slippers."

"We'd better look," said Michael, "and see if the brown lace dress is still there."

Only the Brown Dress Missing

But it wasn't. Victoria and Bessie went with him. Clistie's few clothes were in orderly little ranks in the wardrobe; each one familiar, nothing added and only the new brown dress missing.

Bessie said at last, heavily, "Well, we'd better dress and go to Ponte Verde, and insist on the police coming back with us to look for Clistie."

"Are they sure it isn't Clistie they found in the river?" asked Michael quietly. And Bessie said, shaking her head, "It isn't Clistie. This woman's blonde."

Michael, sensibly, suggested breakfast. Jody and Ernestine could prepare it while they dressed. After all they couldn't go to Ponte Verde dressed as they were.

"You mean undressed," said Agnew with a rather sickly grin. "We look like people in a shipwreck; except Thalia." The pretense at a grin failed. He said soberly, "Of course you realize that at any moment Clistie will come walking in with a perfectly sensible reason for being away."

But they had dressed and had a quick breakfast, and were ready to start for the little county seat and still Clistie had not turned up and there was no word of her. The sun was far up, of course, by that time. It was a warm, bright day with the sky blue, and the river bright and sparkling with gold, and the black and white silence of the previous night gone as if it had never been.

They went together, with Hollis driving the long town car. At the last moment Bessie had an argument with Agnew who didn't want to go. "We have to go," she snapped. "The police want the woman identified. They say we all have to look at her. And if it's Clistie's dress——"

"You oughtn't to have admitted Clistie had a dress like that," said Agnew sulkily.

"Why on earth not! We reported that Clistie was missing——" Bessie lost patience and stamped her high heeled slipper. "O, get in, for heaven's sake, Agnew. I don't want to go any more than you do."

Michael said soberly, "We'll get this over with and bring the police back with us to make a real search for her."

The Ponte Verde police station was in one corner of the courthouse. Victoria remembered it all too well. As they drove into the little town and turned the familiar corner and the small, solid, red brick courthouse, overgrown with bougainvillea, rose before them, she had a very unpleasant sensation of repeated experience. They'd made her come to the courthouse many times during the investigation following Henry's death. The coroner's inquest had been held there, too. Michael had the same thing in his mind for, as the car stopped, he said in her ear, "Brace up, Vicky. It won't be like that."

And as a matter of fact, it wasn't. In a queer way it was worse.

For they had to look at the woman who'd been taken out of the river.

But it wasn't Clistie.

It was a young woman, with wet, short hair that, dry, would be very light. She was not pretty then. But she had been pretty only a few hours before. There were blue marks at her throat. Victoria shut her eyes. There were two or three state troopers in the bare little room. One of them took her arm in a hard grip. "Don't faint," he said. "Just a moment—will you look again? Have you ever seen this woman before?"

"No," said Victoria. "No." And immediately was assailed by some fleeting recollection. It was nobody she knew; yet she had an odd notion that somewhere, not long ago, she had seen her face. She opened her eyes again. And this time saw the dress the woman was wearing.

It, too, was wet and draggled. But it was Clistie's dress or one exactly like it. Limp brown lace and chiffon, torn and wet; turquoise ribbon, now stained and damp. Oddly the girl was wearing one brown street oxford.

"Is it Miss Forbes' dress?"

Thalia however looked puzzled. "It seems to me I've seen her somewhere," she said, "but I can't think where."

"What is her name?"

"But I don't know," said Thalia, opening her pansy eyes wide.

"It is Clistie's dress," said Bessie heavily. "How do you suppose——"

No one answered.

"Will you come this way, please," said the state trooper, and pulled the sheet again over the young, tragic thing on the table and led them to another room. An office, this time, with sunlight streaming in the windows, and chairs brought for them.

"Here is Mr. Beasley," said the state trooper. "The state's attorney. He would like to ask you a few questions."

"Beasley!" said Michael. "I thought it was the other fellow, John Campbell."

Beasley, entering, heard it. "John," he said smiling, "is in the army now. But I'll endeavor to fill his place. Now, then, if you don't mind answering a few questions——"

The new state's attorney was older than John Campbell. He was a thin, dark, suspicious looking man of 50 or so whose eyes were remarkably black and sharp in his yellow, malarial face. His name was Eliot Beasley. His lined, long face wore the slightly sinister and mournful look of a bloodhound. He questioned them quickly. When had Clistie disappeared? When had they last seen her wearing that dress? Were they sure it was Miss Forbes' dress? Did any of them know the girl who'd been found in the river?

Thalia said, again, that she believed she had seen her, perhaps on the street; she wasn't sure.

"I think I've seen her somewhere, too," said Victoria. "But I don't know where."

They questioned her about that. And then, at length, about the scream she had heard and her talk with Clistie. About the length of time she had waited for Clistie to return, and about the search for her.

It did not actually take very long. Certainly it added little to anybody's stock of information. It was Clistie's dress. The dead girl could have been put into the river in the vicinity of the pine woods. She could have screamed.

And no one knew anything of Clistie.

Beasley let them go very soon. A police car, he said, would follow. Obviously the fact that the dead girl was wearing Clistie's dress augmented his interest in Clistie's whereabouts. But that was all.

"Don't look like that, Vicky," said Michael, sitting beside her, on their way home. "It must have been over very quickly—poor little kid."

The police car arrived almost as soon as they did. But Clistie had not returned and there had been no word of her. Jody met them at the door and told them Judson and his two assistants were still looking for her.

It was a young woman, with wet, short hair.

For Clistie or the Missing Dress?

The four state policemen began to organize a systematic search, one which ignored the search that had already been made, and began with the house. Nobody was very clear, however, as to whether the police were looking for Clistie or for evidence concerning the murdered girl—wearing Clistie's dress.

It was the beginning of a strange and unreal day. Victoria drifted out onto the terrace and glanced down at the familiar—yet that morning unreal and unfamiliar—view of the river between the arches of live oaks and Spanish moss. Beyond the gardens men were then searching the pine woods—working slowly along the banks. Down below her was the pier where Henry had been found that late December morning. Henry, who had died in the river, too, as that girl had died—who had been wearing Clistie's dress.

And only the day before John Campbell had said, again, that Henry was murdered. He had also quite frankly warned her. Not of any specific thing; not in any way that had seemed, then, credible. But he had warned her. He had talked of money in a way that seemed to associate his warning with her own inheritance. And then he had said he was sorry he'd talked to her. He'd told her to forget it.

Bessie and Hollis were talking down at the other end of the terrace, where Victoria and Michael had talked the night before. Suddenly it occurred to her that she must explain to Bessie. She crossed the terrace toward Bessie and Hollis, and Hollis was trying to make Bessie understand that he couldn't stay at the house and help with the search because he had to get back to camp.

Bessie was protesting; an official leave, limited to hours, meant nothing to her when she wanted Hollis. "I'll just telephone to Bruce," she was saying. "I'll explain to him. I'll tell him why you can't come back to camp. I want to tell him about Clistie anyway."

It was Agnew eventually who restrained her, while Hollis, consulting his watch, dashed for his own small car and camp.

But Bessie telephoned to Col. Bruce Galant anyway and while at Agnew's horrified behest she did not tell the post commander that one of his soldiers, and a mere private at that, would [if she'd had her way] have overstayed his leave, she did tell him the whole story of the dead girl and Clistie's disappearance.

Victoria, following her into the hall, heard it. "——just like that, Bruce. In her green dressing gown. Walked down the stairs and disappeared. And then that poor dead girl in Clistie's new dress, and we all had to go to Ponte Verde and tell them it wasn't Clistie—No, of course we don't know who it was—Nonsense; I knew everybody Clistie knew. Clistie didn't know that girl. And Victoria thinks she heard the girl—well, scream——" Bessie's voice wavered and she went on: "I do wish you'd come. Bruce, what shall we do? And there's the wedding tomorrow——" she stopped and listened and finally hung up.

"Bruce thinks we ought to postpone the wedding," she said to Victoria. "But if Clistie comes back—and she might at any moment, you know—it does seem a pity. After all, it isn't as if we knew that poor girl. O, there's Michael——"

He came in from the driveway, looking hot and tired, and seeing the quick question in their eyes, shook his head. "No news," he said. "It's horribly hot in the woods; not a breath of air." He sat down on the lower step of the stairs and mopped his forehead.

Victoria said, "Michael, we were talking about the wedding."

He looked at her quickly. "I didn't want to bother you, Vicky." He stretched out his hand and drew her down to the stair step beside him. "What about it? If you don't want to talk about it now, we won't."

Bessie said agitatedly: "But, Michael, it's tomorrow! If we're going to postpone it, we've got to let people know right away."

Bessie, of course, didn't know what Michael really meant. Victoria said slowly, "We were talking of—of postponing it. Bruce thought it would be best."

"O," said Michael. His gray eyes searched her own intently for a moment. Then he said abruptly, "Well, I don't agree. I think the best thing to do is to put off the people who were invited. I mean call off the wedding party. But we—could be married tomorrow, just the same, Victoria. Quietly—only the family and the minister. We could cancel our plans for a trip and stay here until—until things are straightened up. That is, if we need to."

"But, Michael, last night——" began Victoria.

Bessie interrupted. "I hadn't thought of that," she said. "I suppose you're right. We can't have people here, that's flat. Not unless Clistie—if we only knew," she ended disjointedly. Michael got up.

"I've got to go back," he said. "I only came to get a drink and take back some water for the rest of them."

Victoria said unsteadily, "But I feel just the same, Michael; last night——"

"Today is—well, different."

But the situation between them was the same, thought Victoria unhappily.

"No," she began. "No, Michael. It's only Clistie——" her voice broke in spite of herself and she cried, "If anything has happened——"

"If anything has happened," said Michael, "I'd like you to be my wife." He turned to Bessie. "I think that may be the best plan. We'll see. I'm going back now." He said to Victoria, "But it's up to you. Anything you decide——" and went down the hall toward the butler's pantry.

Trying to Think —and Failing

Bessie looked at Victoria worriedly. "What do you think?" she said.

"I don't know," said Victoria uncertainly, trying to think, and failing. There were only two things she was sure of: one was, still, that she didn't love Michael enough to marry him—and wished she could. The other was that they ought to have heard from Clistie by then.

She said to Bessie wearily, "Of course we can't have people here. If Clistie—if we only knew——"

Bessie said abruptly, "In any case, I'd better let people know. What a situation! Really, I don't know——" she hesitated, thinking. "I'll write one telegram and give it and the list of addresses to the Western Union girl," she said practically.

It gave her something to do. Michael went down to the pine woods again and Bessie sat at the desk, writing telegrams and scratching them out, tapping her large, firm teeth with the pencil.

"Really, I don't think there is a precedent for this kind of thing——" and broke off abruptly to look toward the hall and listen as the telephone rang. It might be news of Clistie.

It wasn't, however. It was a reporter, said Jody, coming to the door. He wanted to ask if it was true that Miss Forbes' dress had been identified. There was a moment of silence. Then Bessie said, "Already"—with a kind of groan. "Jody, tell him we can't talk to him."

It was again like the days following Henry's death. Bessie said suddenly, "I'm not going to send any telegrams. Clistie must come back."

"But something's wrong—she wouldn't stay away like this. Please do send them, Aunt Bessie."

"Nonsense." Bessie crumpled the papers she'd been trying this and that phrase upon and thrust them into the wastebasket. "Clistie will come back. You'll see."

Thalia said, her white eyelids flickering, "You're going to be married then, Vicky, just as if—just the same?"

"No," said Victoria.

Bessie said, "Yes. Unless we—have to postpone it."

And Jody, just then, his black face old and wrinkled and tired, came back to announce lunch. A lunch that Clistie had ordered, writing it out in her neat hand.

After lunch, however, unexpectedly, Maj. John Campbell arrived.

UNIDENTIFIED WOMAN

By MIGNON G. EBERHART

(Copyright: 1943: By Mignon G. Eberhart.)

What Has Gone Before

Ten weeks have elapsed since Henry Frame was found dead in the river and Victoria Steane was suspected of his murder by John Campbell, coroner and state's attorney. Victoria had quarreled with Frame about his management of the Steane mills, in which she owned most of the stock. But the coroner's jury brought a suicide verdict after Michael Bayne, manager of a branch mill, discovered that Frame was embezzling from the business. Victoria lives with Aunt Bessie Isham and her two sons, Hollis and Agnew, and the housekeeper, Clistie Forbes. Thalia Frame, Henry's daughter, has stayed on for a visit after her father's death. At a party given by Colonel Galant at Camp Blakoe, John Campbell, now a major, talks to Victoria and tells her he is still sure that Henry Frame was murdered and warns her against more murders. He is surprised to learn that she is getting ready to marry Bayne. With the wedding only two days off, Victoria realizes she doesn't love Bayne and cannot marry him. She tells Bayne this, but Bayne asks her to think it over before refusing. Victoria hears a scream that night in the pine woods near their home, then a splash in the river. Clistie appears and promises to get Judson, the gardener, to investigate.

VICTORIA went reluctantly into her room. Clistie was right, of course; Victoria couldn't do much in the way of searching the pine woods—in a yellow chiffon dinner gown and gold sandals.

She went out on the balcony again. There was no sound anywhere. The garden, the paths, the silvered river were empty and utterly silent. The black blotch that was the pine woods was silent, too.

Had she fallen suddenly asleep and dreamed?

But she knew she hadn't. Presently there would be lights going toward the pine woods. And presently Clistie would come back. She'd better change.

She went back into her room, turned on lights, took off her slippers and dress—and went to the windows and looked again and could see nothing. But Judson would take the path from the cottage, behind the black yew hedge. She returned to her dressing room and put on slacks and a sweater and tennis shoes.

And, then, after awhile, took them off again and went to bed and couldn't stay there. She wandered to the windows and stared down at the black and white world, hushed and still—with no lights showing anywhere.

No Motion, No Lights, No Sound

She wrapped herself in the dressing gown again and went out on the balcony. Still there was no motion anywhere that she could see; no glancing lights; no voices; no sound at all.

It probably hadn't been as long as it seemed, since she'd watched Clistie go toward the stairs. She wished she'd looked at the clock. She did so then, wandering into the little dressing room, stopping to light a cigaret, nervously. She ought to have insisted, she ought to have gone herself. She ought to have done anything that was decisive—instead of prowling like a nervous cat from window to balcony and back again! What was happening in the pine woods?

She had been sitting with the little gold clock in her hand, at the dressing table. She hadn't looked at the clock at all. She looked then and it was almost 2.

How long had it been since Clistie went downstairs and why didn't she come back?

She couldn't wait any longer. She got up, put out her cigaret with jerky fingers and reached again for the slacks and sweater. As she did so Agnew opened the door and called, low voiced: "Vicky, Vicky, are you still awake?"

She went to the dressing room door and asked, "Is Clistie back?"

Agnew said, "O, there you are," and came in. He was still in pajamas. His face was so pale that the freckles stood out and he'd put on his spectacles so he looked very odd and his blond, straight hair lanky and rumpled, and his bare, bony feet and pajamas. "Where's Clistie?"

"I don't know. I've been waiting. I'm going down there."

"She didn't call Hollis," said Agnew. "I waited and waited. Then I got up, just now, and went to Hollis' room and she hadn't called him. He's in bed and asleep. He didn't hear me open the door, but I could see him there in bed, the moonlight is so bright. She didn't call Michael, either; I looked in his room, too. Vicky, she ought to have come back by now. It's been over an hour."

"O, no, it can't have been so long!"

"It is, tho. Vicky, what do you suppose——"

"Go and dress. Hurry, I'll telephone Judson's house."

"No, I will," said Agnew. "While you dress." He slid out the door again.

Victoria's hands fastening slacks and shoelaces were clumsy and fumbling. She pulled the sweater over her head and was in the hall when Agnew came running up the stairs. His face was whiter than ever. "Judson says she didn't telephone at all. He was asleep. She's not in her room and she's not downstairs. Vicky, where do you think she is? Vicky, did you really hear something in the pine woods?"

"Call Hollis and Michael. I'll tell Judson to come."

"I already told him to come to the house," said Agnew.

Agnew gave Victoria a queer unsteady look as if he were on the verge of tears and then wheeled around to run to Hollis' room.

Victoria followed him. Clistie would be furious if they roused the house to look for her. But Clistie ought to have returned before now. Clistie—and that scream down in the pine woods.

She reached the door of Hollis' room and he was awake, trying to understand Agnew, sitting up abruptly. "Scream!" he cried and saw Victoria. "For God's sake, Victoria, what does he mean?"

They tried to tell him, both speaking at once. "How long ago?" he said, getting out of bed.

"Almost an hour," said Agnew. "Here's your pants."

"Are you sure she's not in the house?"

"I looked downstairs. And she's not in her room."

Hollis reached for a sweater. "We'd better take a look. If she went alone down to the pine woods——" he gave Victoria a swift glance; his hard, light blue eyes had bright, black pupils. "That's funny about the scream. When did you hear it? What was it?"

A Light Hand for Seedlings

She told him again. As she finished they heard the distant, muffled peal of a bell.

"There's Judson now," said Hollis. "Vicky, you and Agnew search the house again. Better wake mother and tell her. And wake Michael."

He ran downstairs to open the front door for the gardener, Judson—a heavy, slow Scotchman, 50 or thereabouts, with a light hand for seedlings and a heavy hand for subordinates.

Michael, too, was asleep. Agnew knocked and shouted and opened the door as Michael awoke and turned on the bed light and sat up, blinking. "What's the matter? Victoria, what's wrong?"

"O, Michael, it's Clistie——"

Again, both talking at once, they told him.

Michael saw that she was terrified. He was out of bed and in bathrobe and slippers before they had finished. "Have they got lights? Don't be frightened, Vicky. Nothing could have happened to her——"

"Happened to whom?" cried Bessie from the doorway. "What's everybody running around and shouting about? Agnew, put your slippers on. Really, Victoria——"

They told her, too, rapidly. Bessie cried brokenly: "Like Henry. Like—O, what am I saying!" She caught herself quickly, her face and lips like ashes, her dark eyes showing frightened white rims. Her hair was streaming over her shoulders and she wore a pink chiffon negligee.

"I'll get you a flashlight, Michael," she said. "But nothing could have happened."

Michael, running toward the stairs, called back to Victoria reassuringly, "Don't worry. We'll find her. It'll be all right." Bessie hurried to her own room, snatched up a flashlight, and ran to hand it to Michael, over the stair railing. Thalia had been awakened, too, and came hurriedly from her room. Even then she was lovely,—soft, dark hair smooth, heavy blue taffeta dressing gown fresh and uncrumpled and tied neatly at her slender little waist with purple velvet ribbons.

"What is the matter?" Thalia cried, staring at them. "Is the house burning down?"

"He said to search the house," said Agnew. "Come on——"

Search the house, of course. Clistie must be there—fallen asleep somewhere.

But she was not.

She wasn't on the porch, either. Or in the gardens.

She wasn't in the garage and none of the cars was gone. She wasn't in the greenhouse. Certainly she wasn't in the little lodge house at the gate.

And if she were in the pine woods, then she didn't answer to voices calling her; and the men, looking now in earnest, found no trace of her having been there. By that time the servants were roused and it was beginning to be light.

At 6 o'clock they telephoned the state police station at the little town of Ponte Verde—the small, now crowded county seat. Somebody—Jody, probably—had made coffee. They sat around in the hall by the telephone, pale and disheveled, drinking it. Discussing whether or not to call the police; there was after all so little to tell them. A scream that only Victoria had heard; a distant splash. And that was before Clistie had gone down the stairway and quietly disappeared.

"I simply don't understand it," said Bessie fretfully, looking at Victoria. "Why in the world did you let her leave like that? Alone! After what you heard . . ."

Michael, standing beside Victoria, said quickly: "Clistie told her she'd call Judson. Victoria couldn't search the woods."

"If it wasn't Clistie that screamed, who was it?" asked Thalia.

Like a Tough Hickory Nut

Nobody could answer that. Hollis, nervous and pale, said: "I hate to call the police."

"Better call them," said Agnew, "if Victoria wasn't dreaming——"

"She may have got ill, you know," said Bessie suddenly. "She may have had a—a stroke. A heart attack."

Nobody had thought of that. Clistie was like a tough little hickory nut and was never sick.

Hollis shrugged and went to the telephone. "I suppose we'll have to call the police. It's the only way to make a really systematic search. Besides——" he shrugged again and called a Ponte Verde number.

Everybody listened and watched. So everybody heard him describe, briefly, the situation. Everybody saw him stiffen, to listen to the voice at the other end of the wire. And everybody saw the coffee cup he still held fall out of his hand and crash and splinter on the floor. Black coffee splashed all over Bessie's pink, trailing negligee but she paid no attention to it. She put her arms around Hollis, who seemed to sag against the wall by the telephone.

And as he listened and said nothing, just stood there, sagging, clutching the telephone, she took it suddenly and strongly away from him. Hollis didn't resist.

He turned around and looked at them with blank blue eyes and said: "They've found a woman. In the river. An hour or so ago. She's—she's wearing, a brown lace dress with a blue ribbon."

Bessie said into the telephone, hoarsely: "How old is she? What

Rachmaninoff to Appear with Symphony This Week

Famed Pianist Will Play in Two Concerts

By Claudia Cassidy.

Sergei Rachmaninoff, whose recital at Orchestra hall earlier in the season was a revelation in the resources of the piano, returns to appear with the Chicago Symphony orchestra under the direction of Hans Lange at the pair of concerts Thursday night and Friday afternoon. He will play Beethoven's Concerto for Piano, No. 1, C major, and his own Rhapsody on a Theme of Paganini—precisely what he played with the late Frederick Stock at a Tuesday afternoon concert two years ago in celebration of the orchestra's golden jubilee. He also conducted a program of his own music at the midweek concerts that season and returned last year to play his fourth piano concerto on another Rachmaninoff program.

The saturnine Russian, with the Mephistophelean twinkle, the hooded eyes and the cropped cap of unchanging hair, will be 70 years old April 1. Yet the man is a legend in his own time, for in that time he represents an older, more leisurely, musically more romantic age. Now an American citizen, he was born on a Russian estate near Novgorod and was only a boy when that estate was relatively impoverished by the liberation of the serfs. Now reliably quoted by Variety as tops at the American boxoffice, he was befriended by Tschaikowsky, whom he idolized.

Sergei Rachmaninoff.

These seem fairly fabulous extremes in fact as in time, but nothing about the Rachmaninoff career has been prosaic. When he was 20 he wrote the Prelude in C-sharp minor, which 50 years later he plays under pressure, smiling wryly in defeat when a doggedly determined audience refuses to go home without it. That prelude swept the world after it was introduced at a London concert by his virtuoso cousin, Alexander Siloti, and one of the results was London's invitation to the composer to conduct some of his own music.

The famous slump into depression and inactivity came after the Russian failure of his first symphony. The even more famous recovery came with the second symphony, one of the masterpieces of the Stock repertory long beloved in Chicago. This was composed at Dresden after an operatic interlude in Moscow, and it was about this time that Rachmaninoff began, but never completed, an opera based on Maeterlinck's "Monna Vanna."

He came to the United States in 1909, scoring the first of many triumphs as composer, pianist, and conductor. He was several times offered the post as conductor of the Boston orchestra. In 1917, at Christmas, he found the Russia of revolution too inimical and slipped over the border, never to return. In 1931 he bought an estate on Lake Lucerne, and it was there that he went in the spring of 1934, cutting short a tour, to compose the Rhapsody on a Theme of Paganini, the most vital of his works for piano and orchestra since the glittering second and third concertos. His small estate there is directly across the lake from Triebschen, the retreat where Wagner finished "Die Meistersinger" and "Siegfried," and sketched "Götterdammerung," and where he often was visited by Nietzsche, whose writings inspired the Strauss tone poems. Perhaps genius was in the air.

Mr. Rachmaninoff will appear Thursday at 8:15 and Friday at 2:15 in this program:

Overture, "Leonore," No. 3.......Beethoven
Concerto for Piano, No. 1, C major.................................Beethoven
Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis, for double string orchestra.....Williams
Rhapsody on a Theme of Paganini.................................Rachmaninoff

• • •

Soloist at the Tuesday afternoon concert, also under Mr. Lange's direction, is Robert Quick, assistant concertmaster. Mr. Quick is an American who at 25 was concertmaster of the Seattle Symphony orchestra and later held the same post with the Kansas City Philharmonic. Wherever he went the Chicago Symphony orchestra invariably recalled him to Orchestra hall. Mr. Quick will play the Glazounoff concerto for violin in this program, starting at 2:15:

Overture, "Fingal's Cave".............................Mendelssohn-Bartholdy
Symphony, D major [Köchel 385]...Mozart
Concerto for violin, A minor.......Glazounoff
Five Symphonic Etudes, based on the American folk song, "El-A-Noy"..................................Mueller
Orchestral fragments, second series, from "Daphnis and Chloé"...........Ravel

• • •

Mr. Lange also conducts Saturday night's popular concert, which features Beethoven's Symphony No. 2, D major, with Wagner's Overture to "The Flying Dutchman," Arensky's variations on a theme by Tschaikowsky, Massenet's ballet music from "Le Cid" and Rossini's Overture to "William Tell."

CLASSICAL RECORDINGS

By Claudia Cassidy.

Once in a while the New York Philharmonic Symphony must get bored with the stock remark that while it has the best individual players in the country, it often sounds like a second rate orchestra. When it takes the trouble to repudiate such accusation, the result is brilliant. Fortunately for the record collector, the new album of Sibelius' Symphony No. 1, E minor, displays the orchestra at its best, under the sensitive direction of John Barbirolli [Columbia M-532. Five 12 inch records].

If you happen not to like the Ormandy recording of the same symphony, as I don't, you will find this new set a treasure. From the first shrill cry of the violins to the arresting song of the finale it is a notable performance, completely in focus, played with the dexterity and fluency that can make an orchestra ravishing. Mr. Barbirolli has indicated both the wild beauty and the somber poetry of the score, and his orchestra projects a connoisseur's performance.

• • •

Shostakovich: Quartet, Opus 49, played by the Stuyvesant String Quartet [Columbia X-231. Two 12 inch records. This is a pungent performance of the pungent quartet Shostakovich wrote on the heels of the Fifth Symphony and about the time he was working on the Quintet for Piano and Strings. It is a distinguished piece of work, concise, engaging and exact, and the performance matches those qualities. There is a particular attractive passage in the slow movement which lets the viola sing over a plucked cello.

• • •

Guiomar Novaës always has a faintly sensuous tone to her piano, which is one reason why the Brazilian is so consistent a favorite with audiences. That curving creaminess is caught on a new Columbia 10 inch when she plays three sketches from Villa-Lobos' "The Baby's Family." They are "China Doll," "Rag Doll," and "Cardboard Doll" engaging excerpts from a witty series.

The American Guild of Organists is sponsoring two recitals within the next 10 days. Dorothy Korn will appear in noonday recital at Kimball hall Friday. Catharine Crozier will appear Monday evening, Feb. 15, also at Kimball hall, to benefit the Albert Schweitzer fund.

Rudolph Reuter's piano recital, originally scheduled for Feb. 10, has been postponed until March 3 at Fullerton hall.

• • •

Jascha Heifetz, who plays his only Chicago recital of the season at the Civic Opera house next Sunday afternoon, may use either his celebrated "David" Guarnerius or his Stradivarius at that performance, but he has a good opinion of American made violins. About a year ago he sponsored a contest among American violin makers "to prove that it is not necessary for a young violinist to own a Stradivarius or a Guarnerius to play well." First prize went to Michael Yurkevitch of New York for his copy of a 1747 Guadagnini. About the same time, Heifetz paid the $1,000 award to Gail T. Kubik, young American composer, for the best violin concerto submitted in another contest.

Jascha Heifetz.

Mr. Heifetz's interest in American music has gone to the length of including Russell Bennett's "Hexapoda," a form of jitterbug activity, on his programs. His interest in violins centers in his four prize ones—the fifth paid the price of being made of aluminum by disappearing in the nation's first aluminum drive.

The Heifetz Guarnerius, dated 1742, got its name from the famous violinist who once owned it, then gave it to his pupil, Wilhelmj. It also belonged for a time to Sarasate. The Stradivarius in Heifetz's collection was loaned to him by a New York family until he could afford to buy it. Most valued for sentiment is the quarter size instrument on which, at the age of three, he took his first lesson from his father. The fourth violin he found in Capetown, South Africa, on the last of his world tours. It took three years to make, consists of 2,750 matches pieced and glued tightly together, and can be played.

Hardly will the Heifetz echoes have died away when Jan Kiepura steps out on the stage of the Civic Opera house to sing his only recital of the season. Appearing next Sunday night, Mr. Kiepura will sing operatic arias, Polish songs, English songs, and a group of Russian songs. The Polish tenor made his opera debut at Warsaw, and later sang at La Scala, in Vienna and Paris, and at the Colon in Buenos Aires. He has sung for several seasons with the Chicago Opera, and this last season found him adding Rhadames in "Aida" to his list of rôles.

• • •

The North Side Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Rudolph Reiners, will present a concert of American music at Senn High school auditorium Wednesday evening.

• • •

The Lake View Music society will sponsor its third concert of the Arts club season Monday at 2 o'clock. Appearing are Madeline Pfeiffer-Hobbs, soprano; Ethel Swindelle, contralto; Alice Lawrence, cellist; Florence Henline and Helen Morton, pianists.

• • •

Arnaldo Estrella, Brazilian pianist, who won the Columbia concert artists' award, makes his North American debut at Carnegie hall this afternoon, playing the Tschaikowsky concerto with Bruno Walter and the New York Philharmonic symphony. Mr. Estrella will appear with the Chicago Symphony orchestra March 11 and 12.

The school of music of Central Y. M. C. A. college is now offering a graduate course leading to a master's degree. Students may major in piano, organ, voice, any orchestral instrument, theory, composition or musicology.

"Aleko" is the first ballet Leonide Massine created for Ballet Theater, of which he is now a member. It is the result of a meeting in New York a year ago between Massine and Marc Chagall, the Russian painter. They collaborated on Pushkin's romantic poem, "The Gypsies," to which Rachmaninoff once wrote an opera. However, they set it not to Rachmaninoff music, but to an orchestration of Tschaikowsky's Trio in A minor. The ballet was completed last summer at Mexico City and given its première there in September, 1942.

"Pillar of Fire," the outstanding favorite among the newer works, is Antony Tudor's ballet to Schönberg's "Verklärte Nacht," with decor by Broadway's Jo Mielziner. "Romantic Age" is Anton Dolin's ballet to Bellini music, with decor by the Mexican, Carlos Merida. "Helen of Troy," first danced in Detroit last fall, is the work of David Lichine, to music from Offenbach's "La Belle Hélène" and decor by Marcel Vertes, who designed the witty "Bluebeard." It tells the tale of Paris, Aphrodite and the golden apple.

The late Michel Fokine had restored his "Petrouchka" as one of his last gifts to Ballet Theater, and Adolph Bolm, new regisseur general, has been working on "Peter and the Wolf." Simon Semenoff has arranged "Coppelia" in a shorter form of one act in three scenes, and the Massine ballets, "Fantastic Toyshop" and "Capriccio Espagnol," went with him as a kind of balletic dowry.

Besides Massine, the troupe holds Markova, Baronova, Dolin, Eglevsky, Conrad, Lyon, Osato, Kaye, and many others.

The Arts Club announces a dance recital by Merce Cunningham and Jean Erdman next Sunday evening, Feb. 14. Mr. Cunningham has done some notable work with Martha Graham.

Gracie Barrie Sings and Leads Band at Blackhawk

BennyGoodman Coming to City Next Week-End

By Will Davidson.

The Blackhawk's current band is the Barries. Practically intact from the days when Dick Stabile was leading it, the outfit now has Gracie Barrie [Mrs. Stabile] at the baton, and it gives forth a generally very pleasant sound during the evening.

Gracie is the star of the troupe, with no exceptions. Calm, poised, completely charming, she takes her leadership seriously. By contrast to most feminine band leaders she is positively dignified. But she's a little honey, and gives the band a welcome touch of color and personality.

It needs it. During the floor show, when Maurice Rocco is playing his electric boogie-woogie, the idle musicians make a frieze—or spell it freeze—of the deadest pans I've ever seen outside the aluminum pile. About 13 pints of plasma might help.

Gracie's singing, it seems to me, is more attractive than ever. Excellent material and choice of numbers, and an always happy way of projecting her delightful personality, make both her dance set vocals and floor show efforts a major contribution. The "Pack Up Your Troubles" number, with its very clever "Tit Willow" parody, is excellent novelty. And "Strip Polka" a la Barrie is like you never saw it done before.

The Blackhawk's show is good, too. Rocco was a little under wraps opening night, but probably has cut loose by now. Seen in comparatively small doses during the shows only, he's not apt to become overwhelming. Crawford and Caskey, attractive dance team, are a little frightening in one of their more vigorous exercises on the Blackhawk's small floor, but the kids can dance. Their Astaire dream number is pretty cute.

Swing fans of Chicago get a double treat this coming week-end when Benny Goodman comes to town. He'll be at the Trianon ballroom Saturday night and the Aragon Sunday. Eddy Howard will share the stand with him at the former, Lawrence Welk at the latter.

The following Saturday night, Feb. 20, Ina Ray Hutton and her new band will co-star at the Trianon with Freddy Nagel, who will have started a long run there Feb. 16. On the 21st she'll go to the Aragon, and there she'll find Eddy Howard back home.

The Edgewater Beach hotel will give the dance trio, Harris, Claire, and Shannon, the longest engagement of any act at the hotel—six weeks—starting Feb. 19.

And the Palmer House, I hear unofficially, has extended Hildegarde's room packing and coffer filling engagement a week—to March 17.

• • •

Hildy, by the way, is now the highest paid person ever to appear in the room. As a birthday present she was given a raise to $2,000 a week. That is better than any act with the exception of Veloz and Yolanda. And there isn't a fractional question that she's earned it. The peripatetic peach from Milwaukee has the big Empire room in her hand every night.

Boswelling the Bistros:

Pretty little Talia Wermuth has just closed another dancing engagement in Montreal. When is she going to be brought back to a Chicago café? . . . The Robertos are now dancing in the Walnut room of the Bismarck, where Art Kassel plays so popularly. And congratulations to Gloria Lee, statuesque captain of the room's line. She's now the boss. . . . A picture in Tim Gayle's "Baton" reveals that delightful Milton De Lugg, hirsute accordionist with Matty Malneck, is in the army. . . . Frances Faye heads the new show at the Latin Quarter Friday. . . . Boyd Raeburn's back in town, at the Bandbox. . . . Don't forget Emile Petti in the Pump room. The long time favorite there. . . . The way all the orchestras are giving time to help win the war, they're playing to beat the bandits.

Conducts U. S. O. Show.

Laszlo Halasz, artistic and musical director of the St. Louis Grand Opera association, has been made conductor of the U. S. O.-Camp Shows American Symphony orchestra. Mr. Halasz made a successful appearance during the Chicago Opera season as conductor of "The Barber of Seville."

AGAIN, "LIFE WITH FATHER"

Musical Plays Predominant on Chicago Stages

thorne's Bride" was presented by D'Oyly Carte's Comedy Opera company in the London theater known as the Opera Comique, where the earlier Gilbert and Sullivan successes had been given under the managerial auspices of the same Richard D'Oyly Carte. The initial run of "Patience" totaled 408 performances—considerably less than the staggering record of 675 consecutive performances of "H. M. S. Pinafore," but none the less a good record.

"Patience" was billed as "an entirely new and original aesthetic opera." Aesthetic it is, indeed, for its purpose was to lampoon the artificial artiness which had come to afflict English society when Oscar Wilde, Swineburne, and Whistler became the vogue. This was the period also in which Japanese prints first came into fashion in Britain; Gilbert was shortly to reflect this predilection in the libretto of "The Mikado."

• • •

The only representation of "Ruddigore" at the Studebaker theater will take place Saturday afternoon. This opera is the greatest rarity in the Boston Comic Opera company's repertory. It has never been as complete a success as many of the other Gilbert and Sullivan works, possibly because its satire upon supernatural Victorian melodrama is not always well understood. The score contains some intoxicating music, however, and the lyrics have their full quota of spicy Gilbertian rhymes. Particularly remarkable is a scene of desperately dramatic character in which eight ancestral portraits come to life to hurl threats against young Sir Ruthven Murgatroyd because he has violated the decree that every successive Murgatroyd baronet must commit one loathsome crime every day.

Drama Notes

"Cry Havoc" will be the third subscription play of the Theater Guild and American Theater society, opening about March 1 at the Studebaker for at least the three-week period required to accommodate guild subscribers and other early birds. The play, by Allan R. Kenward, is a drama with an all-feminine cast presenting the heroism and sacrifice of a group of American army nurses during the bitter days of Bataan. It was presented first on the west coast, and was staged in New York just after Christmas by Lee Shubert in association with John Wildberg. Whether the New York cast will remain intact for the Studebaker theater booking has not been revealed. Among those in the original company were Katharine Locke, Thelma Schnee, Helen Trenholme, Florence Rice, and Julie Stevens.

The opening date of "The Doughgirls," Joseph Fields' comedy about a group of war time career girls in the swirl of Washington life, still remains indefinite. March 7 still sounds like as good a guess as any. The Chicago company is slated to open March 4 in Buffalo, and unless a week in Detroit is sandwiched in, it should be ready to purvey its laughs here on the 7th, which is a Sunday evening. Whenever more final data are available, including the names of the members of the cast, we shall pass them on to you forthwith.

Richard Hale, Gertrude Lawrence's stern but helpful psychiatrist in "Lady in the Dark," has had a varied career in the world of music and the theater. He has appeared widely in song recitals, and has been soloist with major symphony orchestras, both as vocalist and as narrator in such works as Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf." [His voice may be heard on the Victor records of the Prokofieff composition, along with the Boston Symphony orchestra.] His operatic rôles have included such diverse operas as Gluck's "Orpheus," Deems Taylor's "The King's Henchman," and Douglas Moore's "The Devil and Daniel Webster." On the speaking stage he has appeared with such stars as Ethel Barrymore, Grace George, Ruth Gordon, Eugenie Leontovich, and Sylvia Sidney.

"Let's Face It" continues to do dishearteningly good business in New York, despite the arrival of another Cole Porter musical, "Something for the Boys." The Erlanger theater, which had hoped against hope that "Let's Face It" might be ready to take over the theater soon after "Life with Father" leaves on Feb. 27, is now faced with the problem of looking elsewhere for a tenant. There seems little likelihood that "Let's Face It" will come this way until well into the spring.

The Theater Guild is putting on its thinking cap, wondering what to give its subscribers after "Cry Havoc." Katharine Hepburn has inconveniently determined to leave "Without Love," the Philip Barry play, at the end of this week, which means a premature closing in New York and the impossibility of a tour of those Theater Guild cities which did not see it last spring. For a time, it can now be revealed, the Guild management contemplated replacing Miss Hepburn with some other actress in order to bring the play to Chicago. This might have been done if our local booking jam had not made it impossible to find a house right away; if the company, including Elliott Nugent, was to be held together, the play could not close and reopen later. At the moment the Guild is clinging to "Uncle Harry," an excellent murder melodrama with Eva LeGallienne and Joseph Schildkraut, as its fourth offering. But the fifth and sixth items have not been determined. Efforts were made to induce Blanche Yurka in "The Barber Had Two Sons" to stop off en route to New York for California, but the producer, who had earlier promised to show his wares in Chicago, had become Broadway-mad and would not listen, altho the Guild could have assured him three good weeks.

How Swedes Helped Build United States

"SWEDISH IMMIGRANTS IN LINCOLN'S TIME," by Nels Hokanson. [Harper, $3.]

Reviewed by George E. Q. Johnson.

The reader is pleasantly introduced to this book in a foreword by Carl Sandburg.

Rarely has any one pursued a subject over such a long period of time and with such devotion and thoroness as has Nels Hokanson. From hundreds of sources he has brought to light facts pertaining to Swedish immigrants. The historical data make the book worthy of a permanent place on the shelves of public and private libraries.

Chapters dealing with the colonial settlements on the Delaware of 1638 are introductory. The real story begins with the later period of Swedish immigration, when in 1840 it became a law that Swedish subjects could leave the realm without permission of the crown.

The story does not flow. Rather it is made up of the hundreds of rills which gradually join and make the brook that flows on to the great river. Movingly Mr. Hokanson tells how some, because of unpleasant experiences as religious nonconformists; how some, for economic advantage, and others, because of the spirit of adventure, left in small sailing vessels on voyages that usually took from six to eight weeks, and packed their own provisions. He tells how tragedy overtook some in shipwreck; how many perished in the epidemics of cholera; how they pushed on by canal boats to the lakes, by lake steamers to the port of Chicago. Most of them went to the prairies of Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, and Iowa; a small number settled in the cities, notably Chicago. Some 10,000 who had been influenced by Mormon missionaries wended their way westward over the wild country to Utah. Misfortune befell some who were induced to go south and were subjected to a system of peonage; some were Forty-niners and joined the gold rush to California.

The author shows how swiftly they blended into the American scene. First they were Democrats, because the Democrats were friendly to foreigners, and they had been frightened from the Whig party because of the "Know Nothing Movement." In 1852 they could no longer adhere to the Democratic party because of its position on slavery. There were now flourishing settlements in all of these states. In the Presidential election of 1860 they were enthusiastic followers of Lincoln. In all the settlements Swedish ministers, teachers, and leading laymen spoke at massmeetings. Large delegations marched as members of Swedish American Republican clubs to Galesburg, with floats, to hear the Lincoln-Douglas debate. The author reproduces a note from Lincoln, introducing his Swedish friend Johnson, who wanted to do some political work.

With such bits of information the pages are filled. The book is well illustrated. It gives a detailed account of their participation in the Civil war. Many Swedish soldiers became officers in the Union army; 75 Swedes in that army died at the notorious southern prison camp of Andersonville. There are stories of the Indian massacre of the Swedish settlers at New Ulm, Minn.; a sailor on the Monitor when she fought her battle with the Merrimac; the romance of young Swedish army officers who tendered their services to Lincoln and, because of their technical military knowledge, were accepted and aided Union commanders; John Ericsson, inventor of the Monitor; Adm. Dahlgren and his son, killed in action; Lars Paul Esbjörn, who became a great religious leader, was a friend of Lincoln, and who taught the President's son Robert.

The author takes the tangled skein of the lives of these immigrant people and weaves them into the fabric we call America history. From his pages it stands out that these frontiersmen foresaw the time when their sons and daughters must take worthy places in the life of their beloved America.

BOOKMAN'S HOLIDAY

By Charles Collins.

IF THERE is a Pulitzer prize for book jackets, we wish to place in nomination the "dust cover"—as they say in England—of "The Old Churches of London," by Gerald Cobb [Scribner's]. It depicts a view of "the City" in aquatint style, showing the many steeples of Christopher Wren's churches as they looked in his time. The artist, Randolph Schwabe, principal of the Slade school, based his design on an early 18th century engraving.

• • •

This is a richly illustrated work for antiquarians and ecclesiastical architects. It brings its mellow material up-to-date in the matter of war demolition, saying:

"Besides losses in other parts of London, 15 of Wren's masterpieces have been gutted, mostly with all their fittings, besides four severely damaged; while two pre-Fire [1666] churches and St. Dunstan's-in-the-East have been burned right out and another damaged."

• • •

New York publishers are waving the flag for old Chicago this season. The latest contribution to the city's history and legends is "Giants Gone," by Ernest Poole [Whittlesley House]. The subtitle is "Men Who Made Chicago."

Mr. Poole, a distinguished novelist and son of an old Chicago family, has written a running story of Chicago's growth by dealing with the personalities of some of the First Citizens of the fertile years.

• • •

The point of view of "Giants Gone" is stated by Mr. Poole in his preface, thus:

"Many were ruthless, hard go-getters, and unscrupulous in their ways of shoving obstacles aside. Yet they had other qualities which most of us at present lack and which this country needs today—bold vision, buoyant courage, and deep, tireless energy."

• • •

Once upon a time, but easily within the memory of this generation, there was a great institution called the American theater, which made a pattern of romance in the nation's cultural life. Only shreds and remnants of its gorgeous fabric remain. If you would like to recapture some of its glamor, read "Harvest of My Years" [Bobbs-Merrill], the autobiography of Channing Pollock, playwright, librettist, essayist, and drama critic.

Mr. Pollock's life story is rich in source material. For example, he gives a full account of the life and works of an almost forgotten Broadway character named Rennold Wolf, who was a forerunner of the gossip columnists. Mr. Wolf was a wisecracker before that term became slang.

One of the many great sea stories of This War is told in "The Saga of San Demetrio" [Knopf], a book of pocket size by F. Tennyson Jesse. The San Demetrio, carrying a cargo of gasoline in convoy, tackled the German battleship Von Scheer single handed and, battered and burning after many misadventures, reached a home port.

Any one who is searching for a good one-volume history of the United States should consider, "America: The Story of a Free People," by Allan Nevins and Henry Steele Commager [Little, Brown]. This work, published last November, carries the chronicle to Pearl Harbor. The authors are professional historians of high standing, but they have written this book for the layman. Answering the stale talk that American history is colorless in comparison to European, they say in the preface:

"Our mountain passes are as picturesque as feudal castles, our town meetings as majestic as royal courts, the swarming of peoples into the interior is as exciting as the expansion of the Normans or the Saracens, and our national heroes stand comparison with the heroes of any other people."

Plight of Refugees Depicted in Far Above Average Novel

"MR. TIBBS PASSES THROUGH," by Robert Neumann. [Dutton, $2.50.]

Reviewed by John Abbot Clark.

Robert Neumann is an Austrian novelist and biographer, now living in England. Altho his books have been translated into 21 languages, it is only recently that he has become known to American readers, chiefly thru his biography of Zaharoff, the late munitions vendor extraordinary, and his novel of several years ago, "By the Waters of Babylon."

"Mr. Tibbs Passes Through" is the first of his books to be written in English. In a note "to the man or woman who reads this book," he says a number of things which are rather revealing—whether you read the book or not: "By abandoning his native tongue he wanted to protest against the deeds done by others who used his native tongue. Also, those others had banned and burned his books. Dropping that language, and adopting that of the country which had offered him freedom and hospitality, was—so he then thought—a matter of dignity." Moreover, he hoped to escape "the curse of otherness, to throw bridges over the abyss of loneliness."

The author goes on to admit that he failed and was mistaken in many ways. "The first version of this slim novel—which took 30 months to write—was partly written, and destroyed and lost, in British internment camps. Nor did he succeed in banishing the otherness. And those bridges were never built."

But there were, he feels, compensations: "In his own language the author had reached a state of facile accomplishment. He had overcome his language's chastity; there was no more resistance. And, being as clever as he was ambitious, seeking the most comfortable short cut to success, he had managed to dazzle his readers into taking easy brilliance of expression for depth of thought, for sincerity of heart. What was left to him, once he became aware of it, but giving up writing or going into exile?"

Judging from the quality of "Mr. Tibbs," it might not be a bad idea for hundreds of American novelists to get themselves shipped, pronto, somewhere east of Suez or west of Hollywood. And let them see to it that their next novel is at least three years on the fire, runs to not more than 250 pages, and is composed in French or Russian.

• • •

The story itself is slight. A refugee family, consisting of a father [Mr. Tibbs], his two daughters, and the older daughter's little boy, becomes stranded, as the result of an accident to their car, in an upland village that is directly in the path of the rapidly mounting fury of war. Mr. Tibbs and his family immediately get entangled in divers ways with various villagers, among them Mr. Morris, the soulless merchant, money-changer, and mortgage-forecloser, who runs the town; the soulful young schoolmaster, and the kindly old doctor, who has been virtually hounded out of his professional existence by the villain Morris.

But the external events and quickly developing relationships, however necessary to the novel, are quite ordinary, often banal, never really important. The core of the book is what goes on in the minds and hearts of the characters, expressed sometimes allegorically, sometimes symbolically, sometimes straight.

This Relates a New Myth of Shakespeare

"WILL SHAKSPERE AND THE DYER'S HAND," by Alden Brooks. [Scribners, $5.]

Reviewed by Tremaine McDowell.

Much credulity is necessary if we are to believe that Bacon could have written the Shakespearean plays in the 16th century and that the secret could have been kept until the 19th. Infinitely more credulity is required if we are to believe that Shakespeare's supposed works were written by a stable of Elizabethan authors [Marlowe, Nashe, Greene, Dyer, Jonson, Lodge, Sidney, Daniel, Barnes], hired, supervised, paid, and fired at will by that astute but contemptible business man, Will Shakspere; and, further, that, wherever a single hand perfected these works, it was the hand of Sir Edward Dyer. Such is the tremendous hoax which Mr. Alden Brooks would have us believe lay concealed for three centuries in the dark womb of time, finally to be revealed in 1943 by himself.

Also beyond belief are the lesser revelations here announced. Shakespeare, we are told, acted as pimp for Southampton in buying the favors of a tavern wanton, one Mistress Jane Davenant, formerly Thomas Nashe's mistress, "whose favors presumably he [Shakespeare] had enjoyed." This wanton was at once "the spirit of Dame Quickly and the Dark Lady of the sonnets.

Shakespeare was the reporter who took down for the printer the text of his supposed plays. His own hirelings brutally satirized him in the plays which bear his name [Bottom in "A Midsummer Night's Dream," for example, "exactly" characterizes Shakespeare.] Ben Jonson's famous tribute ["I lov'd the man . . . on this side idolatry"] is bitterly ironical in every word. And much more, thru 688 closely printed pages.

This vast structure of old facts, discredited gossip, and new errors is held together by tissues of misinterpretation, assumption pyramided on assumption, and unconfirmed assertion. Two examples from a hundred will illustrate.

In the dedication to "Venus and Adonis" and the dedication to "The Rape of Lucrece," but nowhere else, the author's name is spelled "Shakespeare." Why? Mr. Brooks replies categorically, with no regard for other possible explanations and no evidence for his own: "The answer can only be this: Will Shakspere did not sign the dedication, 'William Shakespeare.' Some other person wilfully made that alteration in his name."

Next comes assumption No. 2, an absolute non sequiter: "Then it is hardly possible that Will Shakspere wrote the dedication." Finally, with a bland disregard for logic, which takes our breath away, comes assumption No. 3: "Then, if not the dedication, neither the poem." No matter how fantastic, any proposition can be "proved" in this fashion.

Again, Mr. Brooks attributes 54 characteristics to "The Poet," as he calls the man who perfected the Shakespearean works: He was a musician and a courtier; he read Italian, Spanish, and German; he had traveled extensively on the continent; he was an expert in military science, medicine, and law; and the like. Sir Edward Dyer possessed all 54 characteristics, Shakespeare only a few. Dyer, therefore, was "The Poet." But Mr. Brooks does not and cannot prove that the man behind the plays was actually thus endowed in 54 directions — and the entire argument therefore falls to the ground.

• • •

The chief value of "Will Shakspere and the Dyer's Hand" is to provide amateur and academic source-hunters with a monumental demonstration of what they must avoid.

Alumnus Tells 100 Year Story of Notre Dame

"NOTRE DAME: ONE HUNDRED YEARS," by the Rev. Arthur J. Hope, C. S. C. [University Press, Notre Dame. $4.]

Reviewed by John Stephen Brennan.

The centenary history of Notre Dame tells the story of the university as completely as any man could humanly tell it, and, in addition, Father Hope has told it well. He brought to his task the intimate knowledge of an "insider" [he is a graduate of the class of 1920], a long experience as a writer of acknowledged merit, a quiet humor, and an unusual ability to select the significant. The result is a volume in which every one who knows, or is interested in Notre Dame will take deep interest.

Even persons who feel that they are well acquainted with that university will find here a record of achievements of which they perhaps had little previous knowledge. The list is impressive: Albert Zahm's pioneering in aeronautics, Jerome Green's experiments with wireless, Father Julius Nieuwland's experiments that led to the discovery of synthetic rubber. Nor does Father Hope fail to do justice to Father Daniel E. Hudson, for 50 years a literary influence; to the scintillating personality of Father John W. Cavanaugh, and to a score of other priests, brothers, and laymen who made a contribution to the life of Notre Dame.

The nature of the history and the fact that so many of Father Hope's readers will be alumni, who will feel that they are part of the chronicle, no doubt will provide him with a number of ex post facto collaborators. Out of their recollections they may expand the events and figures that limitations of space forced him to compress.

Loads of Fun Enliven This Mystery Tale

"THE MOUSE IN THE MOUNTAIN," by Norbert Davis. [Morrow, $2.]

Reviewed by Drexel Drake.

For the reviewer upon whom the unstinted publication of mystery novels imposes a responsibility to appraise diligently each in the order of its appearance, this book arrives as a compensation. It is complete entertainment. Here is an author with prodigious perception of what is amusing in human behavior and a classic talent to convey it to his readers in characters, dialog, and situations. Homicides, intrigues, and sinister motives crowd into this story, yet every page provides a chuckle. No celluloid wisecracks in lieu of wit—just down to earth humor that flows as constantly and as effortlessly as the gently bubbling spring.

You may be fed up with private detectives but you will applaud Doan. You may regard dogs passively but you will rave over Carstairs, a Great Dane that leers and sneers. You will see Mexico as you never imagined it. You will join a busload of amazing tourists and arrive in time for an earthquake in Los Altos, where multiple life dramas merge and explode with a bang. You'll ask for more heroines like Janet, more snobs like Patricia Van Osdel, more romeos like Capt. Perona. Chapter two alone would be an epic short short of a bad man. The story as a whole is immense recreation.

"THE SEVEN WHO WAITED," by August Derleth. [Scribners, $2.]

Old Josiah Sloan has a stroke and he is assured that death is closing in on him. So he summons his seven known relatives—cousins and nephews—to his Wisconsin country home. They gather with the common hope, openly expressed among them, that Josiah won't linger long.

This isn't precisely a novelty as stage setting for a mystery story. But this author quickly dispels any suspicion that he is following an old pattern. To begin with, he does a mammoth job of characterization. The seven relatives are a rare aggregation. Then Josiah, to promote amusement for his bedridden self, has his lawyer come and read his will to the seven beneficiaries. That touches off activity. Ominous notes are followed by murders. That brings in Judge Ephraim Peabody Peck to probe the baffling puzzle. Action and surprise are abundant in this highly satisfying tale of a chess game with death.

"ECHO OF A BOMB," by Van Siller. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.]

The atmosphere for this story is provided by American war correspondents at home on leave. Bryan Sloane, one of them, falls in love at first sight with beautiful Paula Storm, but she guards a terrifying secret that menaces the romance. It has to do with bombing of an automobile in England, which only Paula and a man now insane survived. But even after she confesses to Bryan that she loves him, Paula becomes the bride of the insane man. The story proceeds tediously on Paula's estate in Virginia until there is an eruption of murders. This is announced as a first novel and it is remarkably well done in spots. The author is better at romance than at mystery. The plot is extremely intricate, with much explaining left for the final pages.

"PERIL AT THE SPY NEST," by Arthur M. Chase. [Dodd, Mead, $2.]

Mr. Purdy was happiest on a sand hill looking out to sea. He enjoyed nothing as much as quiet solitude. But that became impossible when the very cottage he owned became a rendezvous for spies and the scene of murder. Because he feared that his son-in-law was involved he invited himself into a lot of danger and excitement. The writing is dreadfully flat but the story offers diverting pastime.

Once Upon a Honeymoon

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

You had a good time at the movies in January, I KNOW, if you saw any of the films listed above.

"Random Harvest"—"One of the sweetest love stories ever told . . . much of its charm due to richly sympathetic acting. . . . Superlative direction by Mervyn Le Roy. . . . Greer Garson first lady of the screen. . . . Mr. Colman, as always, most good things rolled into one."

"The Black Swan," featuring Laird Cregar, Tyrone Power, and Maureen O'Sullivan, from story by Rafael Sabatini who "bothered not at all about psychoses. . . . Living and loving red-bloodedly and dangerously were the subjects that intrigued his imagination and sent his pen into action. . . . The memory of 'The Black Swan' lingers on. . . ."

• • •

"Fortress on the Volga"—Story of the defense of Stalingrad in 1918 . . . strongly acted. . . . Photography is a delight. . . ."

"Arabian Nights"—"Flips you right out of this world! . . ." Features Maria Montez, Leif Erickson, Jon Hall, and Sabu.

"Hitler's Children" — Exposé of child life in Nazi Germany. . . . Not too long and expertly directed. Featured players—Bonita Granville, Tim Holt Jr., Kent Smith, Otto Kruger, and H. B. Warner.

"I Married a Witch"—With Veronica Lake, Fredric March, and Robert Benchley. . . . "Here's a sauce piquante to tempt you! . . ."

• • •

"One of Our Aircraft Is Missing"—War adventure film. . . . Acting magnificent, no less. . . . Shrewd direction by Michael Powell, who made "The Invaders." . . . Unknown cast, headed by Gidfrey Tearle, Eric Portman, and Hugh Williams.

"Seven Sweethearts"—". . . a sweetheart of a film . . . one of the happiest whimsies that has emerged from Hollywood . . . will leave you with bluebirds in your heart. . . ." With Van Heflin, Kathryn Grayson, Marsha Hunt.

"Once Upon a Honeymoon"—"Joyous bit of foolery that presents Ginger Rogers and Cary Grant in rôles that will delight you hugely. . . . Picture ends merrily with a death aboard ship."

See you tomorrow.

"MRS. WIGGS" ON SCREEN

John Archer and Barbara Britton look like a pair of valentines in this "still" from "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch"! Showing at the Garrick.

Camels in Demand in Hollywood for Use in War Films

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. (AP).—The camels are coming into their own in the movies and all because of the war. When Rommel was pushing the British back toward Suez, camels ranked on the animal actor list down somewhere between the penguins and trained monkeys. For a day's work before the cameras, camels drew a paltry $15.

Then the fortunes of war changed for the allies and, by coincidence, the film "Casablanca" hit the screen. About the time the American doughboys arrived in Africa to help the British annihilate the German fox.

Now, no less than 14 North African pictures are in the making and, since each must have at least a few camels for authentic atmosphere, a nearby animal farm is doing all right with the renting of its one and two humped critters. Now camels rent for $25 a day, and the price likely will rise even higher.

"BLACK SWAN"

Maureen O'Hara doughtily fights off Tyrone Power's love making to the last reel of "The Black Swan." Then—AH, then . . . ! State-Lake.

Plans Broadway Show.

HOLLYWOOD (AP).—Film Funnyman Stan Laurel says he expects soon to open a comedy show on Broadway.

This Town Called Hollywood

By Philip Scheuer

In point of active years, King Vidor and Clarence Brown are two of the "oldest" directors in the business. Neither makes many pictures [Brown's last was "They Met in Bombay;" Vidor's "H.M. Pulham, Esq."] Nor do they invariably click. But both have managed to retain a certain integrity thru the commercial years and their jobs always are workmanlike. Sometimes—but more rarely—they are inspired.

Clarence Brown.

Currently, both are busy at M. G. M. on American themes. Brown is dubbing sound and music into "The Human Comedy." Vidor is testing for "America." I have never seen either of them so enthusiastic; and altho their respective efforts will probably be released a year apart, you might like to learn something about each.

Nobody up to now would have dreamed of mentioning William Saroyan and Mickey Rooney in the same breath. Clarence Brown does—with a fervor akin to awe. He directed Rooney in Saroyan's original screen play, "The Human Comedy," and regards both as peculiarly his babies. Rooney, he swears, is sensational; and as a writer Saroyan "begins where the others leave off."

Brown telescoped Saroyan's 265 page script [since published in book form] to 123 pages. He cut out the "dreams" and "visions in the clouds" and everything else that seemed to him "abstruse and oblique" and kept the essence of Saroyan drama, humor, and philosophy. Even after this, the film will run only just under two hours.

The telling is chronological: Thursday to Sunday in a small town—"Ithaca, Cal." Rooney, who works in a telegraph office after school, is the chief protagonist, Thursday we "meet the people." That night Mickey has his first collision with life. ["A big climax at the start" Brown chuckled. "Usually we save that for the finish."] Friday we follow Mickey thru school, with a track meet in the afternoon. The evening is all "laughter and love," for soldiers on leave as well as Rooney. Saturday—"The schoolboys' day all over America"—we stay with the kids. It culminates in the reading of a doughboy's letter by Mickey which fills 350 unbroken feet of film and which Brown asserts is one of the greatest things ever caught on celluloid. A Sunday six months later brings the story to a close: Church, picnic, finale.

Brown would have liked to go into a real town like Visalia to shoot the picture, but schedules interfered. As it was, he spent 24 days on locations around here: The library at Long Beach, Canoga Park High school, backyards and alleys in Sawtelle and Culver City. His biggest set is a schoolroom with 40 students.

Nelson Poynter, the man from Washington, told Brown he would urge sending release prints all over the world to show what Americanism really means. Joe Breen called to say "The Human Comedy" is the best movie that has passed thru his censoring hands since he joined the Hays office. Brown adds merely that he hopes he has turned out a motion picture—not a stage play or a novel—which is nevertheless Saroyan.

• • •

Vidor divides his "America" into four parts, too, to illustrate all phases of an industrial era. His hero [with Spencer Tracy unavailable, still to be cast] lands at Ellis Island in 1900. [Country of his birth is another problem requiring careful deliberation. Perhaps it will be Germany.] He walks to Minnesota, where work awaits him in the great iron mines of the Mesabi range. Emerging from pits to sunlight, he travels to the steel mills. Later he builds automobiles in Detroit, and finally, planes in California.

BOOKS ALIVE

by Vincent Starrett

THE death of Alexander Woollcott, greatest one man show of his time, occurred—appropriately enough—almost before a microphone. It is not perhaps too early to wonder how long his fabulous reputation will outlive him in the world. There were in his life and character all the materials for a splendid legend—his friendships, his aversions, his unblushing sentimentality, his genuine acumen, his very real generosity, his venomous wit, his precocious versatility. He was at no time unaware of this, of course, and at all times eager to promote the legend.

Excellent as are many of the pieces in his best book, "While Rome Burns," which in many opinions established him as the nation's first raconteur, it was as a personality that he was best known, and it is as a personality probably that he will survive. I suppose it is too much to hope that he has left an autobiography in manuscript; that, if it exists, should be one of the most fascinating records of our cockeyed day.

Two Studies of Woollcott.

At least two books already exist, both caricatures, which catch his complex character better than any portrait could hope to do. Wildly exaggerated as they are, Kaufman's and Hart's play, "The Man Who Came to Dinner," and Charles Brackett's novel, "Entirely Surrounded," are beyond question stunning—and hilarious—depictions of the prodigy that was Alexander Woollcott.

Nearly everybody now has seen "The Man Who Came to Dinner." Mr. Brackett's novel, surely one of the most amusing books of its kind in the American language, all but dropped dead from the press—I don't know why. In it will be found—in the words of Woollcott himself—"a delicately murderous account of life on a Devil's Island in New England"; that is to say, on Woollcott's own island at Bomoseen, Vt., where seasonally he entertained his friends with conversation, "side cars," poker, and what must have been the roughest game of croquet ever played in this world.

They Tied Up Traffic.

We were not intimate friends, but I knew him well. He was my guest, in 1934, at the first state dinner of the Baker Street Irregulars, and was responsible for the only spectacle I ever made of myself—deliberately, at any rate—in public.

I had mildly suggested that it would have been fun to drive to the dinner in a hansom cab, if only there were any hansom cabs left in the world. It appeared that there were two at that moment, in New York, and Woollcott knew how to get them both. He outfitted me, also, with a fore-and-aft cap, in the best Sherlockian tradition, donned one himself, and thus equipped—and fortified by his inevitable and peculiarly wicked "side cars"—we fared forth into a bleak December evening and climbed into the second cab. "The first may be dangerous," quoted Mr. Woollcott from the Sacred Writings.

But it was to the driver of the empty cab that the address of the restaurant was given. "Follow that cab!" we told our own driver, mysteriously; and thereafter we tied up traffic along Fifth avenue, for several miles, until our destination was reached.

I hope he has the good luck to attract a biographer not unlike himself. His own story is the best thing Woollcott ever created.

Kipling in America.

Speaking of Vermont, a notable man of letters was lost to America when Rudyard Kipling, once a resident of that state, returned to England, in 1896, after a violent quarrel with his American brother-in-law. The story has been told by Frederic F. Van de Water in "Rudyard Kipling's Vermont Feud" and has just been retold, with a new inflection, by Lucille Russell Carpenter of Evanston, in "Rudyard Kipling: a Friendly Profile," published by Argus Books, Chicago.

When Kipling married Caroline Balestier, in 1892, he took over at the same time her brother, Beatty, who rapidly became a problem. Beatty, a local ne'er-do-well, appears to have nursed private grievances dating from the construction of Kipling's Vermont home, at Brattleboro, shortly after the wedding. By this and by that, they took shape in his curious mind—it is a story of minor frictions, aggravated by village gossip—until an open rupture occurred, ending in a roadside quarrel between the two principals. Threats were uttered by Beatty, and it appears that Kipling thought his life was in danger. He caused the arrest of the belligerent Beatty, and thus the matter came into the courts and became a public scandal—for Beatty a time of malicious triumph, for the public a Roman circus, for Kipling something like a crucifixion. The author attempted to go bond for the trouble maker, whom he had himself brought into court, but Beatty scornfully refused.

A Technical Victory.

Technically, in the end, the victory was Kipling's. His difficult brother-in-law was held over to the grand jury; but for many persons Beatty had become a local hero and a victim of persecution, and Kipling realized he had a bear by the tail. Rather than face a repetition of the painful publicity, the Kiplings left Vermont before the grand jury met, and soon returned to England. They were in New York, three years later, and might perhaps have gone back to Brattleboro; but the vindictive Beatty snarled and threatened a suit charging malicious persecution—a hollow threat, but a promise of embarrassment that ended forever the possibility of claiming Rudyard Kipling for American letters.

Mrs. Carpenter discusses the family quarrel with understanding and sympathy. Slender as is her book, it deals only incidentally with the Vermont feud highlighted by this department, which is fond of scandal.

Charles Dickens Anniversary.

Just 131 years ago today Charles Dickens was born—Charles John Huffam Dickens, to give him all his names for once—the son of Wilkins Micawber and Mrs. Nickleby. After an unhappy start, in degrading poverty, he somehow managed to grow up and become a shorthand reporter, and at 24 was made famous by "The Posthumous Papers of the Pickwick Club," a book he had knocked out in monthly instalments at the request of a publisher. His subsequent history is well known: the rest of his life was spent in ceaseless and incredible creation. He became the most popular novelist of the 19th century, and is today called the greatest magician of letters after Shakespeare.

He visited America twice and did not greatly care for us; nor, on the whole, did we greatly care for him. But we adored his books, and we still adore them—ask any public librarian. He died in 1870, leaving unfinished a story called "The Mystery of Edwin Drood," a tantalizing fragment that fanatic Dickensians have been trying to finish ever since.

Duplicity of Japs Is Subject of Book by Naval Historian

"FROM PERRY TO PEARL HARBOR: the Struggle for Supremacy in the Pacific," by Edwin A. Falk. [Doubleday, Doran, $3.]

Reviewed by Philo M. Buck Jr.

"Please 'scuse." In 1845 Commodore Biddle was the first American to hear this sing-song disclaimer from Japan. As he was entering his official barge to pay a ceremonial visist to Yeddo [now Tokio] authorities, he was jostled and thrown by a Japanese soldier. "Please 'scuse"—no more.

In 1937, when the Japanese deliberately bombed and machine gunned the river boat Panay to show to the fighting Chinese their contempt for the United States, the disclaimer was again "Please 'scuse." They paid cash for the boat and "would have been delighted to pay for the entire navy on the same basis." A Japanese government would gladly also have tried to get away with the same excuse at Pearl Harbor if American patience would have permitted.

Such is the theme of this book. It is not just a well told story of American-Japanese relations for more than a hundred years. It is a well documented history, written by a qualified naval historian.

In 1845 Japan made clear to Commodore Biddle how, and how only, to command respect. In 1853 Commodore Perry profited by the lesson. He had learned that the Japanese, the most polite nation on earth; make courtesy pay cash dividends when it is backed by force. He met ceremonial bow with ceremonial bow, opened Japan to the western world, and what is now not remembered ended what had been an epoch of terror for the luckless whaler or shipwrecked American cast up on the shores of Japan.

The history of the hundred years of maneuvers and counter maneuvers in the Pacific is the constantly repeated bland excuse and disclaimer, so bland and so convincing that to most Americans at the time it looked like the navieté of childhood. "People who protest so charmingly can have no selfish aggression in their natures." Its high spots were first in the '70s when the Japanese navy came into being. We felt it in Manila with Dewey in '98. It first threatened to be alarming just after the Russo-Japanese war. It did become alarming during the first World war. It became critical in '22. Its moral was obvious in '31 when Japan seized Manchuria. Its natural denouement was Pearl Harbor. And yet, until that event jarred America and Britain into full consciousness, how little was known of Japanese ambitions!

Even as late as 1940, after the invasion and fall of France, Adm. Taussig was censured by official Washington for daring to say: "The first step in their plan is the dominance of the far east. . . . Past treaties, rights of neutrals, rules of civilized warfare as we understand them, are brushed aside and ignored in the furtherance of the plan."

There is only one chapter of the story that seems not fully revealed. There may be good diplomatic reasons for its withholding. I refer to the Japanese invasion of Manchuria in 1931 and the efforts of Mr. Stimson, then secretary of state, to enlist the aid of Britain to resist Japan. There were blunders a-plenty at the time. It will be good when the whole can be told. There is another that is as interesting—the story of the closing of the Burma road.

Sordid Story of Intrigue in French Africa

"VICHY—TWO YEARS OF DECEPTION," by Leon Marchal. [Macmillan, $2.50.]

Reviewed by John Cudahy.

Now that Gen. De Gaulle has been recognized in a Hollywood setting with the President and Mr. Churchill, perhaps the political complications which hover so heavily over the scene of military operations in the North African area may be dispelled within a measurable day. There is, however, not much hope in M. Marchal's book for that consummation so devoutly to be wished.

The author was a soldier in the last war and has had an active career in the French foreign service as chief of the trade and industry department in Morocco, and as counselor of the French embassy in Washington until the stench of Pierre Laval's restoration became too overpowering. He joined Gen. De Gaulle as a member of the staff of the Fighting French national office for foreign affairs on April 21, 1942.

This record would seem to reveal a man not only of wide experience but of conviction and one qualified to render enlightening testimony on the distressing spectacle of his prostrated country, but this promise is not fulfilled by M. Marchal's treatise. Rather we are given another dolorous, depressing screed, disclosing intrigue, demoralization, and an utter bankruptcy of leadership.

Between Petain and De Gaulle, the author indicates, the issue was clear from the beginning. Yet at the time of the debacle, in June, 1940, only three policies were open to Frenchmen: That of the aged marshal who preached resignation in the hope of attenuating the woes of his country and limiting the consequences of defeat; of Laval, who was openly for collaboration with the enemy, and of Hitler, who would spare France only for later annihilation.

Apparently the rallying voice of De Gaulle was lost in the fury of the storm. But the Vichy government, in the words of the author, never had "any juridical base and could in no way be considered, at home or abroad, as the legitimate government of France." This is a strange statement from one who for nearly two years acted as a servant of that same government and adjured fidelity to the chief of state, lauded by our ambassador, Adm. Leahy, as "one of the noblest and greatest of contemporary figures."

What Americans would like to know is how the French people in France think and feel in the affliction that has overwhelmed them, and on this score M. Marchal's pages contribute little.

Tart Flavor Infuses Book by Priestley

"BLACK-OUT IN GRETLEY," by J. B. Priestley. [Harper, $2.50.]

Reviewed by John Frederick Nims.

Humphrey Neyland, stepping from his train into the blackness of Gretley, finds a queer assortment of mystery people; rouged Mr. Perigo, whose woman's voice finds the British war effort "pathetic"; Sheila, the impudent party-girl with frightened eyes; Diana Axton, Brunhildesque bookseller who admits, "I've not had much kissing lately, and I could do with plenty"; Mrs. Jesmund, elegant patron of the black market; Fifine of Strasburg, "powerful as a young horse"; Mr. Timon, who looked like a foreign agent and therefore probably was not one; Olney, the factory guard, with his knowledge of passwords and his secret notebook; Col. Tarlington, patriotic orator who "looks red, white, and blue"; Morris, his military butler with the scarred cheek; Dr. Margaret Bauernstern, lovely and apprehensive; Supt. Hamp, "a massive reddish man, ruminating there like a buffalo."

These lead Neyland thru an exciting chase of murder, treason, and espionage. At the end, when he lies wounded in the home of the woman he loves, it is with the knowledge that two of the company have been arrested as German agents, another has been killed in an "accident," two killed in gunplay, one self-murdered.

Tho this is primarily an adventure story, suspense and meaning are intensified by the profound black-out that falls on the twisted streets of Gretley, by the mood of Neyland himself, caustic and disappointed, by the atmosphere of dissatisfaction, almost of gloom, that emanates from the thought of the author. It is partly this tartness that makes the book more than a mere thriller. Neyland is a philosopher and social critic; he sees Gretley as "one of those English towns . . . built simply to make money for people who don't even condescend to live in them." He sees popular fiction as "showing south sea maidens and shop girls marrying dukes, pure opium without a hangover at about a farthing an hour."

More interesting is Neyland's attitude toward the war, which is surely Priestley's: this is not merely a nationalistic war, like World War I.; it is a war over two views of human nature, complicated by all kinds of social, political, and personal factors. Joe Stalin may be tough, "but in the long run he's plotting and planning to give the folk who believe in him the best life possible"; Churchill may be old-fashioned, but he and Roosevelt stand for the common man. The Fascist ideal, however, "despises ordinary decent folk."

Priestley insists too that not everything we are fighting for is good. The social system, "diseased in every part," must be changed or we will soon be "dying on the same old feet." We can only effect this change "by taking a firm grip on about fifty thousand important, influential, gentlemanly persons and telling them firmly to shut up. . . ."

Altho the war is about the "common people," Priestley finds annoying "their slow patience, their lack of fire and fury." They should destroy Hitler and his kind, and then tear down the slums of Gretley and everything like them.

This social wisdom is well integrated with a fast moving tale, which does not pause to sermonize. One might object to the technique: there is some facile mystification, too much coincidence in the intrigue, too much Hitchcock melodrama in the finale. Above all, Neyland has too much "luck and impudence"; when he has no evidence he shouts at the guilty until they shrivel and confess. Casual in the most hair-raising crisis, he always conquers. But, perhaps, in heroes of adventure-fiction, we should be willing to accept the convention of omnipotence.

Proud History of Astronomy

"THE GREATEST EYE IN THE WORLD," by A. Frederick Collins. [Appleton-Century, $3.]

Reviewed by Oliver J. Lee.

This book will be a valuable addition to the lay reader's library as well as to the amateur and the professional astronomer.

This is a specific way of saying it is an unusual book. Nearly a third is devoted to the history of telescopes, the making, testing, and mounting of lenses and mirrors used in astronomy.

The large two-thirds of the book describes the Royal observatory at Greenwich, England, and most of the larger ones in this country. In each case he weaves into a charming historical picture the personalities of those who founded or "prayed" the instruments and observatories into existence. The narrative is so rich in detail that the reader almost gets the impression that Mr. Collins knew them all personally as friends and was on the spot when things began and developed. From the discussion of why and how the Greenwich observatory was founded by King Charles II. in 1675 to the description of the still unfinished 200 inch giant of Mount Palomar—nearly 270 years—he discusses most intelligently even the detailed results obtained with these "great eyes."

Hansen Finds Plenty of Talk and People at Literary Party

By Harry Hansen.

New York.

A GROUP of authors was tossing off cocktails at the Hotel Marguery the other day and the reason was that the Houghton Mifflin company was giving a welcome to one of its staff, Hardwick Moseley, who has been its manager in Chicago and has now transferred his office to New York to succeed Le Baron Barker, who becomes an editor for Doubleday, Doran.

I had a brief chat with Stuart Cloete, who used to run a farm in South Africa and became so interested in the history of the settlement of that country that he made it the basis for his novels, "Watch for the Dawn," "The Turning Wheels," and "The Hill of Doves." He has just finished reading the proofs of his latest novel, "Congo Song," which, I warn you, is not for the squeamish.

Observing the strange emotional upsets that occur to men and women in the exotic African atmosphere, Cloete has followed the trail of a predatory female in a way that no one is going to forget for some time. The author is a tall and reserved Englishman, who once served with the Coldstream Guards.

Vivacious and lively and twice as talkative as her husband was Mary Lasswell, who tells me that I have a peck of fun coming to me if I will read her book, "Suds in Your Eye," which deals with the antics of Mrs. Feely, who inherited a junk yard, and her friends, Mrs. Rasmussen and Miss Tinkham. I discovered that it was published last fall and has kicked up enough interest already to get the movie people excited about it. Mary's husband, an ensign in the United States navy, lent dignity to the gathering.

Maj. Eliot Recently Married.

Quite unexpectedly I ran into a bride of a week, June Hynd, who used to assist Miss Margaret Cuthbert in programs at NBC, and there, tagging along, was her husband, Maj. George Fielding Eliot, about four times the size of his wife, and characterized by Dale Warren with a pun on his book as "the rampart we watch." The major, too, is a Houghton Mifflin author. Angia Seton Chase, granddaughter of Ernest Seton Thompson, wrote a novel about Theodosia Burr a few years ago, and she told me about the profit she has had from digging into the way people lived along the Hudson river valley in the 1840's. At that time the new aristocracy of wealth began building its houses on the eastern bank of the valley, within close reach of New York City, and the architecture since known as "Hudson river bracketed" was developed. It is a period of both dawn and twilight, and the hills exercised an eerie fascination, while strange people live out their lives in villages and farms. She is writing a new novel about this section.

Thus, in this group of authors, no one was trying to write like any one else.

Chicagoans Advancing to Fore.

Chicago authors and Chicago themes are taking an important place in the new booklists. Alfred A. Knopf announces the publication of the first volume of Philip Kinsley's "The Chicago Tribune: Its First Hundred Years" for April. This will deal with the years 1847 to 1865, and thus cover the early campaigns of the Republican party and the relation of the newspaper to Lincoln. While a number of volumes were necessary to tell the story of the Times of London, this is the first time that such an extensive study of an American newspaper has been made. I have just been reading "Lords of the Levee," by Lloyd Wendt and Herman Kogan, and my eyes are popping at the antics of Hinky Dink and Bathhouse John. Ernest Poole's story of Chicago's leaders, "Giants Gone," appears Feb. 12.

Award Set Up for Publishers.

Frederic G. Melcher, the tall and ubiquitous editor of Publishers' Weekly, called me up to tell me that he had originated another award on behalf of his periodical. "I think publishers ought to be encouraged when they do a good job," said he; "there are plenty of prizes for authors. So we are starting the Carey-Thomas award and a committee has given the first one to Farrar & Rinehart for the Rivers of America series. I I thought you'd like to know and come to the ceremonies as an author associated with the series."

Attending ceremonies of this kind always interests me, because usually they begin with luncn. I asked Fred what in the world Carey-Thomas meant, and he revealed another of his original ideas. Carey and Thomas were American publishers whose names are forgotten. Mathew Carey did some pioneer printing in Philadelphia between 1770 and 1802, and Isaiah Thomas did the same in Worcester, Mass., about the same time. Carey was full of ideas, and Fred thinks he originated more new ways of making and selling books than has any living publisher. Carey helped Noah Webster with his grammar. Thomas took part in the battle of Lexington. He became a printer's apprentice at the age of 8.

Wilders' Debt Acknowledged.

Altho Thornton Wilder has made no attempt to answer the two authors who accused him of getting the ideas for his play, "The Skin of Our Teeth," from James Joyce's "Finnegans Wake," Edmund Wilson, friend of Wilder and careful student of Joyce's tangled sentences, says their charge is correct. He says that Wilder has been saturated with Joyce's work, has lectured on the subject, and knows "Finnegans Wake" intimately.

There is no reason at all why one mind should not give hints to another mind, thinks Wilson; moreover, it is in keeping with Wilder's earlier practices to adapt such literary devices, as witness the relation of "The Woman of Andros" to a play by Terence. Wilson thinks the indebtedness was conscious. In the meantime "The Skin of Our Teeth" is a hit, and is being enjoyed by many [including the drama critics] who would be mystified by Joyce's book.

Woollcott's Friends Uncomfortable.

While Alexander Woollcott's death shocked many of his friends, I doubt that they found the memorial service for him easy to take. As Ruth Gordon said: "I don't think Alec would approve of everything we are doing here."

The extravagant claims put forth for Woollcott by one speaker were not in keeping with realistic journalism. "He made the Stars and Stripes," said one orator, referring to the newspaper of the AEF. Harold Ross, who edited that newspaper, was sitting in the audience; I wonder what he thought. Woollcott helped on the staff of the paper.

Bridegroom Keeps Mischa from Making a Living

HOLLYWOOD (AP).—When Reginald Gardiner was married recently he borrowed Mischa Auer's dress suit for the ceremony. He forgot all about the loan. Then he received this wire from Mischa: "If you're thru getting married, old boy, send back the white tie and tails. I have to make a living in them."

Army Influence Is Felt in New 'Our Gang' Film

HOLLYWOOD (AP).—The army influence is asserting itself among the "Our Gang" kids. Since the moppets range in age from 4 to 10 years, Director Bert Glazer found it difficult to maintain discipline while filming "Home Front Commandos," but solved it by awarding a captaincy each morning to the youngster who had the best conduct the previous day. The captain was required to keep order and any lapses caused him to lose his rank and start over again. To date, talkative Janet Burton, 6, hasn't been able to advance beyond the buck private stage.

"The Patriots" Broadway's Newest Historical Play

Critic Fears Drama Lacks Human Appeal

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK [Special]. — Sidney Kingsley's "The Patriots," the play of the week, was undoubtedly inspired by the success of Robert Sherwood's "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," and serves as an excellent companion drama to that minor masterpiece of historical biography. But where Sherwood had the advantage of writing sympathetically of a single and greatly loved American hero, Kingsley has taken on the task of revealing the political aims, purposes, and ambitions of three, an idealistic Thomas Jefferson, an over-ambitious and openly rebellious Alexander Hamilton, and a tired and troubled George Washington.

The result is not a scattering of dramatic ammunition so much as it is a concentration on political rather than human issues. Politics is for politicians, students, and such, rather than for lay folk, such as you and me. Therefore, I am inclined to fear that "The Patriots" may miss the wide, human appeal of "Abe Lincoln."

However, I count it a fine and often stirring drama. Pooling their weaknesses with their strength, any honest American citizen can look upon and listen to these patriots and say, with feeling, "these are my people!"

Mr. Kingsley sees Jefferson as half dreamer and half stalwart statesman; Hamilton as both an opportunist and a high minded visionary; Washington as a worried militarist who found himself frankly out of his element and miserably disturbed by the bickerings of his political aids.

They form a substantial part of the foundations of the republic our men in service are fighting this day to preserve. It is to be hoped they will be properly accepted and honored in these excerpts cut from the pattern of their lives.

Jefferson is returning from Paris with his daughter, Patsy, when we meet him first in Mr. Kingsley's play. They stand on the deck of a schooner as they approach land, and the thought of their country's nearness inspires memories in the mind of the statesman. Memories of the lovely wife he has lost, and of Monticello, where he hopes to retire. But upon the thought of retirement intrudes also a memory of the fight for the Declaration of Independence which he had written and helped to force thru the continental congress.

We are with Jefferson when President Washington induces him to accept the post of secretary of state, for a little while at least. We are with him when he quarrels bitterly with Hamilton over matters of public policy and the rights of the people to rule the country in the terms of the liberty they have won.

It is not until the end of the play that the issue between Jefferson and Hamilton is resolved. Then Hamilton, acknowledging himself beaten, throws his strength to the election of Jefferson over Aaron Burr. This, Hamilton prophesies, will result in his being challenged to a duel by Burr and, knowing his own weakness as a duelist, he is, in effect, he says, signing his own death warrant.

The last scene of all is the Jefferson inaugural, with a part of the President's speech highlighted on a darkened stage.

• • •

"The Patriots" is splendidly staged and ably acted. The Jefferson rôle has fallen to a radio actor, Raymond Edward Johnson, who has for some years been no more than a voice to followers of the drama of the air waves. He happens to be of a size to match Jefferson's, to be blessed with a sympathetic personality suited to that of an idealist, and his voice and diction are excellent. His first night success was unquestioned.

Madge Evans.

House Jameson, who last season played so assertive a Senator Lodge in the Wilson play, "In Time to Come," as to stir the consuming hatred of all Wilson adherents, has now the job of irritating Jefferson and Washington. He is the aggressively determined Hamilton, and again he scores with the thoroness of his characterization.

The Washington is Cecil Humphreys and another fine character study, plus a startling resemblance to the Stuart painting of Washington.

Madge Evans, Mr. Kingsley's pretty wife, plays the Jefferson daughter, and there are many short parts ably taken. The scenes, by Howard Bay, are modest but most attractive in coloring and in colonial patterns. Sheppard Traube, the discoverer and producer of "Angel Street," did the directing for the Playwrights' company and Rowland Stebbins, who are the joint producers.

IN THE MOONBOW SALOON

John De Shay, as Pvt. Francis Marion, tries out his unique poetic line on Doris Donaldson, as Lill Bird, in a scene of "The Eve of St. Mark" at the Harris theater.

When Chicago Was Young

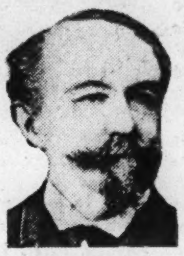
By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Feb. 1, 1895.

Dear Julia: And so Ward McAllister is dead! Will thinks that the late ruler of New York society has probably already suggested to St. Peter that he must be assigned a mansion on an exclusive street. He certainly will find saints up there who are not of his set.

He was a unique character, wasn't he? Not by any means wholly admirable, he had his good qualities. After reading the newspaper account of his death I picked up his book, presented to me by Will as a joke when it came out five years ago. Reading his "Society as I Have Found It," one can hardly imagine a grown man gloating over his successes in planning a dinner or arranging a ball. Equally odd is it to think of New York society accepting him as an arbiter. Of course, I know that not all New York bent the knee to him. I remember that you resented his including your name in his list of New York's Four Hundred when he made it up in 1888. You wrote then, I recall, that you thought he was impertinent to assume to decide who was in the inner circle which he called the city's highest.



Ward McAllister.

Yet you did enjoy his Newport picnics, didn't you? I think they must have been quite charming. In his book he describes one he gave at his Bayside Farm there, with the guests "sitting on the closely cut turf, the little garden filled with beautiful standing plants, and the eastern side of the farmhouse covered with vines, laden with pumpkins, melons, and cucumbers, all giving a mixture of bright color against a green background."

The barn dance which concluded the picnic must have been delightful for the young people, with the abandoned horse stalls adorned with vines and greenery; a band of musicians playing in the hayloft; and the center of the building floored over for dancing.

Looking over his book, I find only one reference to his wife, yet she is living, for the newspapers speak of her presence at his death bed. He says of her only: "After my marriage, I took up my residence in Newport." He gives her no credit for being a help in entertaining.

Will was surprised at his age, 65 years. Most people must have thought him much younger, supposing that any one who was so childishly pleased over trifles must be an adolescent. Yet in 1862 he was already actively entertaining and gave a party in his brother-in-law's country place to which he invited "a dozen of the most fastidious people of Newport to pass 10 days with us in New Jersey; engaged a band of musicians; telegraphed to Baltimore for canvasbacks; arranged for fish, vegetables, and flowers to be sent up by train daily from New York . . . sent up my wines, but no Madiero, as I knew there was enough of that in the wine cellars of that house to float a frigate." And this was during the Civil war, while my husband was fighting for his country and you and I were scraping lint for hospitals! To be sure, Mr. McAllister was a southerner by birth and would not have been fighting in the Union army, but he should have been in the south, I think, sharing the deprivations suffered by his relatives.

I presume it must be admitted that he knew wines as few other men in America know them, not a distinction I should care for, but it is something to be supreme in one line of endeavor! His solemn pronouncements on the best way to buy and prepare certain foods are so amusing that Will has kept me laughing, as he read them from his book. "For 40 years," he says, "I have marketed myself and secured the respect of my butcher, letting him know that I knew as much if not more than he did." Will fears our butcher doesn't respect us, which is doubtless true. "Parch and grind your coffee," pontificates Mr. McAllister. "Always buy green coffee." Well, I don't do that any more. It's too much work for the cook. I'm only too happy that we can get it browned.

May his soul rest in peace! And may we be delivered from the snobbery he fostered! Lovingly yours,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOT NOTES.

Ward McAllister, king of snobs, is all but forgotten, yet his phrase, "The Four Hundred," still denotes the socially elect.

From a Nebraska Pioneer.

Mrs. Minnie Freeman Penney, past Illinois state president of the National League of American Penwomen, writes: "I love your column. You have made me acquainted with Chicago past and present. Nebraska will always be home to me, but I am also very fond and appreciative of Chicago, since I know its warm heart."

Poem of the Week.

Contented John.

If you'd like this old rhyme, written more than 100 years ago by Jane Taylor, send stamped, addressed envelope to Herma Clark, care CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Tribune Tower, Chicago.

Awaits U. S. Residence.

Zino Francescatti, French violinist, is on the quota waiting for permanent residence in the United States. Mr. Francescatti, who made his Chicago debut three years ago, returned to appear with the Chicago Symphony orchestra at the concerts Jan. 28 and 29.

POPULAR RECORDINGS

Tommy Dorsey approaches the form of his famous "I'll Never Smile Again" in a new Victor pressing, "It Started All Over Again." This is a springtime ballad, with Frank Sinatra and the Pied Pipers going strong on the vocals. It's B side is a powerful swing rendition of "Mandy, Make Up Your Mind." The music builds up swiftly in tempo from a lightly-politely piano introduction.

If you aren't acquainted with Big Maceo, who is Maceo Merriweather, you may have a pleasant surprise coming, depending upon how well you like your blues singing. Big Maceo's newest Bluebird number is "Anytime for You," and "Since You Been Gone."

• • •

Jazz devotees shouldn't miss Hugues Panassie's new book, "The Real Jazz." [Smith and Durrell, $2.50.] Self-admittedly it exposes his famous "Le Jazz Hot" as an overrated masterpiece of misinformation about the world of jazz. Panassie has swung to the Negro side of jazz now, and in swinging becomes, perhaps for the first time, logical in his explanation of the artistic impregnability of real jazz. The longhairs who protest against sincere and capable improvisation, which is the sum and substance of jazz, are hoist by their own petard when Panassie quotes some of the more alert of their number in admitting that only by improvisation does any artist ever come close to the real spirit of any given composer.

To Relieve Bad Cough, Mix This Recipe, at Home

Big Saving. No Cooking. So Easy.

You'll be surprised how quickly and easily you can relieve coughs due to colds, when you try this splendid recipe. It gives you about four times as much cough medicine for your money, and you'll find it truly wonderful.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking needed—it's no trouble at all. (Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.) Then put 2½ ounces of Pinex (obtained from any druggist) into a pint bottle. Add your syrup and you have a full pint of medicine that will amaze you by its quick action. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

This simple mixture takes right hold of a cough. For real results, you've never seen anything better. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and eases the soreness.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its prompt action in coughs and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

Data Compiled and Translated by U. of C. Men

By the Rev. John Evans.

Students of ancient middle east history who would like to know precise dates of important events, such as the occupation of Babylon by the Persian conqueror, Cyrus, or the crucifixion of Christ, or the day on which reconstruction was begun on the temple in Jerusalem, may now have them.

Moreover, the dates may be relied upon as being accurate. For example, the three foregoing events occurred, respectively, as follows: Babylon fell on Oct. 13, 539 B. C. The crucifixion was on April 7, 30 A. D., and the temple started its rise after the diaspora on Sept. 21, 520 B. C.

The prodigious job of translating ancient calendars into Gregorian tabulations, as well as nailing down dates on ancient calendars by relating those events to astronomical movements and to other known changes such as in literary means and methods and thru countless other critical investigations, was done by Dr. Richard A. Parker and Dr. Waldo Dubberstein of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago.

The Parker-Dubberstein Babylonian Chronology, covering the period 626 B. C., to 45 A. D., has just been published by the University of Chicago Press. Students of history, with the aid of this chronology, may translate ancient dates into the modern calendar with a speed and accuracy never before possible.

When Prof. Albert T. Olmstead of the institute, in a notable lectureship at Oberlin, made use of the then incomplete Parker-Dubberstein calculations in dating the crucifixion, he created a near sensation in the field of biblical scholarship. At that time a large part of the surprise to scholars was his yet to be upset evidence that the Gospel of St. John contains the most reliable New Testament history.

Some of the most valuable research material used in evolving the Parker-Dubberstein Babylonian calendar was composed of hundreds of clay tablets containing dated records of business transactions. Thru these the authors were able to establish a pattern for the placement of added months made necessary by the vagaries of a calendar based on the movement of the moon. Three Babylonian letters, one a royal message by a Babylonian king during the 6th century B. C., were cited as especially important.

National teachers' examinations will be given at Evanston Township High school on March 12 and 13. Dr. Ray M. Simpson, local examiner for the national committee, urges all candidates for teaching positions in suburban schools to take the examinations and present national teacher examination records, together with other credentials in making application for teaching positions. The last day for applications for the examinations is next Saturday.

When the mobile Red Cross blood unit visited DePauw university, Greencastle, Ind., last week, it was "your blood or your muscles." Blood donors were exempt all week from daily toughening exercises in preparation for induction. Nondonors were put thru their paces by the physical education department without mercy.

Notes of the Theater

"The Eve of St. Mark" will offer a special Washington's birthday matinée at the Harris theater on Monday, Feb. 22. Incidentally, the Playwrights' company, which produced "The Eve of St. Mark," is feeling justifiably proud of itself these days. Its third production of the season also is its third hit. Sidney Kingsley's "The Patriots," centered upon the life of Thomas Jefferson, won critical accolades after its New York première 10 days ago. This is the first play produced by the Playwrights' company which was not written by one of its members—Maxwell Anderson, S. N. Behrman, Elmer Rice, Robert Sherwood, and the late Sidney Howard. The playwrights' other smash hit is Mr. Behrman's "The Pirate," in which Alfred Hunt and Lynn Fontanne are starred.

"Maid in the Ozarks" has added two matinées a week to its schedule at the Great Northern theater. In addition to the 2:30 matinée on Saturday, a weekly matinée will be offered at 2:30 on Wednesday and at 3 on Sunday. This remarkable play, which the critics thought would expire within a few days last September, has now triumphantly reached its 22d week, which means that it is about to begin its sixth month. The management, which obviously can't count, has already been advertising "sixth month" for some time.

OLD NORWEGIAN CHURCH PLANS 95TH BIRTHDAY

Edifice in Lake View Started in 1848.

The Lake View Lutheran church, oldest Scandinavian Lutheran congregation in Chicago, will celebrate its 95th anniversary next Sunday with special church services, an all-congregation dinner, and a midafternoon forum for members of the church and community.

Dr. O. J. H. Preus, president of Luther college, Decorah, Ia., will deliver the festival sermon during the morning services, beginning at 10:45 o'clock. The choir, directed by Mrs. Chris Seversen and accompanied on the organ by Mrs. Fritjof Siqueland, will present special choral music.

Plan Class Reunions.

At 12 o'clock noon the Ladies Aid, whose president is Mrs. George McLennan, will serve a dinner in the church parlors. Confirmants of the Lake View and Old North Side churches will hold class reunions following the dinner.

Festivities will conclude with the 3:30 o'clock session in the church parlors. During this open forum congregation and community leaders will discuss how the Lake View church can extend its service. Members of the Lake View Council of Religious Action will express their views. The Rev. O. L. Grefthen, pastor of the church, will be discussion chairman.

Chicago was a roaring, frontier town of 27,000 persons when, under the pastorate of the Rev. Paul Andersen, the Lake View church was incorporated Feb. 14, 1848.

Began with Mission.

It had had its beginnings 14 years earlier in a Scandinavian immigrant mission, whose place of worship was a small wooden structure at Superior and Franklin streets. When the congregation grew too large for the small quarters the Swedish colony broke away to form its own congregation.

Today the Lake View church is still officially the Norwegian Evangelical Lutheran church of Chicago. It is the mother church of its synod, the Norwegian Lutheran church of America, and has as its offspring 30 virile congregations, of which 28 are established churches and two are missions.

In the pages of an old bookkeeper's ledger is recorded with painstaking care the history of the church and its people. The christening dates of many of Chicago's civic leaders—the story of the $16,000 church edifice, built in 1855 and destroyed in the Chicago fire of 1871—an account of the shifting of the Norwegian community from the near north side to the Lake View area and the subsequent removal of the church to Roscoe and Kenmore streets in 1891—all can be found in the frayed ledger.

Lake View Pastors.

Pastors who have served the church since its establishment in Lake View include the Rev. S. T. Reque, the Rev. P. A. Kittelsby, the Rev. Clarence Haugen, the Rev. G. A. Lillegard, the Rev. P. C. Krey, the Rev. C. A. Davick, the Rev. N. G. Maakestad, the Rev. H. P. Ausan, and its present pastor, the Rev. Mr. Grefthen, whose pastorate began in 1933.

Members of the anniversary committee are Arthur E. Alfsen, chairman; Paul Wadsworth, Miss Minnie Pedersen, Miss Alice Pedersen, Mrs. Dorothy Tallakson, Miss June Tertz, Mr. and Mrs. Chris Seversen, Charles Olson, Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Anderson, Fritjof Siqueland, Mr. and Mrs. Magnus Moe, Miss Irene Svor, and Miss Leona Svor.

TWO WOMEN, 154 MEN REMAIN IN COUNCIL RACES

One hundred fifty-four men and two women remained in the race for Chicago's 50 aldermanic posts after the withdrawal deadline last Wednesday.

Of the 202 who filed for the offices between Dec. 26 and Jan. 19, 46 eliminated themselves or were eliminated. Of these, 39 withdrew, 12 of them after the validity of their nominating petitions had been questioned. The names of seven others were ordered off the ballots because of deficiencies in their petitions.

The two women still in are Florence Tye Jennison [20th] and Mrs. Catherine Reutel [45th]. Feminine candidates in the 11th and 44th wards were disqualified and one in the 5th ward withdrew.

Sitting aldermen are unopposed in four wards—the 4th, 24th, 28th, and 30th. Eleven wards have only two candidates each and thus are certain to avoid runoffs. They are wards 1, 9, 11, 25, 27, 31, 32, 34, 37, 48, and 49. Incumbent aldermen are seeking election in all except the 1st, 16th, and 40th wards. There are vacancies in the 5th, 7th, 10th, 14th, 20th, 22d, 33d, and 37th wards.

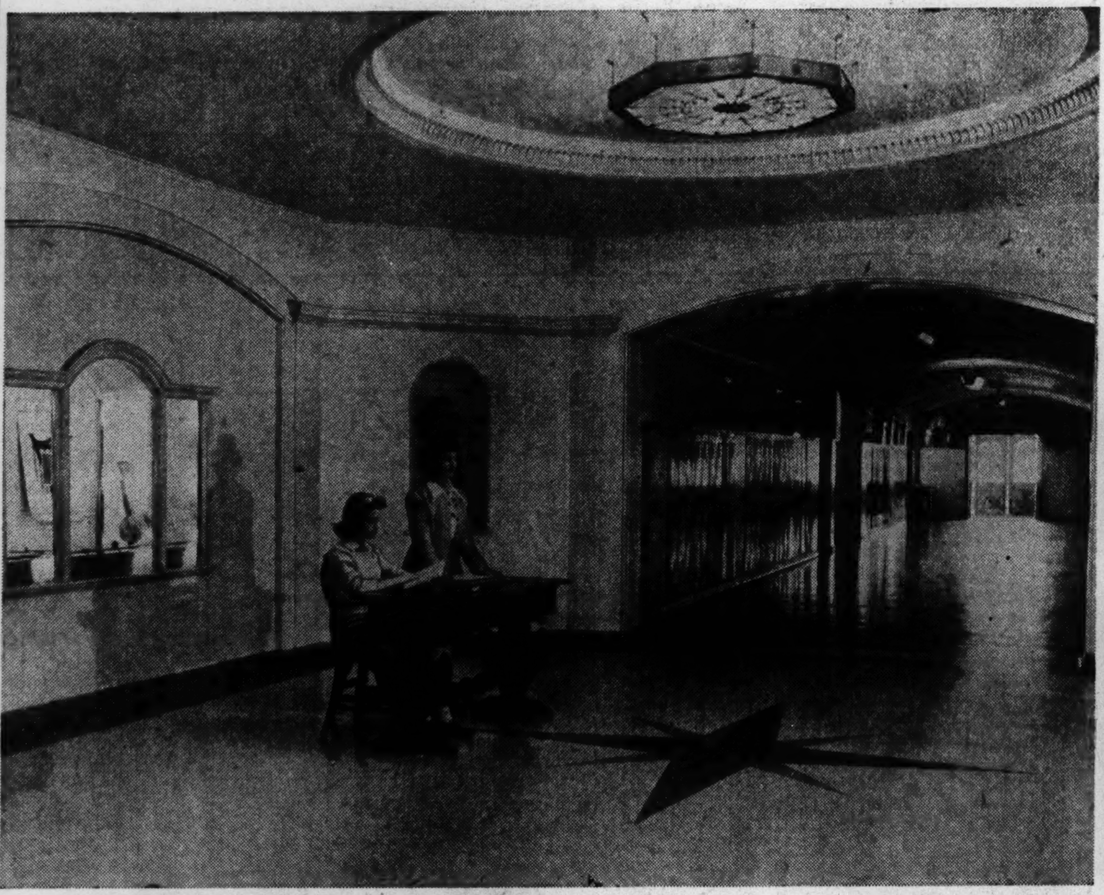
Spacious Halls and Cheery Classrooms Make High School Pleasant at Lake Forest



In the entrance lobby of the Lake Forest High school, which will be honored on "Citizens of Tomorrow" at 1 o'clock this afternoon over station W-G-N, is a desk manned thru each school day by members of the school's student council. It is their pleasant duty to greet all visitors and escort them to whomever they wish to see. This desk serves, also, as a training post for graciousness and poise for all students of the school. Seated in the rotunda is Harriet Johnson. Her co-hostess is Marilyn Barker, president of the council.

Another happy day of school is over for Mara Ruth Glover, Marilynn Hummer, Sheldon Udell, and Jean Hansen. They leave the front entrance of the huge building to board buses, hop on their bicycles, or to begin the long, healthy "hike" home.

A sunny library with its 3,600 volumes of fiction and nonfiction, popular magazines, current newspapers, and pamphlets on colleges and careers every day is the scene of serious study and research for themes and term papers. There is a fireplace to furnish a note of cheer on dreary days.

• The two story gymnasium, complete with an indoor track and an inviting white tile swimming pool, is a favorite meeting place for boys and girls alike. Marvin French, Jim Northrop, and Arnold Larsen come down the wide cement steps of the portico. Jim is one of the Lake Forest students who are leaving school before graduation to enter college. The round tags on the other two boys identify them as part of the school's contingent from the Great Lakes Naval Training station. A navy bus transports them to and from the station where their fathers serve in the navy.

Art work of all kinds is encouraged in the Lake Forest High school. Living testimony of talents developed in the school can be found in the many gay, student created murals which decorate the corridors. Students at work in the art room are (left to right) Don Tennyson, Cynthia Udell, Judy Pedersen, Barbara Luten, (back) Merri Jeane Woodsmall, Nancy Bouchard, and Susan Wilcox.

Church News Letter Tells Yanks of Pals

When a boy goes off to war—sometimes to almost the ends of the earth—he craves news of home and friends. And this is what the Holy Name society of St. Francis Xavier church of Wilmette is supplying to each of the parish's 109 service men in a monthly mimeographed news letter.

Bob Hammes' appearance on a radio program from London and W-G-N's making a recording for the family; Charlie Kent's calling from the coast to report his "sub" home safely from a trip to Africa; Bill Rushli's wisecracking, "Did you hear about the farmer who moved into the city when he heard the country was at war?"—all are reported faithfully.

All "Big Names."

Whatever happens to any one of the boys is big news in the bulletin. He may be an army private, or he may be a lieutenant commander in the navy. All are "big names" to the military committee of the society.

Usually there's a spiritual note included in the letter. One month it was news that a roll of honor had been placed before the altar of the Sacred Heart as a constant silent prayer for their protection. Another month the bulletin told of a new practice in the church—every one's staying after mass and joining in a litany of the Blessed Virgin for the men in the army and navy.

Medal with Letter.

At Christmas time the news letter was accompanied by a St. Christopher medal and a spiritual message from St. Francis' pastor, the Rev. Martin D. McNamara.

The January issue brought each soldier and sailor a complete list of the service men of the parish — together with an up to date list of their mailing addresses.

The military committee, which works long hours gathering and editing the news, has as its members: Robert B. Little [chairman], Clement A. Berghoff, George C. Blohm, Michael J. Flynn, William J. Murphy, and Thomas F. Wolfe. The whole parish coöperates in furnishing "news tips."

Yanks Tell Pleasure.

There is no question about the success of the venture. Thru all of the dozens of letters received by the committee is the ever recurring theme of appreciation. Perhaps this boy has expressed what most are saying:

"The news letter was swell, and thanks a lot! It sure makes a fellow perk up when he's remembered at home and especially at his church. After all, fighting a war would be a pretty hard job if it were not for God's help. And with all you people at home cheering us and praying for us, how can we lose!"

CATHOLIC WAR VETS WILL MARK LINCOLN'S BIRTH

Following posting of the colors a patriotic program will be presented. There will be entertainment and dancing.

In charge of arrangements for the evening is Karl A. Wise, third national vice commander.

Town and Garden Club to Hold Program Tuesday

Proceeds of a benefit party at St. Josaphat's church, 2311 Southport avenue, at 7:30 o'clock this evening in the auditorium will go toward the support of the La Sallette seminary at Mount Olivet, Ill., which is training priests to work in the reconstruction of Poland after the war.

Community Club to Meet Tuesday in Sheridan Park

A social meeting of the Community club of Sheridan Park will be held at 8 o'clock Tuesday at the Howe studio, 4536 Dover street. The program will be in charge of the home and education department under the chairmanship of Mrs. J. Schubert.

HARD BATTLES RAGE IN 44TH, 45TH AND 46TH

Aldermen Fight to Save Places.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Sitting aldermen in the 44th, 45th, and 46th wards are working hard this year to save their council seats from going to Republicans either in the election Feb. 23 or the run-off April 6. Observers predicted an almost certain run-off in the 45th ward, with similar additional contests possible for the other two.

Withdrawals, the deadline for which passed last Wednesday, failed to change materially the personnel setup as it existed when all the filings were in. Only two names were taken from the ballots in these wards. The election commission sustained objections to the nominating petitions of Mrs. Louise S. Guibor in the 44th and John N. Smith in the 45th.

Three Candidates in 44th.

Elimination of Mrs. Guibor left three candidates in the 44th—Ald. John J. Grealis, Kelly-Nash follower now completing his third term; David J. Wright, a state finance department official who has the G. O. P. ward organization's indorsement, and Edward D. Rogers, real estate man running as an independent.

Grealis asks reëlection because of the benefits he has brought his ward, including recreational facilities, the widening and paving of Fullerton avenue and Clark street, and general street resurfacing. Rogers declares that because he was born and raised in the ward he best understands its problems and desires.

Wright, an air service veteran of the last war, was for several years with the Pullman company, and formerly was a detective agency executive. He pledges full time devotion to his duties as alderman and to work for the city's good in general and his ward's in particular.

Merryman Opposes Meyer.

In the 45th the main fight as thus far developed is between Ald. Edwin F. Meyer, whom the Kelly-Nash forces are supporting for a fourth term, and his rival of four years ago, Theron W. Merryman, plumbing contractor who is indorsed by the regular G. O. P. ward organization headed by Charles J. Fleck.

Three other candidates are relying mainly on their own organizations to put them across, but they cannot, in the opinion of most observers, hope to do better than help force the election to a run-off. Perhaps the strongest of these three is William H. Feigenbutz, alderman of the 45th from 1927 until its boundaries were redrawn following the 1931 election.

The other candidates are Mrs. Catherine Reutel, mother of a grown family, and William F. Becker.

Republican in Last Elections.

The ward has gone Republican in the last two general elections, after giving a majority to Dwight H. Green for mayor in 1939. In that year Ald. Meyer was forced into a run-off with John Haderlein, a Courtney Democrat and son of a former alderman. In the run-off Haderlein came within a few hundred votes of election. G. O. P. leaders expressed confidence last week that the next alderman of the ward will be a Republican.

In the 46th ward an interesting three-sided contest has developed. Here, too, a run-off is considered possible. It is virtually certain that first place in the election will go to Ald. James F. Young, attorney who won a special election in 1936 to fill the unexpired term of Oscar F. Nelson, now a Superior court judge. Young, a former assistant corporation counsel, again has the indorsement of the city hall Democrats.

Second place will go either to George S. Lavin, who has the regular G. O. P. organization headed by Max Landesman, Judge Nelson's bailiff, pulling for him, or Harry W. Prafke, well known north side druggist who has been identified with Republican politics but is now running strictly as a nonpartisan.

Four years ago Landesman and four other candidates, among them a Courtney Democrat, together polled 12,411 votes to 13,344 for Ald. Young. The 46th went Republican in the 1940 gubernatorial election.

FOURTH QUARTER SCRAP CAMPAIGN NETS 2,000 TONS

North Area Collections Include Tin Cans.

Communities in the north metropolitan area collected four million pounds of salvage in the last three months of 1942, William L. McFetridge, area salvage director, announced last week. Of the total, 400,000 pounds was in tin cans.

Officials congratulated the collectors for their work and at the same time moved to halt a rumor that tin cans are no longer needed or wanted. The need is as great now as ever, a spokesman said, and housewives should continue to clean and save every can.

Can Collections Short.

Rationing of canned goods and shift from cans to glass or other containers for many items may reduce can collections, officials admitted, but even in the north area where results were comparatively good, the can collection was only half as great as was originally anticipated, they reported.

Division 8 includes Deerfield, West Deerfield, Shields, and Waukegan townships in Lake county. Henry B. Black of Waukegan is division OCD chief and Mrs. Philip Ringer of Highland Park is division salvage director. Outside of Waukegan, for which figures were not complete, Lake Forest led tin can collections in the division for the three months with 15,000 pounds.

Highland Park Is Depot.

Waukegan and North Chicago ship their own cans to a Gary detinning plant. Highland Park is the central shipping depot for cans from Deerfield, Highland Park, Lake Forest, and Lake Bluff.

Division 9, which includes the city of Evanston, all of Niles, New Trier, and Northfield townships and part of Maine and Wheeling townships, shipped 325,000 pounds of cans and 2,100,000 pounds of other salvage in the three months, salvage office reports showed.

Evanston Leads Division.

Evanston led the division with 60,000 pounds of cans shipped in December alone and good records for the other two months, altho figures were not complete. Wilmette was next with approximately 50,000 pounds of cans shipped in three months and Glencoe also was high with approximately 25,000 pounds shipped in three months.

AIR APPEALS NET FLOOD OF KEYS, KNIVES, PENNIES

Donations of Listeners Boost Salvage.

Pictures of the headliners of the Chicago Theater of the Air, broadcasting operettas over W-G-N-Mutual at 8 p. m. Saturdays, are presented in the "Album of the Air" in today's picture section of the Tribune. Photos of the stars of the Abbott and Costello show also are included on the page.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Fulton Lewis Jr., W-G-N Mutual Washington commentator, started something when he broadcast several appeals to listeners to send in their old keys so that copper and nickel may be extracted from them for war uses.

He got more than 5,000,000 keys [more than 46 tons] and a lot of assorted other items including burglar kits, old fashioned watches, brass knuckles, counterfeit coins, and three fur coats from a lady in Maine who thought they might be used by soldiers in Arctic climes.

Starts Flood of Pennies.

Then Ralph Edwards, who conducts Truth or Consequences on NBC, started a flood of pennies addressed to Mrs. Dennis Mullane of Staten Island. "Consequence" listeners were asked to send in a penny to Mrs. Mullane for her marine son's war bonds. The letters, some 250,000 of them, are averaging about three cents each. The campaign has reacted as a "consequence" on Edwards himself. The Mullane home overflowed with mail so Edwards had to put a staff of 15 workers to opening the letters. Some $7,000 has already been gathered for war bonds thru this stunt. And still the letters pour in.

Capt. Midnight of the Blue network has launched a nation-wide radio campaign titled "Save a Life with a Knife." The objective is to collect knives for American soldiers, marines, and navy men in the South Pacific.

Knives Have Trading Value.

Hunting knives, large sized pocket knives and Boy Scout knives are wanted. The blades should be over four but not more than eight inches long. The knives are valuable not only in combat but for their "trading" value with natives. Each contributor is being asked to put his name on a tag and tie it to the knife so that the soldier who receives it will know who sent it. The knives should be sent directly to Maj. Gen. B. M. Giles, commanding general, Fourth Air Force, San Francisco, Cal.

J. R. King in New M. C.

John Reed King has been named the master of ceremonies of the W-G-N-Mutual quiz show, Double or Nothing, aired at 8:30 p. m. Fridays. He succeeds Walter Compton, whose Washington duties forced him to give up the assignment.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, will speak.

Miss Claire will be cast in the singing rôle of Marguerite while the speaking lines will be taken by Laurette Fillbrandt, who has been engaged to portray all dramatic rôles for characters sung by Miss Claire.

Miss Fillbrandt has appeared on many leading network programs.

Mr. Conley will sing the rôle of Dr. Faust while Bret Morrison will take the speaking lines for the part. The radio adaptation of the opera was prepared by Jack La Frandre, writer-director of the Saturday night series. Musical background will be supplied by the W-G-N symphony orchestra under the direction of Henry Weber and by the chorus led by Robert Trendler.

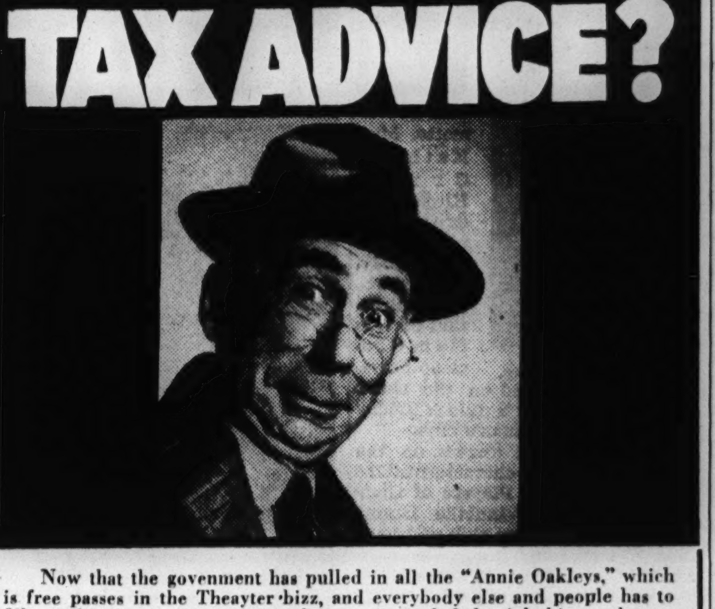
NEED SOME TAX ADVICE?



Now that the govenment has pulled in all the "Annie Oakleys," which is free passes in the Theayter bizz, and everybody else and people has to fill out his income tax report, the question of deductin' this or that or what can you, has got the new green taxpayers in a sort of a fuddle of a fog.

Just having stuck our big bazoo into the subject of why a guy or gal snores and come up with a few dillies of curable suggestions, we snooped around with the rest of the snoops until we unearthed a tax expert by name of Zeke Sleezy. And folks, if we hadn't Paul Pryed and been persistent with that long nose of ours, this guy might have expired on the vine, an unknown genius! Yes, a lot o' new green taxpayers would have had to do a powerful lot o' diddling between now and March 15 to figure out their gross and net income if we hadn't pried loose from Zeke the following gem of advice on HOW TO MAKE OUT YOUR INCOME TAX REPORT. Zeke put it this way:

First list as your dependents: Your wife—car—three goldfish—all children and the forty-odd crackpots Martin Dies sezs you're supportin' on the government payrolls, etc.

Now, multiply your grandfather's age by six and seven-eighths, subtract his telephone number. Next, add the size of his hat and subtract the number of his gasoline ration card.

Then, deduct one thousand dollars for keeping your wife, a blonde, redhead or brunette for the whole year, then divide the remainder by the number of lodges you belong to and the number of times you went to your local ration board for an extra gallon of fuel oil, multiply by the number of electric lights in the house, and divide by the size of your collar.

Now, then you have the gross income, which, after dividing by your chest measurement, and subtracting your blood pressure, gives you the net amount owed to the government.

Well, there 'tis folks, as clear cut a piece of advice as we'd ever seen before. If it helps out the new taxpayers, then we feel the money we threw away in this ad will be cabbage well spent. And speaking of corn, dinero or those filthy pieces of brass, if you get a few bucks and wanta have your duds washed in some high class suds, why, try Skokie's SUN-GLO Service. You'll say it's simply, simply The "NUTS" . . .

W-G-N CITIZENS SHOW TO HONOR LAKE FOREST HIGH

Principal Moore to Tell School's Objectives.

BY ANN FORD.

The Lake Forest High school will be honored at 1 o'clock this afternoon on "Citizens of Tomorrow," Sunday feature over station W-G-N, sponsored by THE TRIBUNE in tribute to Chicagoland high schools.

Raymond Moore, principal, will talk briefly on the school's efforts to hasten victory. He will point to the victory committee with its faculty and student representatives, to the new and revised wartime courses of study, to the school's emphasis on the world after the war.

Mixed Chorus to Sing.

Under the baton of John C. Maloney, director of music, the Lake Forest High school mixed chorus of 20 boys and 50 girls will be heard singing "Veni Jesu" by Chenubini, and "The World Is Waiting for the Sunrise" by Seitz.

Lake Forest's honor student, James W. Northrop Jr., son of the James Northrops of Lake Bluff, will be interviewed by Philip Maxwell, "principal of the air."

Today's program was recorded last Wednesday afternoon in the spacious gymnasium of the school with the entire student body in attendance. Leading the lusty cheers which open the show was Malcolm O'Donnell. Members of the color guard were William C. Bibb, Edward Dorn, and Leo Grost.

Like Country Estate.

The Lake Forest High school, looking more like a country estate with its Georgian type architecture and rolling, snow-covered fields, was built in 1935 to accommodate students residing in the northern portion of the Deerfield-Shields Township High school district.

Long, wide halls, bright and airy classrooms, comfortable lounges characterize the school physically. But more important than any of its physical accoutrements is the spirit of friendliness that fills these halls, classrooms, and lounges.

Perhaps this feeling of warmth stems from Mr. Moore, the school's principal, who knows each of his 400 students by name. Perhaps it grows out of a faculty, whose members all have private offices where all kinds of problems constantly are being discussed.

Perhaps this good fellowship is inspired by the student council. Or, perhaps, the boys' and girls' clubs in which each student automatically acquires membership once he is enrolled in the school.

Exude Cheery Welcome.

More likely than not, it's all these factors combined. At any rate, to even the most casual visitor students, principal, faculty, and building seem to unite in a cheery welcome and a hearty and sincere "come again."

Special guests who were present in the Lake Forest High school gymnasium to witness the recording were E. Francis Bowditch, headmaster, Lake Forest academy; Dr. M. G. Davis, superintendent of elementary schools in Lake Forest; Lt. Col. Chester Fordney of the United States marines; J. Russell Heitman, publisher of the Lake Forester; Dr. Ernest A. Johnson, president of Lake Forest college; William Just of the Waukegan News-Sun.

Mrs. Homer Kastrup, president, Lake Forest High School Service league; John C. McNicol, city manager of Lake Forest; James E. Payton, president, Lake Bluff village board; W. C. Petty, superintendent of Lake county schools; George T. Rogers, president, Deerfield-Shields Township High school board of education; Frank W. Read and Mrs. Herbert R. Smith, members of the board of education, and George C. Wright, principal, Lake Bluff school.

NEW HOT WATER TANK JACKET IS FUEL CONSERVER

Cover Also Gives Heater Attractive Front.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

There is a new and good looking jacket overcoat on the market, designed for the family hot water tank. It is reasonably priced and yet in its simulated wood grain finish of blue or green, it can take its place in bathroom, kitchen, or basement.

This tank jacket is a fuel saver. Its air cell construction holds fast to the heat in your tank instead of letting it steal out into the room. You also can count on water heating faster if your tank has one of these jackets, and it stays hot longer.

Simple to Install.

Construction consists of an inner layer of five-ply air cell insulating paper and an outer layer of corrugated paper. The jacket is simple to install, for it comes complete in one unit with detailed instructions as to how it should be fitted.

There's a jacket for a 30 gallon tank which costs around $2.50 and one for a 40 gallon tank which costs about $3.

Just what is the difference between maintenance and remodeling work? What limit is there on repair work; on remodeling? What sort of home can a war worker build, and what limit is there on war conversion and remodeling?

Good Guide Available.

These are questions frequently heard and the answers aren't always quick in coming. However, there is an excellent free booklet available which contains the answers to a great many questions home owners are asking now, and well worth a place in a home owners' shelf of building and remodeling data. It has been printed by a nationally known manufacturer of building materials and lives up to its title: "A War Time Guide to Better Homes."

There often isn't a great deal of difference between what spells repair work and remodeling work.

All the above items are elaborated upon and put forward with brevity and interest.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Feb. 8.

Make out the seed list and send it to the seedman immediately. Vegetable seeds will be short this season because citizens are realizing the importance of raising all the vegetables they can in their own yard.

Do not start spading unless the soil crumbles beneath the spade and can be easily broken up. If the soil is wet enough to stick to the spade it is too wet to spade. If some soils are spaded when too wet they will pack hard and dry out.

Tuesday, Feb. 9.

Grow some potatoes if the soil is suitable. Potatoes revel in a loose, loamy soil, one that is filled with humus. If it is heavy grow something else.

Most vegetables like full sun, but if only six hours of sun is available good vegetables can be grown. Sod land that was plowed last spring should produce good potatoes.

Wednesday, Feb. 10.

Gardeners who have only a small space will grow a little lettuce, chard, beets, or any of the smaller things and perhaps train tomatoes along the fence if there are hours of sunshine.

One of the best varieties is Firesteel; it has large fruits which are early, smooth and red. The vine is small and lends itself readily to staking. It is drouth resisting and matures in 62 days.

Edging vegetable plots with low growing flowers, such as ageratum little gem, white; marigold harmony, red and yellow hues; pansies for cutting in many shades: dwarf petunias, or other flowers adds much brilliancy to the general effect.

Thursday, Feb. 11.

If any tulip roots show thru the drainage hole bring a few pots in the window for flowering, but if they are not well rooted wait until they are. Continue to root cuttings for outdoor planting. Look over the garden and if any plants have heaved press the sail around them. After the bulbous plants are thru flowering continue to water them to encourage full maturity.

When the foliage turns yellow it signifies the bulbs have ripened and are in need of rest. Transplant the vinca rosea if the seedlings are large enough to handle.

Friday, Feb. 12.

Cyclamen bulbs can be saved for flowering again if properly handled, altho the flowers may be smaller than the first flowering period. Store in a cool place after flowering and when the ground is free from frost plant outdoors.

Water carefully; do not allow them to become too dry or they will suffer. Bordering the tulip bed with English daisies or pansies gives a fine effect. Sow annual vines; they lend a charm that cannot be obtained in any other way.

Saturday, Feb. 13.

Some kinds of dahlias do well, flowering freely, if sown early. These include the dwarf Unwin varieties. They are useful for bedding and cutting. Buy the seed now and sow about the end of the month.

Protect rhododendrons and boxwood with burlap, evergreen boughs, or shade with boards against the rays of the sun.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield Park conservatory.

PLASTIC BUGLES NEW—BUT SING SAME OLD TUNE

Chicago Firm to Deliver First Instruments.

Army buglers will start trading in their brass "gotta get up" instruments for new plastic models early next month when the Chicago Musical Instrument company, 30 East Adams street, makes its first deliveries of the recently perfected instrument. The United States army quartermaster corps has ordered 10,000 bugles from the company whose president is M. H. Berlin of Glencoe.

The plastic instruments are being moulded at the Elmer E. Mills corporation. Elmer E. Mills of Highland Park is its head. Credit for the invention goes to Frank Aman of 826 South Wabash avenue, an employé of the Mills company, who designed the bugle from a plastic material called cellulose acetate.

Mould, Fit Parts.

Twelve separate parts, moulded and fitted together on assembly jigs using acetone as glue, make up the bugle. The mouthpiece of the instrument is put on last. In his laboratory, Mr. Aman has built special wooden forms in the assembly unit to eliminate the use of critical materiels.

According to its inventor, the hand model of the plastic bugle is almost identical with the brass instrument. Size and color are patterned, exactly, from the original bugle. For army use the new instruments will be painted the same "olive drab" which is the required color for all brass bugles used by the quartermaster corps.

No Softer Notes.

Adding a gloomy note to any bright hopes that plastic bugles will blow softer early morning music than brass ones, Mr. Aman said tests have shown it is almost impossible to discern a difference in sound between the two instruments.

So, for the disillusioning information of all sleepy soldier boys, "The new bugles will blow just as loud as the old ones," he asserted.

26 POLICE WIN SCHOLARSHIPS IN TRAFFIC COURSE

Scholarships and fellowships in the second four month course in traffic control and accident prevention offered by the Northwestern university traffic institute have been awarded 26 municipal and state policemen from all parts of the United States and Canada. The course will open Feb. 15.

The fellowships and scholarships are made possible by grants from the Automotive Safety foundation, an organization sponsored by the automotive industry for the promotion of street and highway traffic safety, and the Kemper Foundation for Traffic Police Training.

The first four month course offered by the traffic institute ended yesterday. The change from the institute's regular nine month course to two four month courses was made necessary because of an increased demand for trained traffic administrators.

YMCA'S DR. ALLEN IS FRIEND INDEED TO MANY IN NEED

Jim is a nice looking young man, happily married and the proud father of a baby. But his future did not always look so rosy. He had come to Chicago two years ago broke and a parolee from a state reformatory.

While looking for a job he stayed at the YMCA hotel, 826 South Wabash him a job but helped him enter into the social activities around the hotel where he eventually met his wife.

50,000 Cases Handled.

There are many Jims who come to the attention of Dr. Allen. Some are runaway boys, 14 to 15 years old, and others are young men who are stranded in Chicago without money and clothes. The personal service department was founded when the hotel was built in 1916. Since then the department has handled more than 50,000 cases and has loaned approximately $168,000. More than $156,000 of this has been repaid.

One of the largest of these loans was $78.05 which was made to a Notre Dame student from Central America. He came to the hotel unable to pay for his room and board saying that a check from his mother had been delayed in the mail. After several days Dr. Allen assisted the boy who spoke little English to telephone his mother and a check was sent promptly.

Almost no one, unless he is drunk or otherwise obnoxious, is ever refused at the hotel. If the individual is unable to pay for his room or presents some other problem he is brought before Dr. Allen who attempts to analyse the situation. If he can be assisted by one of 275 agencies in Chicago the case is turned over to it. Otherwise the hotel takes the responsibilty and does what it can to untangle the person's affairs.

$5,000 Out in Loans.

There were 57 cases brought to the atention of Dr. Allen during October. Twenty-five out of 100 cases are irregular or abnormal, Dr. Allen said.

At present there is $5,000 out in loans, all without security.

Typical cases were two young girls who hitch hiked to Chicago, arriving penniless. Enough was loaned to them to get fresh clothes and look for jobs. One formerly had been a model and obtained a similar job at the Art institute. The other girl got a job as a lunch counter waitress. Another case was a Cherokee Indian for whom Dr. Allen got a job in one of Chicago's large manufacturing companies.

WOMEN CLEAN BIG DIESELS OF THE HIAWATHA

Do a 'Grand Job' in Replacing Men.

With railroad traffic increased and in face of a growing shortage of men, the Milwaukee railroad has doubled the number of women coach cleaners in its employ and has hired women as engine wipers for the first time in its 93 year history.

The women work on the big Diesels of the Hiawatha in the company yards at California and Grand avenues, and Joseph Bodenberger, general road foreman of engines, thinks they are doing "a grand job."

No Previous Experience.

Most unusual fact about their work is that, without exception, none had ever worked with big engines before—particularly not a half million dollar machine. Motors, generators, ball bearings—any one of these would have meant little to them as short a time as three or four months ago.

Forestine Sanders, 4630 Prairie avenue, worked in a south side hotel until last November. Working on a Diesel locomotive is something very different, but she likes it. Her husband, Albert, works in a north side war plant.

Frances C. Irving, 733 East 50th place, began the same month as Mrs. Sanders. Her duties, up to that time, consisted of keeping house for her husband, Enos, who is a Pullman porter. Unacquainted until recent months with the work, she goes about it as an old hand.

Husband Advised Her.

Odessa Claxton Johnson, 5033 Evans avenue, had had some experience with machines before she started her present job on Christmas day. She had worked formerly with a novelty manufacturing company. Then, too, she could lean on her husband for some advice as he is employed by the Carnegie Illinois Steel corporation. She feels right at home in her new job now.

These are the newcomers at the Milwaukee yards along with half of the coach cleaners. However, many coach cleaners among the women employés have been with the company 15 or more years.

Anna Stronsky, 2308 North Harlem avenue, began as a coach cleaner in July, 1925. Her husband works with the Campbell Soup company. Her son and stepson are in the army. Son Gustave is a private at a camp in Colorado. Her stepson, Wally, also a private, is stationed in South Carolina.

Son Trains for Navy.

Caroline Gniadek, 1625 West 21st place, began the same month. Her husband, Basil, is a machinist at the International Harvester company. She has two sons. Gerald is training for the naval air corps at Glenview. Raymond is a sheet metal worker. He is engaged on a government project at Pearl Harbor.

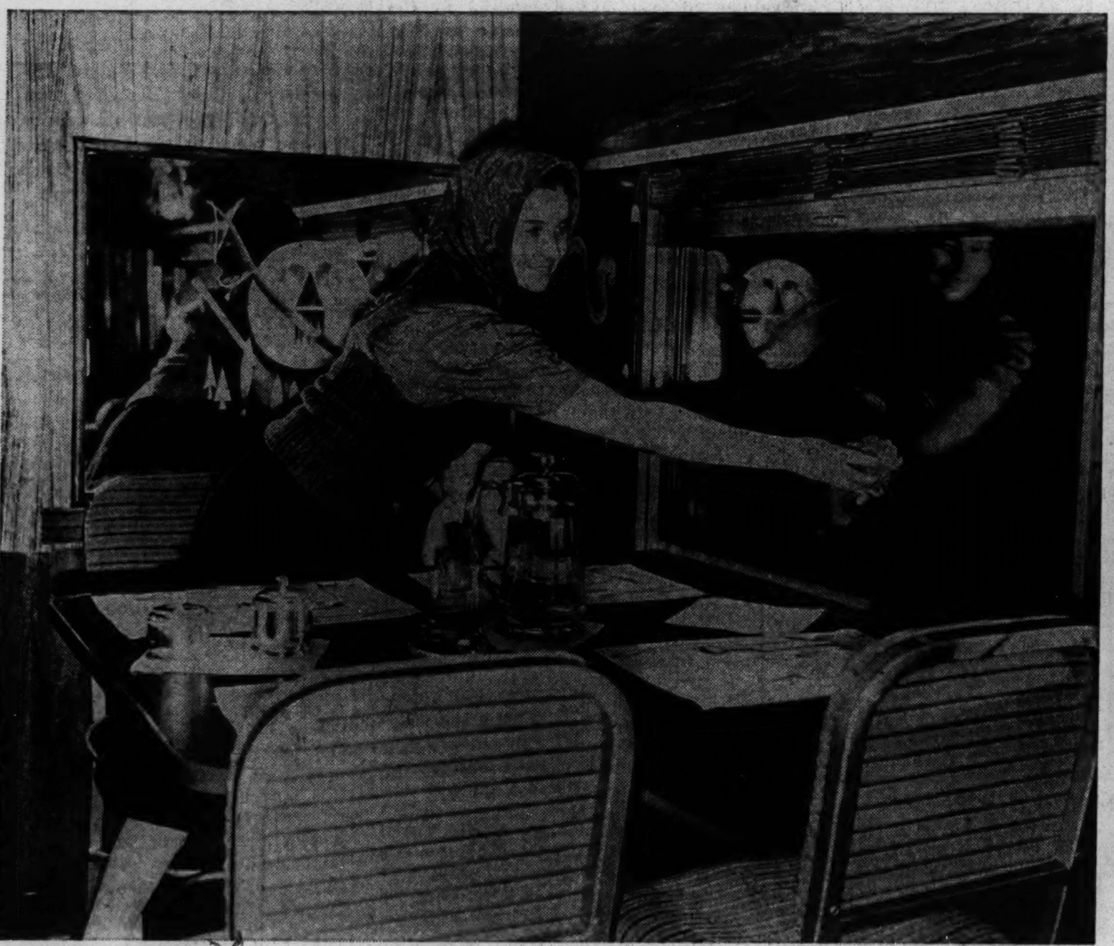
Mary Klincik, 2343 Iowa street, has been with the railroad since 1926. Her husband, Stephen, is unemployed. Her two sons, Anthony and Stephen Jr., former students at Crane Technical High school, work in war plants.

Started in 1927.

Anna Huzo, 855 North Rockwell street, went to work with the Milwaukee in 1927. A widow, she has two daughters. Marian works with the railroad in the company offices at Fullerton and Southport avenues. Elaine is a comptometer operator with the Illinois Bell Telephone company.

Mary Hadhazi, 819 North Fairfield avenue, also a widow with two daughters, was hired in July, 1928. She, like the others, still found time to raise a family.

More Women Are 'Working on the Railroad' These Days as Men Go to War



Twice as many women are employed today by the Milwaukee railroad as in the years before the war. Travel is up. Men available are few. And keeping cars and engines in trim is an important business. Here Mrs. Anna Huzo of 855 North Rockwell avenue puts the finishing touches to the diner of the Hiawatha preparatory to its afternoon run to Minneapolis and St. Paul.

Formerly she kept house for her Pullman porter husband. Now Frances C. Irving, 733 East 50th place, is "working on the railroad," too. Here she is cleaning the instrument panel of one of the Milwaukee's big Diesels.

Knits 1,000 Hours a Year for Red Cross

It would take more than 40 days and 40 nights of steady knitting to equal the record set by Mrs. William Lerch, 3842 North Kildare avenue. In a little more than a year Mrs. Lerch has accumulated an official total of 1,000 hours of knitting for the Red Cross, thru the unit within the Irving Park Catholic Women's club.

Not counting Sundays, that means an average of three hours a day plying the needles chiefly in khaki or dark blue yarn. It means helmets and gloves, mittens, slipover and long sleeved sweaters, shawls, mufflers, and socks. Mrs. Lerch has turned out almost every garment in the book, but she had the most fun making the pale blue sweaters which she believes went to Red Cross nurses somewhere.

Record Conservative.

The number of hours Mrs. Lerch has recorded are not the exact number she has put in, she admits. The Red Cross gives credit of 22 hours for a sleeveless sweater, or 32 hours for a turtle neck sweater with long sleeves, for instance. Actually, the knitting takes somewhat longer than that, she believes.

Handwork isn't new for Mrs. Lerch. When her two children were small she made many of their clothes and the curtains and bedspreads in their home. Now she finds time occasionally between khaki and navy blue knitting to turn out a tiny sweater for her infant grandson or a suit for her daughter, Helen, a student at Mundelein. In recent years she's pieced six quilt tops and knitted five dresses, as well.

No Time Wasted.

A member of the Irving Park Catholic Women's club for 17 years, Mrs. Lerch has obtained all her Red Cross knitting material thru this unit. Tho some members meet for "knitting bees," she prefers to do most of her work at home. She is a little fearful lest guests think her impolite, but it has become a habit for her to pick up her knitting and start the needles flying whenever a friend or neighbor drops in for a few minutes' chat. There's never a moment wasted—the knitting is always near by and easily available.

Red Cross work isn't the sole contribution of the Lerch family. Mr. Lerch is block captain in the OCD, and many committee meetings are held in their home. Both Mr. Lerch and his son are employed in war industry.

HOLLAND'S FALL HITS SPINACH SEED SUPPLY, SAYS DES PLAINES MAN

The fall of Holland in 1940 meant less to most Americans than the loss of the Netherlands East Indies last year, for tire rationing and tin salvage made the Japanese conquest of the Indies more keenly felt. But with Anthony Paroubek, 22 years a seed dealer in Des Plaines, axis invasion of the lowlands meant the loss of a great source of cabbage, cauliflower, and spinach seeds.

Cabbage and cauliflower seed production are not as dependent upon seeds as spinach. Cabbage and cauliflower heads, roots, and all, are planted in the ground. Spinach, however, must be planted in seed form.

Less necessary but no less in demand are other Dutch products — tulip, hyachinth, and narcissus bulbs. Tulip bulbs, Paroubek pointed out, are now being cultivated in Texas, Oregon, and Holland, Mich., in good number, but hyacinth and narcissus bulbs are not yet being grown in the United States in sufficient quantity. As there were very few available last year there will be a limited number for fall planting this year.

BROTHERS, NAVAL VETERANS, MEET AFTER 10 YEARS

There was a family reunion for the Axelsons last week, as two seafaring brothers met for the first time in 10 years at the home of an uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Sward, 4156 North Cicero avenue.

Chief Petty Officer Clarence Axelson came west from New York when his ship pulled into port. He's been on active duty with the navy for more than 13 years. His brother, Chief Yoeman Edward A. Axelson, now a naval R. O. T. C. instructor at the University of Minnesota, came down from Minneapolis for the reunion. He was formerly with the naval R. O. T. C. at Northwestern university, was retired after 20 years of service, and recalled into the navy after the outbreak of the war.

Present for the occasion was the seamen's mother, Mrs. Anna Axelson of Peco, Cal., formerly of 906 Asbury avenue, Evanston. Also coming from California for the occasion were Mrs. Elsie Ludke of Pasadena, and Mrs. Ruth Drunet of Peco.

DES PLAINES YOUTH MAKES PARACHUTE JUMP TO SAVE LIFE

Since Clinton Shuler, 24, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Shuler of Des Plaines, volunteered for the army air force in December, 1941, shortly after Pearl Harbor, he has undergone intensive training t Kelly field and Ellington field in Texas, and was graduated last September from the air forces navigation school at Hondo, Tex. A second lieutenant, he married Eleanor Carol of San Antonio, Tex., a month later and since has been stationed at Tucson, Ariz.; Alamogordo, N. M., and Topeka, Kas.

Lt. Shuler.

Recently on a routine flight with nine fellow flyers, the oil line of the plane on which he was navigator broke, starting a fire which quickly enveloped the ship at an altitude of 11,000 feet. All parachuted when hope for saving the plane was gone. Shuler and his shipmates landed safely. It was his first jump.

A graduate of Maine Township High school, Lt. Shuler attended the University of Illinois for three years, before entering service.

TWO WOMEN, 154 MEN REMAIN IN COUNCIL RACES

One hundred fifty-four men and two women remained in the race for Chicago's 50 aldermanic posts after the withdrawal deadline last Wednesday.

Of the 202 who filed for the offices between Dec. 26 and Jan. 19, 46 eliminated themselves or were eliminated. Of these, 39 withdrew, 12 of them after the validity of their nominating petitions had been questioned. The names of seven others were ordered off the ballots because of deficiencies in their petitions.

The two women still in are Florence Tye Jennison [20th] and Mrs. Catherine Reutel [45th]. Feminine candidates in the 11th and 44th wards were disqualified and one in the 5th ward withdrew.

Sitting aldermen are unopposed in four wards—the 4th, 24th, 28th, and 30th. Eleven wards have only two candidates each and thus are certain to avoid runoffs. They are wards 1, 9, 11, 25, 27, 31, 32, 34, 37, 48, and 49. Incumbent aldermen are seeking election in all except the 1st, 16th, and 40th wards. There are vacancies in the 5th, 7th, 10th, 14th, 20th, 22d, 33d, and 37th wards.

The dinner will pay honor to two groups, the 1943 graduating class, largest in the school's history, and the 600 Ignatius men now in the service

Irving Park Methodist Friars Elect '43 Officers

Recently elected officers in the Friars' club of the Irving Park Methodist church are: Chester H. Derebey, president; Gerald R. Scott, vice president; Harold F. Damuth, recording secretary; Leonard G. Dahm, corresponding secretary; Lester M. Christenson, treasurer, and Wilbur H. Webb, chairman of the finance committee.

BITTER WARD BATTLES RAGE ON N. W. SIDE

Water Samples Used by Candidate.

BY PAUL HEALY.

Two of the most bitterly contested aldermanic races in the city have developed in the 38th and 40th wards, where intraparty feuds are raging on both sides. It is likely neither contest will be settled until the run-offs on April 6, since none of the candidates seem towering enough to amass the majority of the votes cast in the election Feb. 23.

The election is supposed to be nonpartisan but as usual party organizations are backing candidates in most of the wards. In the 38th Ald. P. J. [Parkie] Cullerton, a city hall candidate, is beset with the first formidable opposition he has encountered since he was elected in 1935. His No. 1 headache is Loyd C. Larson, a widely known northwest sider who has been endorsed by the regular Republican ward organization. Both sides are waging vigorous campaigns and are charging each other with "river ward" tactics.

O'Keefe Seeks Revenge.

Another factor in the battle is Raymond T. O'Keefe, state representative for the 25th district from 1930 to 1942 who was dropped from the slate by the Kelly-Nash machine last year because he voted in favor of the Cook county superhighway bill. O'Keefe says he intends to pay back the machine by taking Democratic votes away from Cullerton. The fourth candidate is Louis Larsen, a guard for the Brinks Express company., who is regarded by the Republicans as a stooge to trick away votes from their candidate.

The contest in the 40th became a free-for-all for two Republicans and two Democrats when Ald. Joseph C. Ross unexpectedly withdrew his name on Wednesday, the deadline for withdrawing. Ross gave poor health as the reason for his retirement and said he was endorsing George O. Ibsen, an employé of the state department of finance who had been associated with him in his ward activities for many years.

Two G. O. P. Organizations.

Ross, who served six terms in the city council, and John J. McKeone have headed the minority Republican organization in the 40th since McKeon was defeated for ward committee man by 76 votes in 1940 by C. Herman Johnson. Johnson's regular ward organization is backing its president, Lawrence Spuller, an attorney who taught for 12 years at the Notre Dame, De Paul, and Loyola university law schools. During the last World war Spuller was overseas for 11 months as a first lieutenant in the infantry.

In his own campaigns Ross never was opposed by a regular Democrat but this time the field includes a Kelly-Nash nominee, Samuel P. Gurman, as well as a veteran Courtney Democrat, Julius Sherwin. With the bcaking of the regular Democratic organization, which is said to be strong in the ward, Gurman is expected to qualify for the runoff.

A former law partner of Congressman A. J. Sabath, the late Harry Olson, chief justice of the Muncipal court, and Municipal Judge Jay A. Schiller, Gurman is being plugged as a newcomer in politics who has no connection with special interests or privileged groups.

Sherwin in Personal Canvass.

Some of the Jewish votes may be taken away from Gurman by Sherwin, who is apparently attempting to canvass the ward person by person. Sherwin is an assistant state's attorney who successfully prosecuted the million dollar relief fraud conspiracy, the Eleanor Williams-McNaughton murder case; and the Oak Lawn bank robbery. In 1938, as president and ward leader of the Horner-Courtney forces, he delivered the ward to County Judge Jarecki and State Rep. Adamowski by 3,600 votes.

Tho the 40th has had a Republican alderman since 1929, it has not carried for the G. O. P. in the last four general elections. Green, however, lost by only 259 votes for governor there in 1940 and by only 311 votes for mayor in 1939.

Republican leaders have high hopes for Larson, who carried the 38th ward by more than 3,000 votes last year when he ran for county clerk against Michael J. Flynn. He is employed in the attorney general's office and is a director of the Swedish club. He reports he has consistently refused to sell out his candidacy, despite intimidations and threats form rival groups. Recently he said his campaign signs and posters were sprayed with acid or scraped from billboards and walls.

Offers Water Samples.

Cullerton's forces have replied that Larson was using "river ward" tactics and accused him of circulating O'Keefe's petitions for candidacy.

One of Larson's campaign stunts was arming his precinct captains with bottles of filtered water and asking them to circulate the water among ward residents for a comparison with the city's drinking water. Larson is promising cleaner water and a reduction in the city's tax rate. About 90 per cent of the 38th's residents are small home owners.

N. U. SETTLEMENT HITS WAR STRIDE WITH NEW WORK

Houses OCD; Shelters Day Shift Orphans.

As a result of the war the Northwestern University Settlement, 1400 Augusta boulevard, has become a recruiting center for civilian defense volunteers; it affords rooms for the instruction of OCD workers in first aid and home nursing, and offers refuge for "day shift" orphans, children of parents who work all day at war plants. Miss Harriet E. Vittum, resident head of the settlement, has been in charge of these activities.

They all began when community 1, zone 5 of the OCD found themselves in need of headquarters. The settlement gave the local OCD three first floor rooms on Milwaukee avenue. People who had seldom, if ever, come to the settlement, became regular visitors. Members of the staff, almost without exception, took one job or another with civilian defense.

Fire, Gas Training.

Michael Rachwalski, then associate head resident, now with the army, became the recruiting officer for the defense office. He also conducted basic training courses in fire and gas fighting. Immediate result of his work was the organization of neighborhood people into neighborhood service, which had long been a goal of the settlement's activities.

Mrs. Ida McIntire, director of health education, assumed direction of the courses in first aid and home nursing. Whereas recruiting of volunteers for these courses in years past has been a time taking, thankless job, so many people came that classes had to be limited to 50 persons each. Another goal of the settlement had been reached.

Study Scientific Feeding.

These works preceded still many others. There were courses offered by the settlement in scientific feeding of children and adults. Residents of the neighborhood were instructed in the care and conservation of foods, fuel, clothing, and household equipment, just as they had been for many years, but emphasis was laid upon the double need of conservation in war time. This work, now, is part of the local OCD program.

Many old problems persisted. People, formerly on relief and still in need of it, were more reluctant to accept a helping hand than five years ago, when the family next door also was on relief. Now, perhaps, the neighboring father and mother and two or three children are working in war industries and making handsome wages. To accept a handout, even when crippled, blind, or aged, in face of such nearby prosperity, has become a bitter pill to swallow.

"Mother work" represents still another problem. Most fathers in this district are making enough to support the family. Mothers have gone to work to help with the old debts. This leaves young children at home—alone. The settlement has tried to awaken families to the dangers these "day shift" orphans may encounter. If they build fires in order to cook their own meals there is danger of them burning themselves or setting the homes on fire. The settlement has tried to relieve parents of these worries by educating children to these hazards and, where possible, to encourage children to come to the settlement during the hours of their parents' work.

The need of clothing and food is daily lessening, yet there are still some people who must be helped.

No Longer Need Support.

The most encouraging "sign of the times" to Miss Vittum, however, is the return of older people to jobs with supporting pay. Many are fairly feeble, yet, in her words, "to a man, they have gone to the old age pension authorities and said they no longer need federal government support."

"And these," adds Miss Vittum, "are the people that we were told several years ago would lie back and accept the promise of lifetime security."

Wedding Parties of 3 Couples Add Up to 153 Years

Three couples, all residents of the northwest area, recently celebrated 50 or more years of married life. Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Sinderson of Chemung, McHenry county, observed their 53d wedding anniversary; Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Hope of 2221 Knox avenue and Mr. and Mrs. Martin Zarzycki of 2979 North Ridgeway avenue, their 50th.

Mr. Sinderson was born in Belvidere Aug. 22, 1861, and went to Chemung with his family in 1869. In his early years in McHenry county he was a miller by trade and later spent many years in the building supply business. Mrs. Sinderson, born Aug. 20, 1870, in Monticello, Wis., was taken to Chemung in 1871. They have 9 children, 14 grandchildren, and 2 great-grandchildren. They have occupied their present home for 46 years.

Andrew Hope was born 76 years ago near Division and Halsted streets. The family home was there five years later when the great Chicago fire destroyed that neighborhood. He has spent all his life in Chicago, and during his business life was a bricklayer. Mrs. Hope, born in Lexington, Mo., 71 years ago, came to Chicago with her family in 1883. They have three children.

Martin Zarzycki was born in East Prussia 75 years ago. He came to America as a young man, settled in Chicago and worked about 25 years for the city. Mrs. Zarzycki was born in Warsaw 69 years ago. They have two children and eight grandchildren.

NORTHWEST AREA SCRAP CAMPAIGN NETS 280 TONS

Tin Can Collection Falls Below Expectancy.

Division 10 of the OCD salvage organization which includes several northwest suburbs collected 560,000 pounds of salvage in the last three months of 1942, William L. McFetridge, area salvage director, announced.

Of this amount, only 50,000 pounds was in tin cans, McFetridge said, and he expressed fear that a rumor that cans are no longer wanted may have affected the can collection in the division.

The rumor is unfounded, he declared. Cans are wanted now as much as ever and patriotic housewives should continue to clean and save them.

Falls to Reach Goal.

The can collection was estimated at far under half the amount anticipated when the collection was started. Each 4,000 population would have produced 18,000 pounds of cans in three months, acocrding to those figures.

The goal has not been changed, central salvage office officials reported, despite expected rationing of canned goods soon and greater use of glass and other substitutes to save cans. These factors probably will cut the number of cans available, but diligent saving can increase the tin salvage, it was emphasized.

Park Ridge Leads.

Park Ridge led in can collections for the three months with an estimated total of 15,000 pounds. Des Plaines was credited with 12,000 pounds. Mount Prospect shipped 7,000 pounds.

Division 10 includes all of Elk Grove township, the upper half of Leyden, about half each of Wheeling and Addison townships, and Norwood Park.

HUMBOLDT PARK AYR TO BEGIN '43 DEFENSE PLANS

Humboldt Park members of the American Youth Reserve begin their contributions to civilian defense for the year this week, according to a schedule completed by Mrs. Helen M. Gordon, community youth activities director.

A Victory Book drive by the senior AYR service committee, headed by Shirley Wallen, 1356 North Artesian avenue, starts tomorrow in the community. The campaign will be climaxed by the end of this month by a dance open to all young people of the community, at which the admission will be a book suitable for reading by men and women in the services.

The second leadership training class for senior Youth Reserves planning to direct youth activities of the OCD will start Feb. 17, Mrs. Gordon said. Twenty young men and women have registered for the course, which will last 10 weeks.

The first of two movie and discussion meetings for intermediate Youth Reserves and nonmembers in the 12-15 year ago group will be held at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday evening in the Deborah Boys club, 2441 Division street. Patriotic movies provided by the children's department of the Chicago Public library will be shown.

Dorothy Weber, chairman of the Humboldt Park AYR dramatic club, will lead a discussion on the outlook of youth in the present war.

More than 250 intermediate AYR members in the Humboldt Park area are expected to attend the affair. The second meeting will be held Feb. 23.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Feb. 8.

Make out the seed list and send it to the seedman immediately. Vegetable seeds will be short this season because citizens are realizing the importance of raising all the vegetables they can in their own yard.

Do not waste seeds; wait until the soil is in good condition before sowing. Decayed manure is a fine source of humus and contains some plant food. Spread it over the ground and as soon as digging can start spade it under.

Tuesday, Feb. 9.

Grow some potatoes if the soil is suitable. Potatoes revel in a loose, loamy soil, one that is filled with humus. If it is heavy grow something else.

Most vegetables like full sun, but if only six hours of sun is available good vegetables can be grown. Sod land that was plowed last spring should produce good potatoes.

Wednesday, Feb. 10.

Gardeners who have only a small space will grow a little lettuce, chard, beets, or any of the smaller things and perhaps train tomatoes along the fence if there are hours of sunshine.

One of the best varieties is Firesteel; it has large fruits which are early, smooth and red. The vine is small and lends itself readily to staking. It is drouth resisting and matures in 62 days.

Edging vegetable plots with low growing flowers, such as ageratum little gem, white; marigold harmony, red and yellow hues; pansies for cutting in many shades: dwarf petunias, or other flowers adds much brilliancy to the general effect.

Thursday, Feb. 11.

If any tulip roots show thru the drainage hole bring a few pots in the window for flowering, but if they are not well rooted wait until they are. Continue to root cuttings for outdoor planting. Look over the garden and if any plants have heaved press the sail around them. After the bulbous plants are thru flowering continue to water them to encourage full maturity.

When the foliage turns yellow it signifies the bulbs have ripened and are in need of rest. Transplant the vinca rosea if the seedlings are large enough to handle.

Friday, Feb. 12.

Cyclamen bulbs can be saved for flowering again if properly handled, altho the flowers may be smaller than the first flowering period. Store in a cool place after flowering and when the ground is free from frost plant outdoors.

Water carefully; do not allow them to become too dry or they will suffer. Bordering the tulip bed with English daisies or pansies gives a fine effect. Sow annual vines; they lend a charm that cannot be obtained in any other way.

Saturday, Feb. 13.

Some kinds of dahlias do well, flowering freely, if sown early. These include the dwarf Unwin varieties. They are useful for bedding and cutting. Buy the seed now and sow about the end of the month.

Protect rhododendrons and boxwood with burlap, evergreen boughs, or shade with boards against the rays of the sun.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield Park conservatory.

NORTHWEST SIDE TO DEFEND WAR GARDEN RECORD

Community Chairmen to Meet Tuesday Night.

The northwest side, which last year led all sections of Chicago in the number of individual war gardens planted, will prepare to defend this record at a meeting of the 1943 community war garden chairmen of division five of the office of civilian defense Tuesday night at the Eugene Field park fieldhouse, 5100 North Ridgeway avenue.

Last year 3,078,757 square feet of ground were cultivated. The North Park community led in the number of individual gardens registered; the Mont Clare community in the total square feet plowed.

Believes Title Safe.

Roy I. Levinson, regional director of the northwest area OCD, believes the title won last year will be held thruout this year and that more gardens will be planted this spring.

Food rationing, he points out, cannot help but increase interest and as people can still buy glass jars for canning many will doubtlessly take part in the war garden program in order to supplement their own food supply.

Gardening is not as difficult nor as time taking as many believe, Levinson said. If a group of no less than four families secures the use of a lot no smaller than 75x100 feet and clears the ground of all rubbish and refuse the park district will plow the earth free of charge.

Beu Is Division Chief.

Richard Beu is divisional war garden chairman. Community chairmen are: Harold McShane, Albany Park; Henry Zmick, Avondale; Adolph von Eitzen, Belmont-Cragin; Peter Hoffman, Belmont Heights; Mrs. Florence Nystrom, Edgebrook; Bee Unseth, Edison Park; Ida M. Luedcke, Forest Glen; C. H. Hildebrandt, Hanson Park; Z. W. Lepkowski, Humboldt Park; Mrs. S. B. Cheever, Irving Park; Robert J. Hughes, Jefferson Park; Anna Klope, Logan Square, and M. C. Lichtenwalter, Mayfair.

Other community chairmen are: Mrs. Anna Swanson, Milwaukee-Armitage-Western; Mrs. Esther Olberg, Mont Clare; Herman Nordlinger, North Park; Rev. Stephen A. Bubacz, Northwest Town; Earl W. Weil, Norwood Park; Mrs. Fred Ott, Portage Park; John Kreutzer, Sauganash, and Edward Mienert, Wrightwood-Fullerton-Armitage.

NEW HOT WATER TANK JACKET IS FUEL CONSERVER

Cover Also Gives Heater Attractive Front.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

There is a new and good looking jacket overcoat on the market, designed for the family hot water tank. It is reasonably priced and yet in its simulated wood grain finish of blue or green, it can take its place in bathroom, kitchen, or basement.

This tank jacket is a fuel saver. Its air cell construction holds fast to the heat in your tank instead of letting it steal out into the room. You also can count on water heating faster if your tank has one of these jackets, and it stays hot longer.

Simple to Install.

Construction consists of an inner layer of five-ply air cell insulating paper and an outer layer of corrugated paper. The jacket is simple to install, for it comes complete in one unit with detailed instructions as to how it should be fitted.

There's a jacket for a 30 gallon tank which costs around $2.50 and one for a 40 gallon tank which costs about $3.

Just what is the difference between maintenance and remodeling work? What limit is there on repair work: on remodeling? What sort of home can a war worker build, and what limit is there on war conversion and remodeling?

Good Guide Available.

These are questions frequently heard and the answers aren't always quick in coming. However, there is an excellent free booklet available which contains the answers to a great many questions home owners are asking now, and well worth a place in a home owners' shelf of building and remodeling data. It has been printed by a nationally known manufacturer of building materials and lives up to its title: "A War Time Guide to Better Homes."

There often isn't a great deal of difference between what spells repair work and remodeling work.

All the above items are elaborated upon and put forward with brevity and interest.

TAX COLLECTOR, COFFEE VENDOR, HIT BY RATIONS

Albert J. Kraemer, tax collector and coffee dealer of Elk Grove township, likes to recall the days before coffee and gasoline rationing, when he sold coffee in lots of 10 to 50 pounds among his farmer customers and when he could call on his clients thruout the county by car. Now few of those who bought from him in years past can be reached or can reach him.

Not so long ago, he points out, he could go as far south as Grant park, as far northwest as Lake Zurich, and as far west as Crystal lake. When he entered business 30 years ago, in his own words, "Harlem avenue was the dividing line between city and country."

Born in Chicago, a lifelong resident of the northwest area, Kraemer is fond of his business, tells with pride that 70 per cent of his customers of early years were buying from him until rationing, boasts that there isn't a farm in the county which he has not visited.

GIRLS' SCHOOL IN PARK RIDGE HAS NEW CHIEF

Miss Barger Takes Place of Ruby Badger.

A social worker and student of social conditions for 22 years, Miss Ethel Barger recently assumed her duties as the new director of the Park Ridge school for girls. The institution, founded in 1877 and dedicated to the care and training of dependent girls, was headed formerly by Ruby K. Badger, school principal for 23 years.

Miss Barger was associated for nine years with the Glenwood Children's home in Youngstown, O. Later she assisted the directors of an orphanage in Cincinnati in finding new homes for the children to permit them to convert the orphanage into a convalescent home.

Studied Bilingual Group.

This task completed, she was called to southern New Mexico to aid in the formulation of a new program for the Rio Grande institute. In order to gain a better understanding of the children there, she studied their early environment, visiting their homes and parents in all parts of the state. Composed of English and Spanish speaking people, the institute afforded her special problems in child psychology. This work was carried on with the collaboration of the elementary education department of the University of New Mexico.

After this experience Miss Barger spent six months writing a "Handbook for Institutions for Dependent Children." This was done under the auspices of the United States children's bureau, an agency of the department of labor.

Served Several States.

She was for nine years superintendent of the Milwaukee Orphans' asylum in Milwaukee, and has served as consultant to child welfare bureaus of the states of Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, and New Mexico, surveying child welfare services and studying institutional problems.

More recently she acted as counsellor to the United States committee for the care of European children, whose offices are in New York. Then followed a year at the University of Chicago school of social service administration, where she finished the studies begun earlier in her career at the New York school for social work. She received her master's degree from the university last December.

Schools for Delinquents.

Of all her experiences, however, she found particularly interesting her work with the Thomas Osborne association of New York, during which she studied schools for delinquents in Virginia and North Carolina, and of her association with the field staff of the Child Welfare league, in the course of which she visited, studied and reported on the institutions of the league.

She looks forward to her work in Park Ridge with the greatest enthusiasm, for, in her words, she feels that "the school can make great contributions to the care and training of girls in war time." This, in her opinion, can be done by exerting "every effort toward preparing the girls for the realities of life."

AIR APPEALS NET FLOOD OF KEYS, KNIVES, PENNIES

Donations of Listeners Boost Salvage.

Pictures of the headliners of the Chicago Theater of the Air, broadcasting operettas over W-G-N-Mutual at 8 p. m. Saturdays, will be presented in the "Album of the Air" in today's picture section of the Tribune. Photos of the stars of the Abbott and Costello show also are included on the page.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Fulton Lewis Jr., W-G-N Mutual Washington commentator, started something when he broadcast several appeals to listeners to send in their old keys so that copper and nickel may be extracted from them for war uses.

He got more than 5,000,000 keys [more than 46 tons] and a lot of assorted other items including burglar kits, old fashioned watches, brass knuckles, counterfeit coins, and three fur coats from a lady in Maine who thought they might be used by soldiers in Arctic climes.

Starts Flood of Pennies.

Then Ralph Edwards, who conducts Truth or Consequences on NBC, started a flood of pennies addressed to Mrs. Dennis Mullane of Staten Island. "Consequence" listeners were asked to send in a penny to Mrs. Mullane for her marine son's war bonds. The letters, some 250,000 of them, are averaging about three cents each. The campaign has reacted as a "consequence" on Edwards himself. The Mullane home overflowed with mail so Edwards had to put a staff of 15 workers to opening the letters. Some $7,000 has already been gathered for war bonds thru this stunt. And still the letters pour in.

Capt. Midnight of the Blue network has launched a nation-wide radio campaign titled "Save a Life with a Knife." The objective is to collect knives for American soldiers, marines, and navy men in the South Pacific.

Knives Have Trading Value.

Hunting knives, large sized pocket knives and Boy Scout knives are wanted. The blades should be over four but not more than eight inches long. The knives are valuable not only in combat but for their "trading" value with natives. Each contributor is being asked to put his name on a tag and tie it to the knife so that the soldier who receives it will know who sent it. The knives should be sent directly to Maj. Gen. B. M. Giles, commanding general, Fourth Air Force, San Francisco, Cal.

Estrella on Radio Today in North American Debut

Arnaldo Estrella, Brazilian pianist, will make his North American début in a New York Philharmonic Symphony concert playing the First Piano Concerto in B-flat minor by Tschaikowsky, at 2 o'clock this afternoon on WBBM-CBS. Bruno Walter will again conduct the orchestra. The balance of the program will consist of Mozart's Symphony in D major, No. 35, and Wagner's "Bacchanale" and "Siegfried's Funeral March."

PRESENT 'FAUST' ON AIR THEATER NEXT SATURDAY

Marion Claire, soprano prima donna of the Chicago Theater of the Air, and Eugene Conley, lyric tenor of the San Carlo Opera company, will be starred in a streamlined version of the opera "Faust" on W-G-N, W59C, and the Mutual network at 8 p. m. Saturday.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, will speak.

Miss Claire will be cast in the singing rôle of Marguerite while the speaking lines will be taken by Laurette Fillbrandt, who has been engaged to portray all dramatic rôles for characters sung by Miss Claire.

Miss Fillbrandt has appeared on many leading network programs.

Mr. Conley will sing the rôle of Dr. Faust while Bret Morrison will take the speaking lines for the part. The radio adaptation of the opera was prepared by Jack La Frandre, writer-director of the Saturday night series. Musical background will be supplied by the W-G-N symphony orchestra under the direction of Henry Weber and by the chorus led by Robert Trendler.

LAKE FOREST TO BE SALUTED BY FUTURE CITIZENS

A choral presentation of "The World Is Waiting for the Sunrise," by the Lake Forest High school mixed chorus will be a highlight of the Citizens of Tomorrow program on W-G-N from 1 to 1:30 p. m. today.

Raymond Moore, principal of the Lake Forest school, will speak. Philip Maxwell, master of ceremonies, will name two more senior students to the Honor Roll. They are James W. Northron Jr. of Lake Forest and Jean Peck, 17, of Attica, Ind.

Citizens of Tomorrow is produced by Lewis James. Dick Enroth is the announcer and Jane Anderson is the piano accompanist.

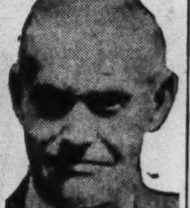
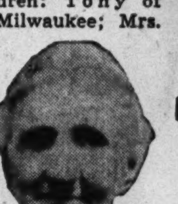
PIONEER WISCONSIN DAIRYMAN REACHES 60TH WEDDING YEAR

Sixty years of married life were celebrated recently by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kotecki at their home, 1755 Crystal street. With them for the occasion were their eight children: Tony of Milwaukee; Mrs.



Joseph Kotecki.



Mrs. Kotecki.

Ann Reynolds of St. Paul, Minn.; Mrs. Theresa Jamour of Berwyn, Mrs. Martha Ridgley of Marion, Ill.; Joseph, Leon, Mrs. Marie Krewer, and Mrs. Frances Mindak of Chicago. Also present were their 16 grandchildren and 6 great-grandchildren.

Part of the entertainment for the family reunion were the tales told by Mr. Kotecki, 84, and Mrs. Kotecki, 78, of their early experiences in this country. Mrs. Kotecki came from Poland in her father's sailing vessel in 1869, the journey taking three months and 12 days. Upon landing, her father sold the vessel and purchased a farm at Lemont. Several years later she met and married Mr. Kotecki, who was a worker in a nearby stone quarry.

The Koteckis bought a tract of forest land near Eau Claire, Wis., and cleared it with their own hands, building their first home of logs. Their first two children were cradled in baskets hung from the trees, so they might be safe from wild animals while the parents worked on the land. By the time the Koteckis retired and moved to Chicago in 1924, they had made their tract of forest land into a prosperous dairy farm.

Frederic March on NBC.

Fredric March, screen actor, will be featured on the Red Cross show, "That They Might Live," at 11:30 a. m. today over WMAQ-NBC. His wife, Florence Eldridge, will play opposite him.

Anne Brown Will Sing on Kostelanetz Show

List will play the C-sharp minor "Waltz" by Chopin. Kostelanetz will conduct the orchestra in the playing of Porter's "I Concentrate on You" and Adams' "There Are Such Things."

ASK FIRE BOAT FOR INDUSTRIES ALONG CALUMET

Craft Like the Busse Called Need.

The United States Coast Guard has stationed a steel fire boat in the Calumet river to aid in protection of an estimated half a billion dollars worth of war industries, while the city administration continues efforts toward getting a bigger, better fire boat for the area.

There are about 45,000 workers in the big plants that line the river for nearly seven miles. But, altho the plants include three war boat building concerns and other vital industries, a $200,000 fire boat appropriation in the city's budget for 1942 went unused because of priority difficulties, according to William A. Rowan, former 10th ward alderman who has retired to go to congress.

Boat Item Cut to $5,000.

The city's appropriations for 1943 included a fire boat item of $5,000, replacing the $200,000 item contained in the 1941 appropriations. This was included in line with a resolution offered by Rowan and approved by the council recently.

The $5,000 appropriation will buy very little river fire fighting equipment, Rowan said, but it indicates the city's intent to get such equipment when it becomes available. If the item is in the budget, and priorities are eased later, then it would be possible to shift money from other city funds to provide the fire boat, he explained. If no such item were included, nothing could be done until a new appropriation ordinance has been passed next year.

Need Extra Insurance.

Besides the coast guard fire boat, the city at present maintains four fire boats on the river, but the new one is wanted as extra insurance, according to Rowan and Fire Marshal Michael Corrigan.

The largest city boat is the Joseph Medill, veteran of nearly 40 years of fire service, which was transferred to the Calumet river a few years ago when a new boat was put in service in the down town area.

The Medill is kept under steam at the 95th street bridge. One of its two boilers may not pass government inspection in March, Corrigan said. Under good conditions the boat can make eight miles an hour. Some times five miles is its best. This compares with the 15 to 16 miles an hour of the Fred A. Busse which serves the down town area.

Three "Jeep." Boats.

The city obtained three former coast guard boats six months ago, equipped them with water pumps and stationed them in the river. These are gasoline driven and make 12 miles easily, Corrigan said. They are called "jeep" boats. They have proved valuable for small fires, despite the fact that they throw only 1,000 gallons of water a minute, compared to the Medill's 4,500 to 5,000 gallons. But they are fast and maneuver into small slips and shallow water where the Medill can not go, it was explained.

Both Rowan and Corrigan agreed that a larger boat of the Busse type is needed. Rowan said three or four of them should be stationed between Gary and South Chicago.

Lacked Priorities Last Year.

Such a boat was blocked last year, altho the city had the cash ready, because material priorities could not be obtained for builders who would have furnished the boat to the city.

A government spokesman said that it was a fine decision whether the boat was badly enough needed to warrant release of materials for the proposed $200,000 boat.

The industrial area involved includes the Pullman Standard works, which plans a submarine chaser a week by spring; the American Shipbuilding company, the Republic Steel corporation, with the south works of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation near by; several other heavy industries, and half a dozen large grain elevators, one with capacity for 10,000,000 bushels, Rowan pointed out.

Land Apparatus Adequate.

Land fire fighting equipment in the area is adequate, Corrigan said, but it can reach only three sides of a fire which may be raging on the river side. Elevators and other plans often are built to the water's edge and this adds to the problem.

Fire fighting water volume of the three jeep boats and the modern coast guard craft more than doubles the Medill's best efforts and the smaller boats give quicker coverage of the area, but this increased war protection might well be added to, Rowan and other city officials contend. They hope that a way may yet be found to swell the present $5,000 appropriation to care for added equipment.

Promote Three South Side WAACs to Second Officers

Three south side girls recently were promoted to second officers in the WAAC, after being commissioned last year at the Fort Des Moines, Ia., WAAC training center. Second officer corresponds in rank to the army's first lieutenant. The girls are Violet Askins, 306 East 59th street; Sarah Eugene Emmert, 6100 State street, and Irma Jackson Cayton, 5120 South Park way.

Dunbar Rolls Climb 100% in Second Term

Enrollment at the new Dunbar Vocational school, 4401 St. Lawrence avenue, with the opening of the second semester soared from approximately 300 to about 600 students. This 100 per cent increase was attributed to a change in the policy of "recruiting" students.

When the school was opened last fall enrollment was restricted to students who already had entered high school. This semester officials of the new school were allowed to recruit graduates of 23 south side elementary schools, as well as to enroll those high school students who desire to transfer their studies to the technical field.

Aim at Employment.

"It is our aim to make the student employable," Clifford J. Campbell, director of the school, explained, "and to enable him to support himself." The success of this aim is shown by Campbell's statement that 60 per cent of the students last semester worked from six to eight hours a day in addition to going to school.

The program of instruction is designed to accommodate a wide range of abilities. All students spend three hours in one of the shops during the day, with three 40 minute periods of related class work. A fourth period is given to gymnasium work, health study, or library.

Evaluate Student Ability.

Most of the students are Negroes, altho the school is not exclusively for the colored race. It serves a community of more than 700,000 persons. Graduates are given a diploma and a certificate of evaluation, which gives the prospective employer an outline of the student's training and abilities.

The new school was opened last fall after shops and other facilities had been added to the plant of the old Dunbar school, which had offered technical courses. There are 18 shops in all. Last summer outside buildings were constructed to house new shops, which includes: Aviation mechanics, auto mechanics, cobbling, commercial art, electric and radio, foundry and forge, machine shop, merchandising, office practice, printing, and welding.

Supervised New Shops.

Shops already at the plant were: Beauty culture, commercial cooking, dressmaking, millinery, sheet metal, tailoring, and woodwork. Campbell spent all last summer supervising the construction of the new buildings and arranging for the purchase of equipment. It is the aim of the board of education to pattern the school after Washburne and Chicago Vocational schools. Philip L. McNamee is assistant superintendent in charge of vocational education and William H. Johnson is superintendent of schools.

Immediately after the school was opened it attained an enrollment of 375 which in later months was reduced to near 300 when students entered military service and industry. Campbell estimates that with a longer school day the school can easily accommodate more than 1,200 students.

With its aim to provide the student with a specific skill, Campbell says "history can be made—and I believe it will."

TWO WOMEN, 154 MEN REMAIN IN COUNCIL RACES

One hundred fifty-four men and two women remained in the race for Chicago's 50 aldermanic posts after the withdrawal deadline last Wednesday.

Of the 202 who filed for the offices between Dec. 26 and Jan. 19, 46 eliminated themselves or were eliminated. Of these, 39 withdrew, 12 of them after the validity of their nominating petitions had been questioned. The names of seven others were ordered off the ballots because of deficiencies in their petitions.

The two women still in are Florence Tye Jennison [20th] and Mrs. Catherine Reutel [45th]. Feminine candidates in the 11th and 44th wards were disqualified and one in the 5th ward withdrew.

Sitting aldermen are unopposed in four wards—the 4th, 24th, 28th, and 30th. Eleven wards have only two candidates each and thus are certain to avoid runoffs. They are wards 1, 9, 11, 25, 27, 31, 32, 34, 37, 48, and 49. Incumbent aldermen are seeking election in all except the 1st, 16th, and 40th wards. There are vacancies in the 5th, 7th, 10th, 14th, 20th, 22d, 33d, and 37th wards.

GIVE JOHNSON EDGE IN HOT S. SIDE RACE

Four Seek Douglas Council Vacancy.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Run-off elections probably will be necessary to choose aldermen for the 5th and 7th ward vacancies. Such elections are required where no candidate gets a majority of all votes case on Feb. 23. The run-offs will be held on April 6, the day Chicago will elect a mayor from among the candidates to be nominated next month.

Four of the six candidates who filed for the 5th ward post, left vacant last year when Ald. Paul H. Douglas resigned to join the marine corps, were still in the running after the Wednesday deadline for objections to nominating petitions. It appears probable that the contestants will so divide the vote on the first election day that the extra election will be required.

Name Principal Contenders.

Walter Johnson, 27 years old, a colleague of Ald. Douglas on the University of Chicago faculty and first of all six candidates to file, is regarded as one of the principal contenders. The others are Horace G. Lindheimer, former Republican county treasurer, and Bertram Moss, an attorney who obtained the indorsement of the Kelly-Nash machine.

Douglas was elected four years ago in a battle featured by a struggle within the Democratic party. Ald. James J. Cusack, seeking his third term, cast his fortunes with the Courtney for mayor wing of the party, which had an almost complete aldermanic slate. Douglas, after some jockeying by the Democratic bosses, who feared his independence, got the machine indorsement. This, however, was not potent enough to avoid a run-off, in which Douglas, with the aid of the university element, trounced Cusack 22,855 to 16,421.

At Odds with City Hall.

In the council Douglas was at odds with the city hall bosses so often that it was conceded he had lost their political backing. His independence, however, kept together in strength the private organization that had been a big factor in his election. This group, among which is included Mrs. Douglas, are stumping wholeheartedly for Johnson, and some observers say Johnson may lead the field in the election next month.

Lindheimer, a real estate man who was a leader in the Courtney for mayor organization in 1939, ran unsuccessfully in the Democratic primary against Ludwig D. Schreiber. He opposed the city hall machine because it dealt him out in 1938 when he left office as county treasurer.

There were reports that could not be verified that the Kelly-Nash leaders are planning to sidetrack Moss just before the election on Feb. 23 and instruct their faithful to vote for Lindheimer. This would give rise to a rather interesting situation, inasmuch as Barnet Hodes, Mayor Kelly's corporation counsel, has come out unequivocally in Moss' favor.

Situation in 7th Ward.

In the 7th ward the battle apparently is mainly between Nicholas J. Bohling Jr., attorney who is secretary of the Illinois Young Republicans and who for the last 10 years has been a law associate of Harry S. Ditchburne and Mathew [Bud] Ryan, also an attorney and a brother of the Democratic ward committeeman, James W. Ryan, chief deputy county clerk. Bohling, a Republican, and Ryan have the indorsement of their respective ward party organizations.

Nine candidates originally filed for the 7th ward seat, left vacant a year ago by the death of Ald. Thomas J. Daley, but withdrawals have reduced this number of four. Those who withdrew voluntarily were Norman N. Eiger, personal choice of Corporation Counsel Barnet Hodes; William L. Rand, sports promoter; Joseph Plunkett, a publicity man, and Raymond L. Keegan, real estate man. Alexander S. Brzezinski, who was ruled off the ballot because of faulty petitions, asked his supporters to vote for Bohling.

Two Other Candidates.

That left, besides Ryan and Bohling, only two other contestants, Emmett N. McDonald, an attorney, and Bernard Goodman, an air compressor engineer. Neither was considered strong enough to do more than to help bring the 7th ward contest to a run-off.

The 8th ward contest, which started off as a four cornered scrap, has become a straight party quarrel thru the withdrawal of Jack O'Keefe, former assistant sheriff, and Theodore McGinnis. The two men remaining are Ald. Roy E. Olin, one of the five Republicans in the council, and Atty. Harry P. Hensel, who has the indorsement of the regular Democrats.

Centenarians Mark Birthdays

MRS. SARAH JANE SWANSON.
[TRIBUNE Photos.]

2 LITTLE LADIES PASS BIRTHDAYS: ONE 100; OTHER 112

They Wear Flowers; Both Still Read.

For her 100th birthday party last week, Mrs. Wilhelmina Plahm of Blue Island wore a black and white print dress with an orchid pinned to the shoulder. And Mrs. Sarah Jane Swanson, 9855 Exchange avenue, on the occasion of her 112th birthday, also last week, was attired in a black dress with a frilly white collar, and a corsage of roses.

Both of the little ladies are fortunate in having good enough eyesight to be constant readers. Mrs. Swanson has more choice of reading material, however, for Mrs. Plahm reads and speaks only German.

Mrs. Swanson, whose maiden name was Griswold, was born in Chillicothe, O., the daughter of natives of New York state. A few years ago, when she was only 100, she could tell her family about the Indians around the family cabin, about making candles, cooking at a fireplace, spinning cloth. She could describe the family's trip in a covered wagon from Ohio west.

But she has forgotten those things now. She likes to sit in her big chair by the window and knit socks. She has outlived two husbands and six of her 11 children. Her descendants include six generations.

Mrs. Plahm makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. Augusta Trapp, 2823 Broadway, Blue Island. She likes to help with the housework, and do mending. She was born in Germany in a town on the Baltic sea. She and her husband, William, and seven children came to this country in 1888. Her husband died in 1911. Besides Mrs. Trapp, she has four sons—Fred, Charles, Otto, and William, 15 grandchildren, and 15 great-grandchildren.

A public showing of the color movie "The Power of the Word," will be held at the Bethany Mission Covenant church, Garfield boulevard and Wells street, at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening.

TECH OPENS 7TH U. S. FREE NIGHT SCHOOL PROGRAM

Registration for free evening classes at the Illinois Institute of Technology under the United States office of education's engineering, science, and management war training program will begin tomorrow. This is the seventh such program to be offered at the school.

Hours for registration will be from 7 to 9 o'clock evenings and will continue thru Friday on the west side campus at 17 South Damen avenue. Classes will start Feb. 22.

On the basis of the last six evening programs officials expect an enrollment of 4,000 persons in the 63 courses. The evening classes are only one phase of the school's engineering, science, and management program. Other phases include full time programs, safety training, and job instructor training. Courses in the evening program meet once or twice a week for 18 weeks.

Since the courses were started at Illinois Tech in January, 1941, 26,000 persons have attended the classes. Basic requirement for admittance to any of the courses is high school graduation plus a personal interview with an Illinois Tech war training official.

SOUTH CHICAGO AYR LEADERS TO MEET TOMORROW

Formulate Plans to Help Service Center.

Senior American Youth Reserve block leaders of the South Chicago civilian defense community will meet at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night in the South Chicago branch library to plan the reserve's share in maintaining a new service men's center at 83d street and South Chicago avenue. Mrs. Bertha Jenkinson, youth activities director of the community and children's librarian, has called the meeting.

South Chicago A. Y. R. girls of the intermediate group, 12-15 years, will meet for the first time Thursday for a series of weekly cooking and nutrition classes. Mrs. Edna Stahl, 9040 Brandon avenue, will instruct a new group at the South Chicago Community center, 9035 Brandon avenue.

Complete First Aid Course.

One A. Y. R. club at the South Chicago library recently completed a first aid course under Mrs. Hirsch E. Sobel, Red Cross instructor. Another club is sewing toys and dolls for children at evacuee camps. The articles are packed in cases with munitions, and shipped abroad by the British War Relief society.

The two boys' A. Y. R. clubs at Bessemer park fieldhouse are engaged in commando drills and physical fitness training under direction of Alex Mitchell. Miss Lottie Paterini's A. Y. R. club of girls at the park is learning modern nutrition in addition to nursery care of children.

A community-wide wrestling tournament for A. Y. R. boys in South Chicago schools will be held in a few weeks at Bessemer park as part of the physical fitness program.

Pick 160 Leaders.

A total of 160 Youth Reserve block leaders have been chosen in the South Chicago community, Mrs. Jenkinson reported. All are enrolled in the senior group, 16 years or older.

Sergt. Daniel J. Barrett, Kenwood community activities director, expects that the A. Y. R. clubs he has organized will total 1,000 members by the end of this week, as a result of the enrollment drive started last month. Five hundred more are expected by the end of February.

Youth Reserves are enrolling schoolmates and organizing more clubs in Kenwood community schools.

Sixty OCD Aids.

Six classes have begun studying first aid, fire and police warden work, salvaging, and other aids to civilian defense units. The Youth Reserves in these classes meet at the Oakland-Kenwood American Legion post, the Blackstone branch library, and the Kenwood OCD headquarters, 1155 East 47th street.

Sergt. Barrett is planning a recreation program to keep Kenwood youth active when they are not engaged in training or civilian defense work.

Sergt. Barrett, an Illinois state police officer, recently returned from a year's tour, during which he spoke on safety education before 58,000 persons in 900 schools. He is a former Golden Gloves boxer and holder of a C. Y. O. scholarship. In addition to heading A. Y. R. work in the community he is activities director of the Oakland-Kenwood district of the Boy Scouts.

Name Wilson Senior.

Marshall Warwick, 17 year old Wilson junior college senior, has been appointed A. Y. R. leader for the Woodlawn community by Community Comm. Harry Gaskins. Young Warwick is the son of Mrs. A. Warwick, 1521 East 60th street.

Permanent Youth Reserves headquarters have been established in the Woodlawn OCD offices at 6248 Kimbark avenue. Nine of the twelve Woodlawn zones have selected boy or girl A. Y. R. leaders. As quickly as the youth are admitted to the reserves they are being assigned to the community's current project, a victory garden survey. A quarter of Woodlawn's vacant lots already have been surveyed.

Young Warwick will preside at biweekly meetings of A. Y. R. zone leaders, the first of which is scheduled for next month. Warwick was senior civilian defense messenger in his block before his recent appointment. He was an R. O. T. C. cadet at Hyde Park High school and a Boy Scout leader.

AIR APPEALS NET FLOOD OF KEYS, KNIVES, PENNIES

Donations of Listeners Boost Salvage.

Pictures of the headliners of the Chicago Theater of the Air, broadcasting operettas over W-G-N-Mutual at 8 p. m. Saturdays, are presented in the "Album of the Air" in today's picture section of the Tribune. Photos of the stars of the Abbott and Costello show also are included on the page.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Fulton Lewis Jr., W-G-N Mutual Washington commentator, started something when he broadcast several appeals to listeners to send in their old keys so that copper and nickel may be extracted from them for war uses.

He got more than 5,000,000 keys [more than 46 tons] and a lot of assorted other items including burglar kits, old fashioned watches, brass knuckles, counterfeit coins, and three fur coats from a lady in Maine who thought they might be used by soldiers in Arctic climes.

Starts Flood of Pennies.

Then Ralph Edwards, who conducts Truth or Consequences on NBC, started a flood of pennies addressed to Mrs. Dennis Mullane of Staten Island. "Consequence" listeners were asked to send in a penny to Mrs. Mullane for her marine son's war bonds. The letters, some 250,000 of them, are averaging about three cents each. The campaign has reacted as a "consequence" on Edwards himself. The Mullane home overflowed with mail so Edwards had to put a staff of 15 workers to opening the letters. Some $7,000 has already been gathered for war bonds thru this stunt. And still the letters pour in.

Capt. Midnight of the Blue network has launched a nation-wide radio campaign titled "Save a Life with a Knife." The objective is to collect knives for American soldiers, marines, and navy men in the South Pacific.

Knives Have Trading Value.

Hunting knives, large sized pocket knives and Boy Scout knives are wanted. The blades should be over four but not more than eight inches long. The knives are valuable not only in combat but for their "trading" value with natives. Each contributor is being asked to put his name on a tag and tie it to the knife so that the soldier who receives it will know who sent it. The knives should be sent directly to Maj. Gen. B. M. Giles, commanding general, Fourth Air Force, San Francisco, Cal.

Radio Valentine

Norma Jean Ross is featured on the Moose Fireside Party on W-G-N-Mutual at 5:30 p. m. Sundays and on NBC's Ma Perkins at 2:15 weekdays.

PRESENT 'FAUST' ON AIR THEATER NEXT SATURDAY

Marion Claire, soprano prima donna of the Chicago Theater of the Air, and Eugene Conley, lyric tenor of the San Carlo Opera company, will be starred in a streamlined version of the opera "Faust" on W-G-N, W59C, and the Mutual network at 8 p. m. Saturday.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, will speak.

Miss Claire will be cast in the singing rôle of Marguerite while the speaking lines will be taken by Laurette Fillbrandt, who has been engaged to portray all dramatic rôles for characters sung by Miss Claire.

Miss Fillbrandt has appeared on many leading network programs.

Mr. Conley will sing the rôle of Dr. Faust while Bret Morrison will take the speaking lines for the part. The radio adaptation of the opera was prepared by Jack La Frandre, writer-director of the Saturday night series. Musical background will be supplied by the W-G-N symphony orchestra under the direction of Henry Weber and by the chorus led by Robert Trendler.

BROOKS, GREEN TO SPEAK OVER W-G-N THURSDAY

The addresses of United States Sen. Wayland Brooks and Gov. Dwight Green before the annual Lincoln day dinner of the Illinois Republican state central committee at the Sherman hotel next Thursday, will be broadcast exclusively by W-G-N from 9:30 to 10 p. m. Gov. Green will speak from 9:30 to 9:45 p. m., and Sen. Brooks will speak from 9:45 to 10.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Feb. 8.
Make out the seed list and send it to the seedman immediately. Vegetable seeds will be short this season because citizens are realizing the importance of raising all the vegetables they can in their own yard.

Tuesday, Feb. 9.
Grow some potatoes if the soil is suitable. Potatoes revel in a loose, loamy soil, one that is filled with humus. If it is heavy grow something else.

Wednesday, Feb. 10.
Gardeners who have only a small space will grow a little lettuce, chard, beets, or any of the smaller things and perhaps train tomatoes along the fence if there are hours of sunshine.

Thursday, Feb. 11.
If any tulip roots show thru the drainage hole bring a few pots in the window for flowering, but if they are not well rooted wait until they are. Continue to root cuttings for outdoor planting. Look over the garden and if any plants have heaved press the sail around them. After the bulbous plants are thru flowering continue to water them to encourage full maturity.

Friday, Feb. 12.
Cyclamen bulbs can be saved for flowering again if properly handled, altho the flowers may be smaller than the first flowering period. Store in a cool place after flowering and when the ground is free from frost plant outdoors.

Water carefully; do not allow them to become too dry or they will suffer. Bordering the tulip bed with English daisies or pansies gives a fine effect.

Saturday, Feb. 13.
Some kinds of dahlias do well, flowering freely, if sown early. These include the dwarf Unwin varieties. They are useful for bedding and cutting. Buy the seed now and sow about the end of the month.

Anne Brown Will Sing on Kostelanetz Show

Anne Brown, Negro soprano, and Sergt. Eugene List, pianist, will be guests on Andre Kostelanetz' program at 3:30 p. m. today over WBBM-CBS. Miss Brown will offer "Summertime." Sergt. List will play the C-sharp minor "Waltz" by Chopin. Kostelanetz will conduct the orchestra in the playing of Porter's "I Concentrate on You" and Adams' "There Are Such Things."

G. O. P. READY FOR 22D WARD BATTLE

BAPTISTS MARK GOLDEN YEAR OF BERWYN CHURCH

Banquet Thursday to Recall Founding.

On the night of Feb. 11, 1893, a meeting was held in what was then the new Berwyn hall for the purpose of establishing the Berwyn Baptist church. The church was organized that night with 24 members. The hall where they met was on the second floor in the Grove-Kenilworth block on Windsor avenue.

The Rev. Duncan.

Thursday night, the anniversary of that meeting a half century ago will be celebrated by a banquet and program in the newly decorated assembly room of the present Baptist church. Letters will be read from former pastors and nonresident members, and photographs of past events will be displayed.

The golden anniversary observance began last Sunday with a campaign during which 50 couples went forth to meet personally every member of the church and of the congregation. The golden anniversary sermon will be preached at this morning's service.

One Charter Member Survives.

But one charter member of the organizing group survives. He is George H. Anderson, former mayor of Berwyn and master of the Berwyn Masonic lodge. Mrs. F. B. Pease, in whose home early meetings of the church were held, died two months ago. Her husband not only was largely instrumental in founding the church but until his death, in 1915, gave of his time and means toward its advancement.

J. A. Hessler, a member of the anniversary committee, who has gathered incidents connected with the early days of the church, said old-timers who knew Berwyn 50 years ago never failed to mention how the sidewalks floated about in the rainy season and how commuters resorted to boats or rubber boots in getting to and from their homes and the Burlington station. It was at such a period that neighbors met at the Pease home, 34th street and Oak Park avenue, to hold cottage prayer meetings and plan a Baptist church.

Frame Chapel First Building.

In the beginning, the Rev. Mr. Martin and the Rev. Mr. Turney held short pastorates. They were followed in 1899 by the Rev. William S. Abernethy who had just completed his theological training.

The year the church was organized, a small frame chapel was built at a cost of $3,000 on the corner of what is now 34th street and Clinton avenue. The dream of erecting a larger church was not fulfilled until five years later.

When the membership had grown to 150 in 1906, a stone structure, replacing the frame one, was built and dedicated. The Rev. Mr. Abernethy served as pastor until 1913, by which time the membership had more than doubled and the $35,000 church building was mostly paid for.

Serves 19 Year Pastorate.

Later pastors were the Rev. Mark F. Sanborn and the Rev. Henry Waring, the latter serving during the first World war years. The Rev. Mr. Waring was succeeded by the Rev. F. Paul Langhorne, whose pastorate continued for 19 years until May, 1942.

The Rev. Donald Duncan, coming from Shenandoah, Ia., is the present pastor and chairman of the golden anniversary committee. Other committee members are Mrs. Marmet Richards, Mrs. H. L. MacDonald, Mrs. Noah Abrams, Mrs. B. M. Smith, H. L. Meeker, and J. A. Hessler.

TWO WOMEN, 154 MEN REMAIN IN COUNCIL RACES

One hundred fifty-four men and two women remained in the race for Chicago's 50 aldermanic posts after the withdrawal deadline last Wednesday.

Of the 202 who filed for the offices between Dec. 26 and Jan. 19, 46 eliminated themselves or were eliminated. Of these, 39 withdrew, 12 of them after the validity of their nominating petitions had been questioned. The names of seven others were ordered off the ballots because of deficiencies in their petitions.

The two women still in are Florence Tye Jennison [20th] and Mrs. Catherine Reutel [45th]. Feminine candidates in the 11th and 44th wards were disqualified and one in the 5th ward withdrew.

Sitting aldermen are unopposed in four wards—the 4th, 24th, 28th, and 30th. Eleven wards have only two candidates each and thus are certain to avoid runoffs. They are wards 1, 9, 11, 25, 27, 31, 32, 34, 37, 48, and 49. Incumbent aldermen are seeking election in all except the 1st, 16th, and 40th wards. There are vacancies in the 5th, 7th, 10th, 14th, 20th, 22d, 33d, and 37th wards.

ORT Federation.

The Women's West Side chapter of the American ORT federation will elect officers at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow night in the labor lyceum.

Look Out! Gremlins Are Coming to Oak Park Friday—in Dance Pageant

The story of the Gremlins, one of the strangest legends to have grown out of the present war, will be told in dance pantomime Friday night at the 13th annual Oak Park playground pageant in the Oak Park-River Forest Township High school. Paratroops whose chutes have been ruined by the tiny axes of the mischievous Gremlins are, left to right, Donna Sheehan, Barbara Wilson, and Ruth Henkel. They will represent Field playground, one of the five parks taking part in the affair.

The Gremlins began waging war on the R. A. F. pilots when the woodcutters penetrated their enchanted forest and chopped down trees to make way for new landing fields. Stevenson park will furnish the woodcutters. Three of them are, left to right, Patricia Quinn, Vivian Tuerk, and Sue Grogan.

"The Gremlins Enlist" is the pageant which in the end shows how the American aviators explain to the Gremlins that they are their friends and are trying to keep their enchanted world free from the axis powers. Three of the woodcutters' friends and two of the Gremlins who have enlisted to help in the fight are, left to right, Judith Longren, Joan Baci, and Dolores Floody of Barrie park and Agnes Hanley and Patricia Untied, Gremlins from Carroll park.

Roberta Donald and Barbara Bruce of Field playground will play the parts of flipperty-gibbets, little girl Gremlins. Their costumes will include the pointed boots and saucy ears that all Gremlins are supposed to have.

Mark Scouts' 33d Year in West Towns

Celebrating the 33d anniversary of the founding of the Boy Scouts of America, 3,618 members of the West Suburban council, comprised of 98 units in villages along the Burlington between Berwyn and Downers Grove, have planned activities that will continue thruout the week.

Inspired by the 1943 slogan, "Toughen Up, Buckle Down, and Carry On to Victory," programs will include window displays, dinners, salvage drives, North Pole hikes, school demonstrations, hobby displays, Dad nights, courts of honor, panorama shows, fire department demonstrations, and first aid events. Today will be observed as Scout Sunday.

In Berwyn, Scouts tomorrow night will take over city offices at a special meeting of the city council. Tomorrow night the Scouts will take over the village offices. A court of honor will be held Wednesday night. BACK ANTHONY BENKOWSKI IN W. SIDE FIGHT

Challenge Long Rule of Sonnenschein.

BY PAUL HEALY.

Despite its long tradition as a Democratic bailiwick, the 22d is regarded as one of the few west side wards in which the Republicans have a chance to elect an alderman. Four contenders, none of whom is widely known, are fighting for the seat vacated last fall by Henry J. Sonnenschein, who has dominated the ward since 1933. Sonnenschein was elected clerk of the Superior court.

The west side has had only one Republican alderman in recent years and that representative—Ald. William V. Pacelli [20th]—died in November, 1942. Three of the incumbents—Fred Fischman [24th], George Kells [28th], and Edward J. Upton [30th]—are unopposed and two others, Joseph F. Ropa [21st] and Harry Sain [27th], have no opponents backed by Republican ward organizations.

May Be Four Runoffs.

Only the races in the 20th, 22d, 36th and 37th may go into runoffs, which are scheduled for April 6 for all wards where no candidate receives a majority of the votes cast in the election Feb. 23. Political labels do not appear on the ballots, since the election is officially nonpartisan, but as usual regular party organizations are sponsoring candidates in most of the wards.

G. O. P. leaders are expecting to make a much better showing in the 22d because of the elimination of Sonnenschein, who polled 86 per cent of the vote in 1935 and 59 per cent in 1939. As ward committeeman, Sonnenschein has announced the organization is indorsing Otto Janousek, a 6 foot 6 inch giant who works as an auditor for the Chicago fire department.

Janousek is well known among the city hall followers of the horse races. Tho he has never run for office previously, he is expected to be a strong contender because of the strength of the Kelly-Nash machine in the ward. He is a Bohemian.

G. O. P. Backs Benkowski.

The regular Republican organization is backing Anthony Benkowski, who may attract a heavy vote from the Poles, who are numerically second only to the Bohemians in the 22d. Benkowski, an investigator for the state department of finance, is 47 years old, married and has 10 children, two of whom are in the army.

Benkowski was a candidate for the council seat in the 22d in 1931, when he drew 3,534 votes but ran second to Joseph Cepak in a field of four. Cepak, a Democrat, held the seat from 1923 until 1932, when he died. He was succeeded by Sonnenschein in a special election.

The other candidates are Charles Miska, a minor candidate for alderman in the ward in 1935 and 1939, and Frank Novak. Miska and Novak are independents. Miska is Bohemian and Novak is Polish.

Edward J. Komorous, a fifth candidate in the 22d, who appeared to be worrying the Kelly-Nash forces, was permitted to withdraw his name from the ballot on Thursday, the day after the deadline. Komorous had been dropped some time ago by the ward organization. He had been an associate of the late Anton J. Cermak.

Kells Will Be Unopposed.

Ald. Kells was given a free ride to another term in the 28th when the petition of Edward J. Lyons, who was indorsed by the regular Republican organization, was ruled out last week by the board of election commissioners.

Three other candidates on the west side withdrew. They were Stephen J. Sullivan [27th], Joseph F. Gubbins [36th], and Joseph H. Pierce [37th]. For the fifth consecutive time no one filed a candidacy in opposition to the Democratic incumbent in the 24th. Fischman took the seat in a special election two years ago to fill the vacancy left by Jacob M. Arvey, who entered the army.

LA GRANGE MAN HEADS SEARS Y FINANCE DRIVE

Phillip O. Voss Named; $10,000 Sought.

Phillip O. Voss of La Grange has been selected chairman of the $10,000 finance campaign for Sears Y. M. C. A., 3210 Arthington street. He will be in charge of three divisions which include eight teams to canvas the territory surrounding the Sears center.

Phillip O. Voss.

Situated in the heart of the west side industrial area, the center serves a community of racial mixtures. The area is crowded and has many underprivileged families. The community is made up largely of Italians, Jews, and some Irish.

Other Funds Help.

The campaign for $10,000 represents 4.9 per cent of the total operating budget, Voss explained. The other funds come from fees paid by adult members and from residence and cafeteria operations and from the community fund.

The finance campaign committee consists of the following: Voss, chairman; Frank M. Judson of Winnetka, special gifts; Fred B. Hubenthal of Maywood, division A; Fred A. Snow of Riverside, division B, and Robert Storkan of Oak Park, division C.

Team captains under division A are the Rev. William M. Shepard, 2116 South Drake avenue; Mrs. Henry Cozart, 2740 Wilcox street, and Edward Printy, 901 South Kedzie avenue. Team captains in division B are Albert F. Pipenhagen, 2336 North Kostner avenue, and Jim Hans, 3210 Arthington street, and in division C there are Edward Herda of Berwyn, Ben Polisky, 1520 South Pulaski road, and Louis Engel, 1933 South Homan avenue.

Can't Pay Own Way.

Hubenthal is the acting boys' work chairman and F. J. Wieting is the boys' work secretary.

Altho the boys' work of the Sears "Y" is only a part of the program, Voss pointed out when he organized the finance campaign, it has little opportunity to provide income for itself. It is supported thru contributions.

PROVISO CONCERT BAND PREPARES SCENIC EFFECTS

Using scenery for the first time in several years, Proviso High school's concert band directed by J. Irving Tallmadge will present the second in its series of 1942-'43 concerts at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Lighting effects also will be used.

Scenery painted by art students of the school five years ago will provide a background for "Coronation Scene" from the opera "Boris Godounow," by Moussorgsky. The historical composition opens with the ringing of the Kremlin bells.

GREMLINS WHO PLAGUE FLYERS LIVE IN PAGEANT

Oak Park Children Play Mythical Elves.

The story of "The Gremlins Enlist" will be told in dance pantomine Friday night at the 13th annual Oak Park playground pageant in the Oak Park-River Forest Township High school. More than 500 children will play the parts of the elfish characters who plague British flyers with their impish and mischievous tricks.

The story takes place deep in the Druids' forest of England where before the war the Gremlins with pointed ears and impudent noses frolicked and capered about in an enchanted world of their own. The 500 children will show how the war brought many invasions into the elfish world always before forbidden to trespassers.

Elves Begin Own War.

First the woodcutters arrived to chop down the trees to make way for new landing fields and then the R. A. F. pilots and their planes came. According to the legend which has sprung up with the present war, the Gremlins then began a war of their own.

They drilled bullet like holes in the planes so they dropped into the English channel while en route home after raids on Germany. They cut holes with their tiny axes in the chutes of paratroopers. They whispered in the pilots' ears and told them to do queer things, like flying upside down when going into an attack.

Not really meaning to be bad, however, they occasionally performed good deeds, too. Sometimes they directed a wounded pilot and his crippled plane to safety. But whether their intent is good or bad, they swarm on the planes' wings, in the cabins, and over the controls and the R. A. F. flyers credit all good luck and blame bad luck on the Gremlins.

Converted by Yanks.

The Oak Park children will give the legend an American twist with the arrival of American flyers who explain to the Gremlins that the British are invading the forests only temporarily and that their real enemies are the axis powers. As soon as the Gremlins understand, they agree to enlist and exert all their mischievousness toward the enemies across the channel.

Five parks, Robert Louis Stevenson, Hans Anderson, Barrie, Eugene Field, and Louis Carroll, are coöperating in the pageant. The children will wear the pointed impish looking caps and pointed boots of the Gremlins. There will be an airplane on the stage, R. A. F. pilots, American aviators, and woodcutters.

Miss Lily Ruth Hanson is the dramatic director. The play directors in charge of the dances will be Miss Mary Jason, Mrs. Hazel Bowes, Miss Mary Meagher, Miss Ann Davis, Miss Len Calla, and Miss Betsy Ross.

Pageant Written Here.

The pageant was written by Miss Josephine Blackstock, playgrounds director and author of the new children's book, "Wings for Nikias." Miss Blackstock has written most of the previous pantomines, selecting always a theme of current interest.

Special Gremlin music has been arranged by Harry John Brown of Oak Park. One of the outstanding young musicians of the village, Brown is a former conductor of the Junior Symphony orchestra in the west suburb and is now a student on scholarship at Eastman college in Rochester, N. Y. He has won several prizes in national contests and has done some outstanding work at the Interlochen School of Music camp in Interlochen, Mich.

Other music for the pantomine is being arranged by Miss Anne Peterson and Miss Alice Krygsman. The pianists will be Miss Pauline Hippensteel and Mrs. Lena Jackson. The costumes are being designed by Mrs. Ross Alley and her staff.

Kinsman Is Narrator.

The narrator will be David Kinsman. Voices of characters in pantomine will be those of Louis Schaeger, king of Gremlins and narration; Ronny Oliver, first Gremlin; Bill Laughlin, English aviator and woodcutter; Jim Rathslag, R. A. F. and American aviator, and Betty Manning, R. A. F. flyer.

Principal characters in the pantomine will be played by Richard Christiansen, king of Gremlins; Lou Anne Whyte, Gremlin leader; Gilbert Rau, English aviator; Jack Hedges, American aviator; June Puddicombe, first R. A. F. flyer; Ruth Henkel and Betty Bramhall, paratroopers; Marion Brown and Dorothy Walker, fifinellas, who are Gremlin women, and Ronny Zumbrun, trouble shooter. Others will play the parts of widgets, little boy Gremlins, and flipperty-gibbets, who are little girls.

A special Gremlin dance will be given by Beverly Fauntz. Andrew Walters will be stage manager and Ashley B. Smith, member of the playgrounds board, will open the program with greetings. Dr. Theodore M. Nelson, chairman of the playgrounds board, will preside during the evening.

NEW HOT WATER TANK JACKET IS FUEL CONSERVER

Also Gives Appliance Dressy Front.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

There is a new and good looking jacket overcoat on the market, designed for the family hot water tank. It is reasonably priced and yet in its simulated wood grain finish of blue or green, it can take its place in bathroom, kitchen, or basement.

This tank jacket is a fuel saver. Its air cell construction holds fast to the heat in your tank instead of letting it steal out into the room. You also can count on water heating faster if your tank has one of these jackets, and it stays hot longer.

Simple to Install.

Construction consists of an inner layer of five-ply air cell insulating paper and an outer layer of corrugated paper. The jacket is simple to install, for it comes complete in one unit with detailed instructions as to how it should be fitted.

There's a jacket for a 30 gallon tank which costs around $2.50 and one for a 40 gallon tank which costs about $3.

Just what is the difference between maintenance and remodeling work? What limit is there on repair work; on remodeling? What sort of home can a war worker build, and what limit is there on war conversion and remodeling?

Good Guide Available.

These are questions frequently heard and the answers aren't always quick in coming. However, there is an excellent free booklet available which contains the answers to a great many questions home owners are asking now, and well worth a place in a home owners' shelf of building and remodeling data. It has been printed by a nationally known manufacturer of building materials and lives up to its title: "A War Time Guide to Better Homes."

There often isn't a great deal of difference between what spells repair work and remodeling work.

All the above items are elaborated upon and put forward with brevity and interest.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Feb. 8.

Make out the seed list and send it to the seedman immediately. Vegetable seeds will be short this season because citizens are realizing the importance of raising all the vegetables they can in their own yard.

Do not waste seeds; wait until the soil is in good condition before sowing. Decayed manure is a fine source of humus and contains some plant food. Spread it over the ground and as soon as digging can start spade it under.

Tuesday, Feb. 9.

Grow some potatoes if the soil is suitable. Potatoes revel in a loose, loamy soil, one that is filled with humus. If it is heavy grow something else.

Most vegetables like full sun, but if only six hours of sun is available good vegetables can be grown. Sod land that was plowed last spring should produce good potatoes.

Wednesday, Feb. 10.

Gardeners who have only a small space will grow a little lettuce, chard, beets, or any of the smaller things and perhaps train tomatoes along the fence if there are hours of sunshine.

One of the best varieties is Firesteel; it has large fruits which are early, smooth and red. The vine is small and lends itself readily to staking. It is drouth resisting and matures in 62 days.

Thursday, Feb. 11.

If any tulip roots show thru the drainage hole bring a few pots in the window for flowering, but if they are not well rooted wait until they are. Continue to root cuttings for outdoor planting. Look over the garden and if any plants have heaved press the sail around them. After the bulbous plants are thru flowering continue to water them to encourage full maturity.

Friday, Feb. 12.

Cyclamen bulbs can be saved for flowering again if properly handled, altho the flowers may be smaller than the first flowering period. Store in a cool place after flowering and when the ground is free from frost plant outdoors.

Water carefully; do not allow them to become too dry or they will suffer. Bordering the tulip bed with English daisies or pansies gives a fine effect.

Saturday, Feb. 13.

Some kinds of dahlias do well, flowering freely, if sown early. These include the dwarf Unwin varieties. They are useful for bedding and cutting. Buy the seed now and sow about the end of the month.

PLAN ARMY-NAVY E CEREMONY FOR POWERS PLANTS

West Side Tent, Canvas Firm Recognized.

The army-navy E award for production will be presented to Powers and company for its River Forest and Chicago plants at a ceremony Tuesday afternoon in the Paradise ballroom, 128 North Pulaski road. More than 1,500 employés and guests are expected to be present including army and navy officers, west suburban mayors, village presidents, and civic leaders.

The award will be the first one given a midwest company in the tent manufacture and canvas field, Frank H. Powers said. A few weeks ago the Powers plant in Philadelphia received a similar award, thus making the company 100 per cent honored for production.

Col. Rogow to Officiate.

The flag will be presented by Lt. Col. Arthur H. Rogow, special assistant to Brig. Gen. Allen R. Kimball, commander of the Jeffersonville, Ind., quartermaster corps depot. The token presentations to employés will be made by Lt. A. B. Maley of the navy.

The various phases of the award celebration will take most of the day and will include an inspection of the River Forest plant from noon until 1 o'clock. After the principal ceremony from 4:30 to 5 p. m. at which Hal Totten, sports writer and radio announcer, will be master of ceremonies, more than 1,000 persons will be entertained at dinner in the Paradise ballroom.

The plants' three work shifts will be staggered in such a way that a maximum of the employés may attend, Powers said.

Invite Area Commanders.

Guests who have been invited include Maj. Gen. H. S. Aurand, 6th service command; Rear Adm. John Downes, commandant of 9th naval district; Brig. Gen. Kimball of Jeffersonville; Lt. Col. Chester L. Fordney of the marine corps; Comm. G. A. T. Washburn of the Glenview naval base, and Mayor Kelly.

Heads of the west suburban municipalities who have been invited include John Brink, River Forest president; Tom Collins Jr., Forest Park president; Andy Frenzel, Melrose Park mayor; Earl Broberg, Maywood president; John Cullerton, Elmwood Park president; Robert McMasters, Oak Park president; Fred J. Marz, acting mayor of Berwyn; George Stedronsky, Cicero president; William J. Mink, Bellwood president, and Merritt Braga, Broadview president.

Honor War Mothers.

Mrs. Lillian T. Sheets of Oak Park, employed in the River Forest plant, and Mrs. Mary Katz, 6216 South Halsted street, of the Throop street plant, will represent the employés. Mrs. Sheets has two sons in the services, one of them, Freeman Sheets, a prisoner of the Japanese in China. Mrs. Katz' husband is in the army and three sons are in service. One is in the army, one in the navy, and the third in the coast guard.

The program will include an emergency service demonstration by troop 9 under the direction of Quig Lewis and Nate Whiteside.

A special feature of the activities in Downers Grove will be a banquet Saturday night at the Methodist church with Joe Butela in charge.

WESTERN SPRINGS PLAYERS TO GIVE FAMOUS DRAMA

Little Theater Revives 'Uncle Tom's Cabin.'

For its first revival of a play in its 14 year history, the Little Theater of Western Springs will present "Uncle Tom's Cabin" starting Wednesday and continuing thru Sunday. The opening performance of the dramatization of Harriet Beecher Stowe's world famed story will be given for the benefit of the Infant Welfare of Western Springs, with Mrs. C. A. Burton in charge of the ticket sales for that evening.

Delores Dey.

On a gaslit stage, the play made its debut in Troy, N. Y., in 1852. From that time until 1931, the drama, translated into 17 languages, was never off the boards. In the height of its popularity, companies gave 18 performances a week, the actors partaking of their meals while still in costume. The first Chicago performance of the play was in 1858.

Cast from Several Villages.

For six weeks a cast of 22 players, representing villages along the Burlington from Berwyn to Hinsdale, have been working to recapture the authentic simplicity of the story that is credited with having had much to do in changing the course of American history.

In costume, in speech, and in scenic background, the Western Springs group will seek to transport members of the audience back to the days of their grandfathers, the better to understand the problems and emotions that stirred the nation on the brink of a civil war.

With Howard Bay, New York stage designer, Mary Cattell has worked out new ideas for the scene designs. Salvatore Lange, remembered for his sets of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," is the producer. Katherine Wheeler and Dorothy Hattendorf, artists, are in charge of makeup.

Berwynite to Be "Uncle Tom."

Helen Wright of La Grange, who has costumed Little Theater plays for the last six years, will be assisted by Gwendolyn Hautau of La Grange, and Kay Gairns and Phyllis MacLean of Western Springs. An ivory satin afternoon dress belonging to Mrs. Gairns' great-grandmother has been sent from Philadelphia to be worn by "Little Eva's" mother.

AIR APPEALS NET FLOOD OF KEYS, KNIVES, PENNIES

Donations of Listeners Boost Salvage.

Pictures of the headliners of the Chicago Theater of the Air, broadcasting operettas over W-G-N-Mutual at 8 p. m. Saturdays, are presented in the "Album of the Air" in today's picture section of the Tribune. Photos of the stars of the Abbott and Costello show also are included on the page.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Fulton Lewis Jr., W-G-N Mutual Washington commentator, started something when he broadcast several appeals to listeners to send in their old keys so that copper and nickel may be extracted from them for war uses.

He got more than 5,000,000 keys [more than 46 tons] and a lot of assorted other items including burglar kits, old fashioned watches, brass knuckles, counterfeit coins, and three fur coats from a lady in Maine who thought they might be used by soldiers in Arctic climes.

Starts Flood of Pennies.

Then Ralph Edwards, who conducts Truth or Consequences on NBC, started a flood of pennies addressed to Mrs. Dennis Mullane of Staten Island. "Consequence" listeners were asked to send in a penny to Mrs. Mullane for her marine son's war bonds. The letters, some 250,000 of them, are averaging about three cents each. The campaign has reacted as a "consequence" on Edwards himself. The Mullane home overflowed with mail so Edwards had to put a staff of 15 workers to opening the letters. Some $7,000 has already been gathered for war bonds thru this stunt. And still the letters pour in.

Capt. Midnight of the Blue network has launched a nation-wide radio campaign titled "Save a Life with a Knife." The objective is to collect knives for American soldiers, marines, and navy men in the South Pacific.

Knives Have Trading Value.

Hunting knives, large sized pocket knives and Boy Scout knives are wanted. The blades should be over four but not more than eight inches long. The knives are valuable not only in combat but for their "trading" value with natives. Each contributor is being asked to put his name on a tag and tie it to the knife so that the soldier who receives it will know who sent it. The knives should be sent directly to Maj. Gen. B. M. Giles, commanding general, Fourth Air Force, San Francisco, Cal.

ALL-AMERICAN MUSIC SCHEDULED BY TOSCANINI

Ferde Grofe's "Grand Canyon Suite" will be the highlight of today's all-American symphony program to be presented by the NBC Symphony orchestra at 4 p. m. over WMAQ-NBC. This concert will be Arturo Toscanini's final appearance with the orchestra until April 4.

The work is in five parts: "Sunrise," "The Painted Desert," "On the Trail," "Sunset," and "Cloudburst." Composer Grofe will attend the broadcast.

Rounding out the program of American music will be Henry F. Gilbert's "Comedy Overture," Kent Kennan's "Night Soliloquy," and Charles Griffes' "The White Peacock."

Leopold Stokowski will resume the leadership of the orchestra next Sunday.

LAKE FOREST TO BE SALUTED BY FUTURE CITIZENS

A choral presentation of "The World Is Waiting for the Sunrise," by the Lake Forest High school mixed chorus will be a highlight of the Citizens of Tomorrow program on W-G-N from 1 to 1:30 p. m. today.

Citizens of Tomorrow is produced by Lewis James. Dick Enroth is the announcer and Jane Anderson is the piano accompanist.

BROOKS, GREEN TO SPEAK OVER W-G-N THURSDAY

The addresses of United States Sen. Wayland Brooks and Gov. Dwight Green before the annual Lincoln day dinner of the Illinois Republican state central committee at the Sherman hotel next Thursday, will be broadcast exclusively by W-G-N from 9:30 to 10 p. m. Gov. Green will speak from 9:30 to 9:45 p. m., and Sen. Brooks will speak from 9:45 to 10.

J. R. King in New M. C.

WEST SUBURBAN SCRAP PILE—9½ MILLION POUNDS

Tin Collection Concerns Salvage Officials.

West suburban areas collected 9,500,000 pounds of salvage in the last three months of 1942, according to figures recently released by William L. McFetridge, area salvage director.

Salvage officials expressed concern that only 500,000 pounds was in tin cans. They said they feared a rumor that cans were no longer needed or wanted had reduced collections.

McFetridge emphasized that the need is as great as ever and urged patrotic housewives to continue cleaning and saving cans. The three month record on general salvage was considered good, but more effort on all salvage was urged.

Includes Division 12.

The west suburban area includes all of division 12 in the salvage organization, most of division 11 and the more populous half of division 13.

These divisions include all of Milton, York, Lisle, and Downer's Grove townships and part of Addison township in Du Page county, Oak Park, and River Forest, Proviso township, and more than half of Lyons township in Cook county.

Division 11 accounted for 200,000 pounds of cans and 1,500,000 pounds of other salvage. Oak Park was credited with shipping 100,000 pounds of cans to lead the contributions, but Maywood with 20,000 and River Forest with 50,000 pounds were credited with good jobs for their populations. Reports for other towns were not complete.

Credit Reuben Pollock.

Division 12, which includes two thirds of Du Page county, had a much better record, according to the compilation, with 5,500,000 pounds of salvage exclusive of 150,000 pounds of cans. Reuben Pollock, Downer's Grove, division salvage chairman, was credited with the satisfactory total.

Elmhurst shipped 50,000 pounds of cans in three months to lead division 12 with 11,780 pounds in December alone. Lombard shipped 3,350 pounds in December. Some three month totals showed: Glen Ellyn, 9,000; Hinsdale, Riverside, and Brookfield, 20,000 pounds each.

Collect 3 Million Pounds.

Division 13 totaled 3,000,000 pounds of general salvage and 210,000 pounds of cans for three months, according to the McFetridge reports, with about two-thirds of this from La Grange, Cicero, Riverside, Brookfield, Lyons, and neighboring towns. Part of the division is in the southwest suburban area.

Cicero, with 50,000 pounds of tin cans shipped, led this division in the three month total, but Brookfield, with 12,000 population and 25,000 pounds of cans was praised for a good job. La Grange was reported to have shipped 35,000 pounds and Western Springs, with 5,000 population, 10,000 pounds of cans.

'FAUST' TO BE AIRED NEXT SATURDAY ON W-G-N'S AIR THEATER

Marion Claire, soprano prima donna of the Chicago Theater of the Air, and Eugene Conley, lyric tenor of the San Carlo Opera company, will be starred in a streamlined version of the opera "Faust" on W-G-N, W59C, and the Mutual network at 8 p. m. Saturday.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, will speak.

Miss Claire will be cast in the singing rôle of Marguerite while the speaking lines will be taken by Laurette Fillbrandt, who has been engaged to portray all dramatic rôles for characters sung by Miss Claire.

Miss Fillbrandt has appeared on many leading network programs.

Mr. Conley will sing the rôle of Dr. Faust while Bret Morrison will take the speaking lines for the part. The radio adaptation of the opera was prepared by Jack La Frandre, writer-director of the Saturday night series. Musical background will be supplied by the W-G-N symphony orchestra under the direction of Henry Weber and by the chorus led by Robert Trendler.

Anne Brown Will Sing on Kostelanetz Show

Anne Brown, Negro soprano, and Sergt. Eugene List, pianist, will be guests on Andre Kostelanetz' program at 3:30 p. m. today over WBBM-CBS. Miss Brown will offer "Summertime." Sergt. List will play the C-sharp minor "Waltz" by Chopin. Kostelanetz will conduct the orchestra in the playing of Porter's "I Concentrate on You" and Adams' "There Are Such Things."

WORKER IDEAS SPEED JOBS IN WAR INDUSTRY

1,400 Suggestions in Boxes Since April.

Stir the brew of which dreams are made and an idea may come bubbling forth.

In the two large southwest plants of the Acme Steel company at 2840 Archer avenue and at Riverdale, 1,400 ideas have bubbled from the caldron of inspiration since last April when an employé suggestion plan was introduced.

Time saving ideas, efficiency and safety plans, material reduction programs appeared in the suggestion boxes. Placed near drinking fountains and doorways, the boxes were handy and were reminders that Acme Steel, engaged in all-out production, would lend a willing ear to plans to step up that effort.

One-third Accepted.

Examiners of the suggestion slips are a committee of three officials, who pass the ideas for testing to engineers. To date, one-third of the plans have been accepted and checks awarded to their originators. Other plans are undergoing tests.

Valuable to the worker whose idea is accepted, aside from the financial reward and feeling of confidence, is his realization that he has made a contribution to the war. The majority of employés, men and women, have relatives in military service.

The employé's interest does not always stop even when he leaves the organization. Ernie Lense, 7915 Kimbark avenue, and Henry Fuller have both submitted meritorious ideas from their posts in the army.

Makes New Job for Self.

One worker was responsible for the creation of a new department and a new job for himself thru his suggestion for performing mechanically what had been done by hand. John Henry Schmidt is the new foreman of the new mechanical burring department.

A slender steel strap is a trademarked Acme product. Richard Clement, 3145 Emerald avenue, recommended an improved method of placing grips on the strap tensioning tool. The time for the job was reduced from 3.25 minutes to 1 minute. A suggestion by Gus Palmer, 2145 Fletcher street, for redesigning a shear link for one of the strapping tools will save 100 man hours per year.

Frank Rickerson, 1720 West 33d street, thought that if two pieces on a certain war job were milled at the same time, man hours could be saved. The output was doubled. James Hodgson, 3015 West 62d street, looked at a certain machine process and suggested eliminating three operations. This saved 80 man hours per year.

Saves Rehandling.

Much time was saved by Hester Kennedy's suggestion. Kennedy, who works at the Riverdale plant and lives at 15331 Lamon street, Oak Forest, compiled a chart of what he considered the best method for loading coils on skids. His idea reduces rehandling and saves between 500 and 1,000 man hours yearly.

Four hundred dollars' worth of material is the saving produced by James Whitelaw's plan to use magnets, instead of felt, to stop the feeding of the steel strap. A Riverdale employé, he lives at 14527 Kentucky avenue, Harvey. Harry Sweeney, Sterling drive, Flossmoor, compiled a list of equipment in his department which he figured was not being effectively used. The engineers checked the list, and agreed that the equipment would be more valuable to other departments.

Help on Fire Control.

In one plant operation, it is necessary to keep on hand fire extinguisher fluid to put out fires which are inherent to the job. Harry Sweeney, Leonard Wulff, and Stanley Skoglund suggested removal of an "I" beam, which results in a yearly saving of $300 to $500 in extinguisher fluid.

Few of the suggesters have had a complete high school education; most attended for two years, and then took night technical courses.

Archer Plant Employés.

Archer plant employés who participated in recent awards are: Herbert Abraham, 13939 Lincoln avenue; Ann Anderson, 6821 South Prairie street; Emil Bluege, 4217 South Mozart street; Lillian Christensen, 7943 Harvard avenue; William K. Cook, 15041 Riverside drive, Harvey; Steven Drapczyk, 4030 Brighton place; Juanita Hamer, 7442 South Harvard avenue; Helen Herbold, 7042 Chappel avenue; Carl Heslet, 7659 South Morgan street; John Jalowiec, 13734 Atlantic street, Riverdale; John Jarosz, 2753 South Whipple street.

Others are Betty Kirz, 6702 Wentworth avenue; Walter Kostecka, 3039 South Throop street; Vivian Lietzow, 3537 South Damen avenue; John McAloon, 1520 East 74th street; Stanley Nowak, 5741 South Paulina street; Arthur F. O'Brien, 7210 South Vernon avenue; Margaret O'Grady, 5643 South Ada street; George Pryczdziek, 28128 Throop street; J. H. Schmidt, 13329 Prairie avenue; Willis E. Sellers, 4253 South Artesian avenue; Carl Stedman, 9438 South Eggleston avenue; John Van Rossen, 619 West 138th street; John D. Verna, 10611 Edbrooke avenue.

Accepted suggestions were submit-

Workers' Ideas Speed War Production at Acme Steel Plant

Today factory workers are putting their brain children into an employe suggestion box, knowing that the ideas will receive careful examination by engineers. Among the 1,400 suggestions that have rolled into Acme Steel company employe boxes, since their introduction last spring, was an idea offered by Victoria Kochan, 3019 South Poplar avenue, a milling machine operator. She suggested an improved blank on which to report rejected materials. The new form provides a close check and reduces scrap loss, an important item in the steel industry.

Because John Henry Schmidt, 6741 South Parnell street, devised a mechanical method for burring and filing tool parts, he will be the foreman of a new department—the mechanical burring department. Formerly the operation was hand performed. Schmidt has received a nice check as first payment. He has two brothers in the services, one in the navy and the other in the army air corps.

Eleanore Kaukl, 2451 South Drake avenue, a timekeeper, suggested a way to speed war orders thru a more efficient handling of production standards. Eleanore has been with Acme Steel for 18 months. Her brother soon will enter the army.

Devices which John Parcych, 2905 Quinn street, originated have reduced the time for performing some operations from 2.14 minutes to .88 minute. An assembly bench worker, Parcych is married, has three children, and is an employe of almost six years' experience. His brother is a bombardier trainee with the army air corps.

Edward T. Jaeky, 7218 South Campbell avenue, has held his first job for 17 years. He is a machine shop inspector at the Archer avenue plant. His redesign of a pusher bar used on punch presses has saved 400 man hours per year of valuable toolmakers' time. Jaeky is married, has two children, and is a high school and trade school graduate.

City Asks Fire Boat for River War Industries

The United States Coast Guard has stationed a steel fire boat in the Calumet river to aid in protection of an estimated half a billion dollars worth of war industries, while the city administration continues efforts toward getting a bigger, better fire boat for the area.

There are about 45,000 workers in the big plants that line the river for nearly seven miles. But, altho the plants include three war boat building concerns and other vital industries, a $200,000 fire boat appropriation in the city's budget for 1942 went unused because of priority difficulties, according to William A. Rowan, former 10th ward alderman who has retired to go to congress.

Boat Item Cut to $5,000.

The city's appropriations for 1943 included a fire boat item of $5,000, replacing the $200,000 item contained in the 1941 appropriations. This was included in line with a resolution offered by Rowan and approved by the council recently.

The $5,000 appropriation will buy very little river fire fighting equipment, Rowan said, but it indicates the city's intent to get such equipment when it becomes available. If the item is in the budget, and priorities are eased later, then it would be possible to shift money from other city funds to provide the fire boat, he explained.

Need Extra Insurance.

Besides the coast guard fire boat, the city at present maintains four fire boats on the river, but the new one is wanted as extra insurance, according to Rowan and Fire Marshal Michael Corrigan.

The largest city boat is the Joseph Medill, veteran of nearly 40 years of fire service, which was transferred to the Calumet river a few years ago when a new boat was put in service in the down town area.

The Medill is kept under steam at the 95th street bridge. One of its two boilers may not pass government inspection in March, Corrigan said. Under good conditions the boat can make eight miles an hour. Some times five miles is its best. This compares with the 15 to 16 miles an hour of the Fred A. Busse which serves the down town area.

Three "Jeep." Boats.

The city obtained three former coast guard boats six months ago, equipped them with water pumps and stationed them in the river. These are gasoline driven and make 12 miles easily, Corrigan said. They are called "jeep" boats. They have proved valuable for small fires, despite the fact that they throw only 1,000 gallons of water a minute, compared to the Medill's 4,500 to 5,000 gallons. But they are fast and maneuver into small slips and shallow water where the Medill can not go, it was explained.

Both Rowan and Corrigan agreed that a larger boat of the Busse type is needed.

The industrial area involved includes the Pullman Standard works, which plans a submarine chaser a week by spring; the American Shipbuilding company, the Republic Steel corporation, with the south works of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation near by; several other heavy industries, and half a dozen large grain elevators, one with capacity for 10,000,000 bushels, Rowan pointed out.

TWO WOMEN, 154 MEN REMAIN IN COUNCIL RACES

One hundred fifty-four men and two women remained in the race for Chicago's 50 aldermanic posts after the withdrawal deadline last Wednesday.

Of the 202 who filed for the offices between Dec. 26 and Jan. 19, 46 eliminated themselves or were eliminated. Of these, 39 withdrew, 12 of them after the validity of their nominating petitions had been questioned. The names of seven others were ordered off the ballots because of deficiencies in their petitions.

The two women still in are Florence Tye Jennison [20th] and Mrs. Catherine Reutel [45th]. Feminine candidates in the 11th and 44th wards were disqualified and one in the 5th ward withdrew.

Sitting aldermen are unopposed in four wards—the 4th, 24th, 28th, and 30th. Eleven wards have only two candidates each and thus are certain to avoid runoffs. They are wards 1, 9, 11, 25, 27, 31, 32, 34, 37, 48, and 49. Incumbent aldermen are seeking election in all except the 1st, 16th, and 40th wards. There are vacancies in the 5th, 7th, 10th, 14th, 20th, 22d, 33d, and 37th wards.

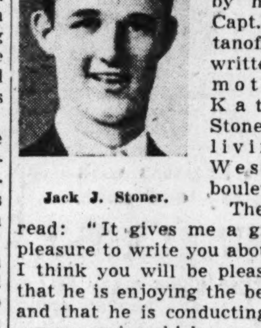
CORP. JACK STONER COMMENDED BY CHIEF IN LETTER TO MOTHER

Overseas since last October, Corp. Jack J. Stoner, a member of the aviation engineers' unit of the marine corps, has been commended by his superior, Capt. Louis Soltanoff, in a letter written to Jack's mother, Mrs. Kathryn E. Stoner, a widow, living at 748 West Garfield boulevard.



Jack J. Stoner.

The letter read: "It gives me a great deal of pleasure to write you about your son: I think you will be pleased to know that he is enjoying the best of health and that he is conducting himself in a manner in which you may be well proud. The fate of our country rests in the hands of such young men. The resuhlts can only be peace and victory."

Following his graduation in 1939 from Englewood High school, Jack attended Northwestern university for two years.

Longwood Mothers.

The Longwood Mothers' club will have a dessert bridge party at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in the school gymnasium, 95th and Throop streets.

ST. IGNATIUS FETE TO DRAW MANY FROM SOUTH SIDE

Alumni of St. Ignatius High school will hold their annual dinner at 6:30 o'clock Wednesday at the La Salle hotel. The Rev. John A. Kilian S. J., Jesuit missionary, will speak. The dinner will honor two groups—the 1943 graduating class and the 600 men from the school now in service.

Willard M. Woll, 9320 Throop street, is president of the association; Emmet Byrne, 2124 West 116th street, vice president; John L. Lenihan, 8252 Drexel avenue, secretary, and John K. Moore, 6731 Indiana avenue, chairman of the board of directors.

Prominent south side alumni who have indicated they will attend the dinner include: Ald. John Duffy, 9033 Hoyne avenue; Judge Joseph Graber, 8201 Elizabeth street; Thomas Nash, 9948 South Hoyne; Judge John Bolton, 10422 Wood street, and Judge Neil Harrington, 2034 West 99th street.

With AMERICA'S FIGHTERS

The commission of second lieutenant in the United States army air force recently was awarded to two southwest side men by the advanced flying school at Mather field, California. The newly commissioned officers are Anthony M. Adams, 923 West 33d street, and Richard M. Krug, 7359 Aberdeen street, a graduate of Calumet High school.

Anthony M. Adams.

Richard M. Krug.

Upon completioin of the work at the officer candidate school in seacoast artillery at Fort Monroe, Virginia, Norman L. Glozer, technician 4th grade, was commissioned a second lieutenant. He has reported to a new station. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Murphy. He is a 1937 graduate of Harper High school.

Norman L. Glozer.

Several Chicago soldiers who are stationed with the army institute at Madison, Wis., have enrolled in a correspondence course with the institute. Academic credit is awarded for the work, which is sponsored by 78 colleges and universities.

Sergt. Lawrence J. Jaskoviak, son of Mr. and Mrs. Valentine Jaskoviak, 1227 West 104th street, and Sergt. Albert J. Erickson, 4462 South Spaulding avenue, are enrolled in the railroad rate clerk course. Staff Sergt. Edward F. Wawrzyniak, son of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Wawrzyniak, 4516 South Paulina street, is interested in water works and sewage plant operation, and Pvt. Wallace W. Smith, son of Mrs. W. W. Smith, 9930 Winchester avenue, is brushing up on arithmetic.

Graduates of the administrative specialist school of the women's army auxiliary corps at Fort Des Moines, Iowa, are three auxiliaries from the southwest side. They are Marilyn Darr, 10719 Cottage Grove avenue; Wanda V. Jansen, 12206 Sangamon street, and Winifred B. Binnie, 7113 Normal avenue.

Herman A. Gross, son of Mrs. Max A. Gross, Harvey, a graduate of the University of Illinois and Loyola university medical schools, has been promoted to commander in the navy. Commander Gross is now stationed at the naval hospital, San Diego, Cal., where he is entrusted with surgical care of the officer personnel.

For action at Pearl Harbor and the battle of Midway, Coral sea, and the Solomons, he won a citation, which read, in part: "Despite the fact that you were convalescing from a severe operation, immediately upon becoming aware of the attack [on Dec. 7, 1941] you offered your services at the naval hospital, where you requested and received surgical work. You worked in the operating room about 20 hours a day for three days, when you became exhausted. By such devotion to duty without regard for personal danger, and your surgical ability, you very materially aided in the saving of many lives."

Jackson Barracks at New Orleans, La., announces the promotion of Technician 5th Grade John J. Domian, son of Jacob Domian, 4853 South Wood street, to the rank of technician 4th grade. He was inducted into service on Jan. 29, 1942.

Dr. Charles D. Krause, 10442 Artesian avenue, who was commissioned a captain in June, 1941, has reported for duty at the Columbia, S. C., air base. He was assigned to a medium bombardment group as a flight surgeon. Capt. Krause received his basic training at Will Rogers field, Oklahoma; Randolph field, Texas, and Drew field, Florida.

After completion of his elimination training at the naval air station, Glenview, John M. Leonard Jr., 24, son of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Leonard, 7751 Saginaw avenue, was transferred to the naval air station at Jacksonville, Fla., where he recently was commissioned an ensign in the naval reserve. He is a graduate of Mount Carmel High school and attended De Paul university.

Howard P. Kuntzman, 6928 Stewart avenue, a 1939 graduate of Parker High school, has been appointed a cadet-midshipman in the merchant marine cadet corps and has reported to the marine academy at Great Neck, L. I., for instruction in seamanship, lifeboat drill, and naval science.

Marvin E. Péterson, 6522 Harvard avenue, is now a corporal at Fort Bliss, Tex. Edward J. Novak, 5144 South Troy street, has received the same promotion.

A private first class at Camp Joseph T. Robinson, Arkansas, since Feb. 7, 1942, George W. Whitmore, 7921 Wood street, has been promoted to sergeant technician in a training regiment of a replacement center.

Pvt. Walter Lachtara, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Lachtara, 1711 West 51st street, has been advanced to corporal at Camp Wheeler, Georgia.

C. L. HAZZARD OUT TO BEAT ALD. MURPHY

Grover C. Larson Is Third Candidate.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Two Republicans are exerting strenuous efforts to unseat Ald. William T. Murphy of the 17th ward, which has shown decided G. O. P. strength in the last three general elections.

Altho aldermanic elections in Chicago have been technically nonpartisan since 1920, the struggle in the 17th, as in several other wards in the city, is an out and out test of the two major parties' ward organization strength.

The incumbent, who is completing his second term, has the advantage of possession of the seat, but even his stanchest supporters concede that he may be forced into a runoff, which would greatly improve the opposition's chances. Runoffs in the nonpartisan elections are held by the two highest candidates in case neither gets more than half the total vote cast.

Hazzard Making Strong Bid.

There is every indication that Clifford L. Hazzard, a young and vigorous member of the G. O. P. ward organization, will finish No. 2 in the election next month. That means if there is a supplemental election it will be a fight between Hazzard and Ald. Murphy.

Hazzard, 34 years old, was in charge of the finance department of a motor sales company on the south side until the war ended his job. He is married and has a small child. For several years he has been a worker in the ward organization, which is headed by Henry D. Lindblad, a candidate for the G. O. P. nomination for city clerk. Hazzard is now devoting his full time to his campaign.

The third candidate in the field is Grover C. Larson, who is a mover, and who was formerly a member of the regular G. O. P. group. His principal support appears to be coming from a group of workers who broke away from Lindblad's leadership.

City Hall Backs Murphy.

Ald. Murphy, a civil engineer, is young and aggressive, but has recently shared in the general growing unpopularity of the Democratic party, of which he is a member. He has the full backing of the city hall machine, which has shown signs of losing its grip in the 17th since the once badly split Republicans have resumed pulling in the same direction.

An unusual situation developed in the ward last week in connection with the candidacy of August Van Duren, 27 years old, correspondence school law student. Van Duren withdrew just before the Feb. 3 deadline, but later demanded of the Chicago election commissioners that he be reinstated on the ballot, only to be refused. Thus the commission did not find cause to rule on objections against Van Duren's petitions.

Van Duren, who had the support of small independent groups, including We the Mothers, declared that Ald. Murphy had coerced him into withdrawing, and made an eloquent plea for reinstatement, which met with obvious approval of a group of war mothers who accompanied him to the hearing. It was predicted that Van Duren's support will swing to one of the G. O. P. candidates.

Home Ward of Lyle.

Another factor that may work in the Republicans' favor is the fact that the 17th is the home ward of former Judge John H. Lyle, independent candidate for the G. O. P. nomination for mayor. The Lyle candidacy is expected to increase the vote in the mayoral primary. Since the Republicans' big fear is of apathy in the primary, this circumstance is hailed by them as an asset.

In the 11th ward opposition to Ald. Hugh B. Connelly all but disappeared last week when the election commissioners sustained objections to the petitions of Mrs. Alice Yonik, woman's editor of a foreign language newspaper. Ald. Connelly's only opponent now is John F. Wall.

In the 14th ward Clarence P. Wagner, assistant to Probate Judge John F. O'Connell, is regarded as a certain successor to Ald. James J. McDermott, who was elected to the board of tax appeals last November. Wagner, president of the regular Democratic ward organization, is known as an able and vigorous leader. It is his first try for elective office. Observers said his three opponents, Thomas T. Tomasczkiewicz, Joseph Palka, and Jozef J. Pash together probably cannot muster enough votes to force him into a runoff.

Women of Moose to Hold Benefit Party Thursday

The south side chapter, Women of the Moose, will hold a card party Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Helen Seamon, 1747 West 59th street. Proceeds will be used to enter a student in the nurses' training course at Englewood hospital.

Diocesan Missionary to Conduct Services.

Nearly a fourth of the 4,000 members of the Chicago police branch of St. Jude's league will receive communion next Sunday morning during 9 o'clock mass, at the Shrine of St. Jude, 3208 East 91st street. The Rev. W. E. Croarkin, diocesan misisonary, who is preaching at solemn novena services daily this week at the shrine, will conduct the league's rites.

Barry Named President.

New officers of the police branch, elected last week, will be installed at the 11th anniversary meeting Feb. 25. With one or two exceptions all are south or southwest side residents.

Andrew Barry, supervising captain of the 3d and 4th police divisions, was elected president of the league. John McCann was made treasurer, William Balswick was chosen recording secretary, and William J. Smith, financial secretary.

Stege Honorary Chief.

New vice presidents are Raymond Crane, Kyran Phelan, Harry O'Donnell, Joseph Carmody, James J. Doody, Richard Coyne, Thomas Duffy, Patrick Bonner, Joseph E. Ragen, Raymond J. Kenny, Walter Healy, John J. Flaherty, Richard Gill, John Horan, Thomas Harrison, James Doyle, and Bart J. Moran.

The Rev. Joseph M. Puigvi, C. M. F., is spiritual director of the shrine, which is conducted by the Claretian Fathers. John P. Stege, retired police captain, is honorary president of the league.

Centenarians Mark Birthdays

MRS. WILHELMINA PLAHM.

2 LITTLE LADIES PASS BIRTHDAYS: ONE 100; OTHER 112

For her 100th birthday party last week, Mrs. Wilhelmina Plahm of Blue Island wore a black and white print dress with an orchid pinned to the shoulder. And Mrs. Sarah Jane Swanson, 9855 Exchange avenue, on the occasion of her 112th birthday, also last week, was attired in a black dress with a frilly white collar, and a corsage of roses.

Both of the little ladies are fortunate in having good enough eyesight to be constant readers. Mrs. Swanson has more choice of reading material, however, for Mrs. Plahm reads and speaks only German.

Mrs. Swanson, whose maiden name was Griswold, was born in Chillicothe, O., the daughter of natives of New York state. A few years ago, when she was only 100, she could tell her family about the Indians around the family cabin, about making candles, cooking at a fireplace, spinning cloth. She could describe the family's trip in a covered wagon from Ohio west.

But she has forgotten those things now. She likes to sit in her big chair by the window and knit socks. She has outlived two husbands and six of her 11 children. Her descendants include six generations.

Mrs. Plahm makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. Augusta Trapp, 2823 Broadway, Blue Island. She likes to help with the housework, and do mending. She was born in Germany in a town on the Baltic sea. She and her husband, William, and seven children came to this country in 1888. Her husband died in 1911. Besides Mrs. Trapp, she has four sons—Fred, Charles, Otto, and William, 15 grandchildren, and 15 great-grandchildren.

Couples He Married Will Be Special Guests.

Special guests will be the couples wh ohave been married by Dr. De Lacy during his 33 year pastorate at Thoburn church. The pastor also will hold a baptismal for several children.

War Veteran and Son.

Raymond Glover, World War I. veteran, soloist and organist, will sing at the family service and will be accompanied by his son, Pvt. Robert Glover, organist, who is on furlough from his post as chaplain's assistant at Camp Wolters, Tex. An instrumental trio and a ladies' quartet will be on the program. Wilbur R. Groebe will give the Scripture reading, and A. H. Landis will conduct a prayer.

The in-laws' quartet and octet will be a special feature of the evening service. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur F. Miller and their daughter, Marilyn, and her husband, John George Schafer, are members of the in-laws' octet, together with Mr. and Mrs. Archer Ballantine, and their son, Robert, and his wife, the former Jane Quantick.

Pastor's Son in Quartet.

The in-laws' quartet includes Dr. De Lacy's son, Edward, and his wife, Ethel Emmons De Lacy, and the younger Mrs. De Lacy's brother, Benjamin Emmons Jr., and his wife, Elsie Hamel Emmons.

Mr. and Mrs. George Vander Weyden and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis G. Groebe are the four members of the reception committee, and the ushers will include Dr. D. Waldo Thomas, George M. Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence E. Zimmerman, C. N. Bergstrom, Donald L. Evans, H. E. Gregory, Bernard Reiners, and Mrs. H. E. Gregory.

AIR APPEALS NET FLOOD OF KEYS, KNIVES, PENNIES

Donations of Listeners Boost Salvage.

Pictures of the headliners of the Chicago Theater of the Air, broadcasting operettas over W-G-N-Mutual at 8 p. m. Saturdays, are presented in the "Album of the Air" in today's picture section of the Tribune. Photos of the stars of the Abbott and Costello show also are included on the page.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Fulton Lewis Jr., W-G-N Mutual Washington commentator, started something when he broadcast several appeals to listeners to send in their old keys so that copper and nickel may be extracted from them for war uses.

He got more than 5,000,000 keys [more than 46 tons] and a lot of assorted other items including burglar kits, old fashioned watches, brass knuckles, counterfeit coins, and three fur coats from a lady in Maine who thought they might be used by soldiers in Arctic climes.

Starts Flood of Pennies.

Then Ralph Edwards, who conducts Truth or Consequences on NBC, started a flood of pennies addressed to Mrs. Dennis Mullane of Staten Island. "Consequence" listeners were asked to send in a penny to Mrs. Mullane for her marine son's war bonds. The letters, some 250,000 of them, are averaging about three cents each. The campaign has reacted as a "consequence" on Edwards himself. The Mullane home overflowed with mail so Edwards had to put a staff of 15 workers to opening the letters. Some $7,000 has already been gathered for war bonds thru this stunt. And still the letters pour in.

Capt. Midnight of the Blue network has launched a nation-wide radio campaign titled "Save a Life with a Knife." The objective is to collect knives for American soldiers, marines, and navy men in the South Pacific.

Knives Have Trading Value.

Hunting knives, large sized pocket knives and Boy Scout knives are wanted. The blades should be over four but not more than eight inches long. The knives are valuable not only in combat but for their "trading" value with natives. Each contributor is being asked to put his name on a tag and tie it to the knife so that the soldier who receives it will know who sent it. The knives should be sent directly to Maj. Gen. B. M. Giles, commanding general, Fourth Air Force, San Francisco, Cal.

Radio Valentine

Norma Jean Ross is featured on the Moose Fireside Party on W-G-N-Mutual at 5:30 p. m. Sundays and on NBC's Ma Perkins at 2:15 weekdays.

PRESENT 'FAUST' ON AIR THEATER NEXT SATURDAY

Marion Claire, soprano prima donna of the Chicago Theater of the Air, and Eugene Conley, lyric tenor of the San Carlo Opera company, will be starred in a streamlined version of the opera "Faust" on W-G-N, W59C, and the Mutual network at 8 p. m. Saturday.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, will speak.

Miss Claire will be cast in the singing rôle of Marguerite while the speaking lines will be taken by Laurette Fillbrandt, who has been engaged to portray all dramatic rôles for characters sung by Miss Claire.

Miss Fillbrandt has appeared on many leading network programs.

Mr. Conley will sing the rôle of Dr. Faust while Bret Morrison will take the speaking lines for the part. The radio adaptation of the opera was prepared by Jack La Frandre, writer-director of the Saturday night series. Musical background will be supplied by the W-G-N symphony orchestra under the direction of Henry Weber and by the chorus led by Robert Trendler.

W-G-N Men Join Army.

Two more members of the W-G-N staff have left for training as army aviation cadets. They are Charles Cormier, accountant and Joseph Piatkiewicz.

ALL-AMERICAN MUSIC SCHEDULED BY TOSCANINI

Ferde Grofe's "Grand Canyon Suite" will be the highlight of today's all-American symphony program to be presented by the NBC Symphony orchestra at 4 p. m. over WMAQ-NBC. This concert will be Arturo Toscanini's final appearance with the orchestra until April 4.

The work is in five parts: "Sunrise," "The Painted Desert," "On the Trail," "Sunset," and "Cloudburst." Composer Grofe will attend the broadcast.

Anne Brown Will Sing on Kostelanetz Show

Anne Brown, Negro soprano, and Sergt. Eugene List, pianist, will be guests on Andre Kostelanetz' program at 3:30 p. m. today over WBBM-CBS. Miss Brown will offer "Summertime." Sergt. List will play the C-sharp minor "Waltz" by Chopin. Kostelanetz will conduct the orchestra in the playing of Porter's "I Concentrate on You" and Adams' "There Are Such Things."
